PREFACE.

IN the following Essay I have endeavoured to call attention to some points in the history of the English Bible which have been strangely neglected. The history of our Bible is indeed a type of the history of our Church, and both histories have suffered the same fate. The writers who have laboured most successfully upon them have in the main confined themselves to outward facts without tracing the facts back to their ultimate sources, or noticing the variety of elements which go to form the final result. As far as I know no systematic inquiry into the internal history of our Authorised Version has yet been made, and still no problem can offer greater scope for fruitful research. To solve such a problem completely would be a work of enormous labour, and I have been forced to content myself with indicating some salient points in the solution, in the hope that others may correct and supplement the conclusions which I have obtained. It is at least something to know generally to what extent Tindale and Coverdale made use of earlier versions, and to be able to refer to their sources most of the characteristic readings of Matthew's New Testament and of the Great Bibles<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps I may be allowed to mention one or two collations which would certainly furnish some valuable results.

(1) A collation of the Grenville Fragment with the smaller Tindale's Testament of 1525.

(2) A collation of Tindale's Testaments of 1534 and 1535 with the New Testament in Matthew's Bible of 1537.

(3) A collation of Tindale's Pentateuchs of 1530 and 1534 with Matthew's Bible 1537, for which Mr Ofor's MSS. in the British Museum would be available as a verification (see p. 208, n.).

(4) A collation of numerous select passages in the Great Bibles of 1539,

Even in the external history of our Bible much remains to be done. It seems scarcely credible that adequate inquiry will not shew from what presses Tindale's New Testament of 1535<sup>1</sup>, Coverdale's Bible of 1535 and Matthew's Bible of 1537 proceeded. And it is impossible not to hope that Mr Brewer's researches may yet bring to light new documents illustrating the vacillating policy of Henry VIII. as to the circulation of the vernacular Scriptures.

It does not fall within my province to criticise other histories. I have used Mr Anderson's Annals of the English Bible, and the Historical Account<sup>2</sup> prefixed to Bagster's Hexapla (to which Mr Anderson does scant justice) with the greatest profit, and I desire to express generally my obligations to both essays. If I differ from them silently on any points I do so purposely, and in some cases I have even felt obliged to point out errors in them which were likely to mislead.

Absolute accuracy in an inquiry of so wide a range seems to be impossible, and everyone who is conscious of his own manifold mistakes would gladly leave the mistakes of others unnoticed; but when writers like Mr Hallam and Mr Froude misrepresent every significant feature in an important episode of literary history, it seems necessary to raise some protest. Their names are able to give authority to fictions, if the fictions are unchallenged<sup>3</sup>.....

April, 1540, and November, 1540, with a view to ascertaining how far the reaction in the last text extends, and whether it can be traced to any principle.

(5) A collation of the New Testaments of the Bishops' Bibles of 1568 and 1572.

<sup>2</sup> The Historical Account appears in two forms. That which I have used was drawn up (I am informed) by Dr S. P. Tregelles. In the later issue of the Hexapla this independent and valuable narrative was replaced by another written (it is said) by Mr Anderson, which I have not consulted. 1872. [It was written not by Mr Anderson, but by Dr John Stoughton.—W. A. W.]

<sup>3</sup> One example of this contagiousness of error, which is a fair specimen of a very large class, falls under my notice as these sheets are passing through the press. 'Tindale,' writes Mr Smiles, 'unable to get his New Testament

No apology, I trust, will be needed for the adoption of our ordinary orthography in quotations from the early versions; and the extreme difficulty of revising proofs by the help of distant libraries must be pleaded as an excuse for more serious errors.

What I have done is for the most part tentative and incomplete, and many points in the history of the Bible are left wholly unnoticed. If my leisure would have allowed I should have been glad to examine the changes in the headings of the chapters and the marginal references, both before and after 1611, for their history involves many details of great interest. One question however in connexion with the Authorised Version I have purposely neglected. It seemed useless to discuss its revision. The revision of the original texts must precede the revision of the translation, and the time for this, even in the New Testament, has not yet fully come<sup>1</sup>.

But however painful the sense of incompleteness and inaccuracy in such an essay as this must be, it has this advantage, that it bears witness almost on every page to

'printed in England, where its perusal was forbidden [?], had the first edition 'printed at Antwerp in 1526...A complete edition of the English Bible, 'translated partly by Tindale and partly by Coverdale, was printed at 'Hamburgh in 1535; and a second edition, edited by John Rogers, under 'the name of Thomas Matthew, was printed at Marlborow in Hesse in '1537...Cranmer's Bible, so called because revised by Cranmer, was published in 1539-40.' Huguenots, p. 15, and note. London, 1867. Neither the first nor the second edition of Tindale's New Testament was printed at Antwerp. The Bible of 1535 was not partly translated by Tindale; and no competent bibliographer at present assigns it to the Hamburgh press. Matthew's Bible was in no sense a second edition of Coverdale's, of which, indeed, two editions were published in 1537, and the place where it was printed is as yet uncertain. 'Cranmer's Bible' was not revised by Cranmer, and the editions of 1539 and 1540 are quite distinct. With that of 1539 Cranmer had nothing to do till after it was printed. Thus every statement in the quotation is incorrect. Lewis's History has, I fear, much to answer for; but it is unpardonable to use it without verification.

<sup>1</sup> [The experience of the work of New Testament Revision during the last two years has shewn me that I was wrong in this opinion. Whatever may be the merits of the Revised Version it can be said confidently that, in no parallel case have the readings of the original text to be translated been discussed and determined with equal care, thoroughness and candour. 1872.]

the kindness of friends. It would have been far more imperfect than it is if I had not been allowed every facility for using the magnificent collections of Bibles in the British Museum, the University Library at Cambridge, and the Baptist College at Bristol. For this privilege and for similar acts of courtesy my warmest thanks are due to the Rev. H. O. Coxe, Bodley's Librarian at Oxford, Mr Bradshaw, University Librarian at Cambridge, Mr Bullen, of the British Museum, the Rev. Dr Gotch, Principal of the Baptist College, Bristol, Mr Aldis Wright, Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge, Mr Francis Fry, Cotham, Bristol, and the late Rev. Dr Milman, Dean of St Paul's.

NOTICE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

THE kindness of many friends has enabled me to issue this second edition of the History of the English Bible with considerable additions in different sections, but the book is substantially unchanged. Later researches have fully established the general results which I indicated as to the composite character of our present Authorised Version; and the labours of the New Revision have brought into clearer relief the merits and defects of the Scholars who successively fulfilled the office of Revisers in earlier times. Even now perhaps full justice has not been done to the exquisite delicacy of Coverdale and the stern fidelity of the Rhemists. But, not to dwell on the individual characteristics of former Revisers, it may fairly be said that they have marked a general method of procedure which those who follow them are not likely to abandon. The changes in our Authorised Version which are still necessary are due for the most part to the claims of riper scholarship and more searching criticism, and not to any altered conception of the style and character most appropriate to a popular Version of the Holy Scriptures. That question most happily has been settled for ever.

One most remarkable discovery which has been made lately as to the early editions of the English Testament requires to be brought into special notice. Mr F. Fry has found the text of 'Tindale 1535' in an edition dated 1534 (see p. 161, n.). It is possible, therefore, that the misspelt copies may belong to a pirated reprint of Tindale's own work.

The admirable biography of Tindale by the Rev. R. Demaus appeared after my early sheets were printed off; but I owe to the kindness of the author several criticisms and corrections of which I have gladly availed myself. In expressing the hope that he will be encouraged to continue his exhaustive labours upon the great leaders of our Reformation, I say only what all must feel who have had occasion to profit by his researches.

To Mr F. Fry and Professor Moulton my warmest thanks are due. Both placed at my disposal extensive collections, which I have used only partially, yet, as I hope, in such a manner as to shew how highly I value the generosity which allowed me to gather the fruits of long and unattractive work<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> As this last sheet is passing through the press I have noticed a very remarkable detail in the History of the English Bible, which seems to call for further investigation. In the Library of the House of Lords there is a draft of 'An Act for reducing of diversities of Bibles now extant in the English tongue to one settled Vulgar translated from the original.' The draft is not dated, but is referred to the reign of Elizabeth, and is certainly after 1560 from internal evidence. 'Great errors,' it is recited, 'arise and papistry and atheism increase from the variety of translations of Bibles, while many desire an authorised translation, which the Lords spiritual could complete had they power to compel assistance from students of the Universities. The Lords spiritual or any six of them (of whom the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being is to be one) may assemble, treat, and deal touching the accomplishment of the work, and may call for the assistance of students of either University, and pay them out of moneys to be levied on such cathedral churches or colleges as shall be thought requisite, and any temporal person may give gift or legacy for furtherance of the work.' I owe this abstract of the draft to the kindness of Mr R. W. Monro. [Mr Edmund Gosse, Librarian to the House of Lords, informs me that the MS. is now preserved in the Victoria Tower. It appears to have been a form for the first reading which was never proceeded with.—W. A. W.]

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION.

AT the end of the year 1900, when Bishop Westcott was in Cambridge, I asked him why he did not bring out a new edition of his History of the English Bible, which had been long out of print. He explained that his own engagements left him no time for such a work, and other arrangements he had hoped to make had not been carried out, but he said, 'If you will do it, I will give you my materials.' After some consideration I consented, and on January 24, 1901, the Bishop wrote, 'It will be a very great pleasure to me if you undertake a new edition of the History of the English Bible. A conversation with you after a lecture which I gave at Cambridge on the question led me to write it. What then can be more appropriate than that you should complete it?'

This to the best of my ability I have endeavoured to do. The plan of the work is unchanged. Every statement and every quotation have been verified. Such corrections as were necessary have been silently made, and all additions are placed in the notes in square brackets, sometimes for the sake of clearness with my own initials attached. The corrections, however, have been not merely of errors of the press or slips of the pen, but involve a rectification of the manner of reference to authorities. In estimating, for instance, the influence of Luther upon Tindale it is useless to quote the modern editions. Luther's New Testament as contained in his Bible of 1534 could have had no influence upon Tindale's version of 1525, and Luther's final edition of 1541 could not have affected Tindale's of 1534 and 1535. In like manner, Tindale in 1525 could only have known of the New Testament of Erasmus as it appeared in the first three editions of 1516, 1519, and 1522, and it was not till 1534 that he could have used the edition of 1527. Similar remarks apply to Coverdale. There is no doubt that the translation of the New Testament in the Genevan Bible of 1560 was affected by Beza's Latin Version, but this could only have been as it appeared in 1556 and 1559. The edition of Beza published in 1565 may have been used for the Bishops' Bible of 1568, and the Latin renderings in the subsequent issues of 1575, 1576, 1582, 1585, 1589, and 1598 could have been consulted by the translators of the Authorised Version, but as the renderings vary it is necessary to specify the edition in which they first appear. In the previous editions of this History it seems that the important fact of these variations was not sufficiently recognized, and it has been my endeavour to reduce the method of reference to these authorities to a system more consistent with chronology. In the previous editions also the spelling of the English quotations is modernized, but though such a change may be tolerable in a merely popular book I could not regard it as appropriate to the work of a scholar of Bishop Westcott's reputation, and I have therefore in most instances restored the ancient forms, only regretting that I have not done so more completely. This change will cause no difficulty to intelligent readers, while it will add an interest to the quotations themselves.

The additions, such as the notes on the Tindale New Testament of 1536 (p. 49), on the printing of the Coverdale Bible (p. 57), on the influence of the French translations on Matthew (p. 170), on the editions of 1549 (p. 73), on Tindale's connexion with the translation of the historical books in Matthew's Bible (p. 172), on the marginal notes in Matthew (Appendix XI.), and others, explain themselves. Appendix IX., on the revision of the Authorised Version, has been expanded, and Appendices XII. and XIII. have been added.

Since the last edition of this work in 1872 there have appeared other books on the same subject which may be consulted with advantage. Among these are The English Bible by Dr John Eadie (1876), The History of the English Bible by Dr W. F. Moulton (1878), Our English Bible by Dr Stoughton, The Bibles of England by Dr A. Edgar (1889), English Versions of the Bible by Dr Mombert (1890), and The Evolution of the English Bible by Mr H. W. Hoare (1901). More recently Dr Lupton has contributed an extremely valuable article on the English Versions to the supplementary volume of Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, though he has unfortunately been led into error by mistaking the 1569 edition of the Great Bible for the Bishops' Bible in 4to of the same date.

I may take the opportunity of adding to what I have said (p. 19, note 2) of a Bible which in 1480 was in the possession of Edward the Fourth. Among the King's Privy Purse Expenses for that year is an item, 'For 'binding, gilding and dressing of a booke called the Bible 'xvjs,' and I have said that there is nothing to shew that this was an English Bible. Nor is there in this entry; but later in the same MS. (Harl. 4780) there is an inventory of the books belonging to the King at Richmond, and we find among them 'The Bible, in englissh,' so that no doubt there was a copy of the Wycliffite Version in the Royal Library.

With regard to the different title-pages of Coverdale's Bible of 1535 I have not been able to satisfy myself, owing to the uncertainty introduced by the so-called facsimiles. There are undoubtedly three title-pages which are genuine: one (in German type) in the Library of the Earl of Leicester at Holkham, with a list of the books on the reverse: one (English type) in the possession of the Marquess of Northampton: and one (English type) in the University Library, Cambridge, which has on the reverse the prayer here printed at p. 66. In one of the two copies in the British Museum there is a made-up title, partly genuine, but completed in facsimile by Harris from the title-page of the Bible printed for Berthelet by Petit and Redman in 1540. The other Museum copy, which is in the Grenville Library, has a facsimile title, resembling but differing from that in the Holkham copy, the original of which I have been unable to trace. Mr Fry had a facsimile made from the Holkham title, but without the list of books on the reverse. It is difficult therefore to place implicit confidence in facsimiles.

In conclusion I have to express my sincere thanks to all who have assisted me in this work: to His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury for his kindness in allowing me to have a transcript made of the interesting manuscript in Lambeth Palace Library which is printed in Appendix XII.; to Dr Ginsburg for giving me free access to his fine collection of Bibles, which is especially rich in copies of Luther's and the Zürich Versions; to the officers of the British Museum for many courtesies and much assistance; to Mr H. F. Moule, to whom is largely due the excellent Catalogue of Bibles in the Library of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and to whom I am indebted for valuable suggestions; to the Librarian of the John Rylands Library, Manchester, for the readiness with which he has supplied me with information from the rich collection under his charge; to Mr Charles Sayle, of the University Library, Cambridge, for constant help; to Mr Cowley, of the Bodleian; to the Rev. Prebendary Maddison, Librarian of the Chapter Library, Lincoln, and to others who have materially lightened my labours.

INTRODUCTION.

THEN the boy sprang up from his knees, and ran,
Stung by the splendour of a sudden thought,
And fetched the seventh plate of graven lead
Out of the secret chamber, found a place,
Pressing with finger on the deeper dints,
And spoke, as 'twere his mouth proclaiming first,
'I am the Resurrection and the Life.

Whereat he opened his eyes wide at once,
And sat up of himself, and looked at us;
And thenceforth nobody pronounced a word:
Only, outside, the Bactrian cried his cry
Like the lone desert-bird that wears the ruff,
As signal he were safe, from time to time.

INTRODUCTION.

THERE is a famous saying, which dates from the times of persecution, that 'the blood of Martyrs is the seed of the 'Church.' It may be added in the like spirit that the voice of Holy Scripture is the spring and measure of individual faith. Both statements require to be modified in their application; but it remains generally true that the society which is founded by human devotion and labour, is quickened in its several members by the influence of the Word. So it is that the history of the vernacular Scriptures is in a great measure the history of personal faith. A people which is without a Bible in its mother tongue, or is restrained from using it, or wilfully neglects it, is also imperfect, or degenerate, or lifeless in its apprehension of Christian Truth, and proportionately bereft of the strength which flows from a living Creed.

In the first ages of the Church the translation of the Scriptures followed immediately on the introduction of Christianity to a nation of a new language. When the Gospel spread eastwards, a Syriac translation of the New Testament was one of the first monuments of its power. When it spread westwards, a Latin version preceded, as far as we know, all other literary efforts of the African Church. Ulfilas, the second bishop of the Goths, gave them the Scriptures in their own language. Miesrob, the framer of the Armenian alphabet, was the translator of the Armenian Bible; and the Slavonic version was due in part at least to the two brothers, Cyrillus and Methodius, who first reduced the Slavonic dialect to writing. The history of the Æthiopic and Egyptian Scriptures is probably similar, though it is more obscure; and it is most significant, that of these ancient versions, the greater part survive substantially the same in the public services of the nations which occupy the places of those for whom they were originally composed.

The original versions of Holy Scripture remain, but all else is changed. If we fix our eyes on the west only, we see the new-won empire of the Church desolated almost as soon as it was gained, by successive hordes of barbarian invaders, out of whom she was destined in the Providence of God to shape the forefathers of modern Europe. In less than ten years after Jerome completed his version of the Old Testament from the Hebrew (A.D. 400—404), Alaric took Rome (A.D. 410). Thenceforward a fresh work was to be achieved by Christianity, and by a new method. For a time the normal processes of Christianity were in abeyance: organization prevailed over faith. These new races were to be disciplined by act before they could be taught by the simple word. Thus the task of the translation of Scripture among the northern nations was suspended. The Latin Vulgate sufficed for the teachers, and they ministered to their congregations such lessons from it as they could receive.

But as soon as society was again settled, the old instinct asserted itself, and first, which is a just cause of pride, in our own island. As early as the eighth century, the Psalms were rendered into Anglo-Saxon; and about the same time, Bede, during his last illness, translated the Gospel of St John.

The narrative of the completion of this work is given by an eye-witness, Cuthbert, a scholar of Bede, in a letter to a fellow-scholar, and is in itself so beautiful a picture of the early monastic life, that it may be quoted in abstract. Bede had been ill for some weeks. About Easter (A.D. 735), he felt that his end was approaching, and looked forward to it with ceaseless gratitude, 'rejoicing that he was counted 'worthy thus to suffer.' He quoted much from Holy Scripture; and one fragment of Saxon poetry, which he recited and may have composed, was taken down by Cuthbert<sup>1</sup>. But he was chiefly busy with two English translations of Excerpts from Isidore, and of the Gospel of St John. Ascension-day drew near. His illness increased, but he only laboured the more diligently. On the Wednesday, his scribe told him that one chapter alone remained, but feared that it might be painful to him to dictate. 'It is 'easy,' Bede replied, 'take your pen and write quickly.' The work was continued for some time. Then Bede directed Cuthbert to fetch his little treasures from his casket (capsella), 'pepper, scarves (oraria) and incense,' that he might distribute them among his friends. And so he passed the remainder of the day till evening in holy and cheerful conversation. His boy-scribe at last found an opportunity to remind him, with pious importunity, of his unfinished task: 'One sentence, dear master, still remains 'unwritten.' 'Write quickly,' he answered. The boy soon said, 'It is completed now.' 'Well,' Bede replied, 'thou hast said the truth: all is ended. Take my head 'in thy hands, I would sit in the holy place in which 'I was wont to pray, that so sitting I may call upon 'my Father.' Thereupon, resting upon the floor of his cell, he chanted the Gloria, and his soul immediately passed away, while the name of the Holy Spirit was on his lips<sup>2</sup>.

In the next century Alfred prefixed to his laws a translation of the Ten Commandments, and a few other fragments from the book of Exodus; and is said to have been engaged on a version of the Psalms at the time of his death (A.D. 901). In the tenth century, or a little later, the four Gospels were translated apparently for public use; and two interlinear translations, probably of an earlier date, into other English dialects, are preserved in Latin Manuscripts, which shew at least individual zeal<sup>1</sup>. Of the Old Testament, the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges, Esther, and parts of other books were translated about the tenth century. All these translations, with the possible exception of Bede's<sup>2</sup>, were only secondary translations from the Latin; but none the less they reveal the thoughts with which men's hearts were stirred. And there was no hindrance to their execution. On the contrary, the number of the labourers who took part in the work shews that it was of wide popularity.

'search out before his going hence what 'to his spirit of good or of evil after 'his death hence will be judged.'

But the effort was as yet premature. England had still to receive a new element of her future strength; and for her the time of discipline was not over. The Norman invasion, which brought with it the fruits of Romanic thought and culture, checked for a while the spontaneous development of religious life. Nevertheless fragmentary translations of Scripture into Norman-French shew that the Bible was popularly studied, and in the end the nation was completing an edition of the four Gospels, which will supply the critical introduction in which Mr Hardwick's work is wholly deficient. [Professor Skeat edited St Mark in 1871, St Luke in 1874, St John in 1878, and re-edited St Matthew in 1887. The MSS. are described in the Preface to the Gospel of St Mark.]

richer by the delay<sup>1</sup>. Nor may it be forgotten even in this relation that the insularity of the people furthered its characteristic growth; for while it remained outside the Roman Empire yet it shared in the spiritual strength which came at that time from an intimate union with the Roman See. Thus the nation preserved throughout its progress the features of its peculiar constitution, and at the same time was brought within the influence of Catholic discipline and sympathy. It would be out of place to follow out here the action and reaction of these special and general powers upon the English type of mediæval Christianity; but the recognition of their simultaneous working is necessary for the understanding of the history of the English Bible. For three centuries they acted with various and beneficent results. At length in the 14th century the preparatory work of the Papacy was ended and its dissolution commenced. The many nations and the many churches began from that time to define their separate peculiarities and functions. The time of maturity was now ready to follow on the time of tutelage: a free development was sufficiently prepared by a long discipline<sup>2</sup>.

It is then at this point that the history of the English Bible properly commences, a history which is absolutely unique in its course and in its issue. And this history is twofold. There is the external history of the different

The latter accompanies what is known as Jerome's Hebrew Version, and was edited in 1876 by M. Francisque Michel, who had previously (1860) edited another version from a MS. in the Bodleian Library. versions, as to when and by whom and under what circumstances they were made ; and there is the internal history which deals with their relation to other texts, with their filiation one on another, and with the principles by which they have been successively modified. The external history is a stirring record of faithful and victorious courage : the internal history is not less remarkable from the enduring witness which it bears to that noble catholicity which is the glory of the English Church.

CHAPTER I.

THE MANUSCRIPT BIBLE.

THE external history of the English Bible may be divided into two periods of not very unequal length, the first extending from the beginning of Wycliffe's labours to the publication of Tindale's New Testament in 1525, the second from that date to the completion of our present received version in 1611. The first of these will be the subject of the present chapter.

It has been already said that the 14th century was the first stage in the dissolution of the mediæval Church. Its character was marked by the corruption of the higher clergy, and the growth of independence in the masses of the people. Both facts favoured an appeal from custom and tradition to the written and unchanging Word. Moreover the last great progressive effort for the restoration of the Church—the establishment of the mendicant orders—had failed, but not before the people had been roused by the appeals which were addressed to them. Touched by a feeling of anxious suspense men turned with intense longing to the Bible, and in the first instance naturally to the Psalter, which has been in every age the fresh spring of hope in times of trial. Of this no less than three English versions in prose, dating from the first half of the 14th century, have been preserved<sup>1</sup>. But the work of translation did not long stop here. The years from 1345 to 1349 were full of calamities—pestilence and famine and war—which seemed to men already deeply stirred by the sight of spiritual evils to portend the end of the world. Other commotions followed not long afterwards which shewed the widespread disorganization of society. In France there was the terrible rising of the Jacquerie (1358); in Italy the momentary triumph and fall of Rienzi (1347—1354); a great schism (1378—1417) divided the forces of the Church; and Adrianople became (1360) the capital of a Turkish Empire in Europe built on the ruins of a Christian power.

In the meantime the general belief that some awful crisis was at hand found expression in England in the Tract on the Last Age of the Church (1356), which has been commonly though wrongly attributed to Wycliffe; and Wycliffe himself must have been influenced by a like expectation when he chose the Apocalypse as the subject of his first labours on the Bible. His translation of the Apocalypse was soon followed by a translation of the Gospels with a commentary, and at a later time by versions of the remaining books of the New Testament with a fresh rendering of the Apocalypse, so that a complete English New Testament was finished about 1380. To this a version of the Old Testament was soon added, which appears to have been undertaken by a friend of Wycliffe's, Nicholas de Hereford. The original manuscript of Nicholas is still preserved in the Bodleian, and offers a curious memorial of his fortunes. For having incurred the displeasure of his superiors, he was cited to appear in London in 1382, to answer for his opinions. He was excommunicated, and mentary. This was edited in 1884 by the Rev. H. R. Bramley, and in 1895-6 other treatises by Rolle were published by C. Horstman. In 1891 Dr Karl Bülbring edited for the Early English Text Society The Earliest Complete English Psalter in the West Midland Dialect from two 14th cent.

MSS. (Brit. Mus. Add. 17376, and Trinity College, Dublin, MS. A. 4. 4), and in 1904 Miss Paues published A Fourteenth Century English Biblical Version, containing portions of the New Testament, from 14th cent. MSS.]

left England shortly afterward, breaking off his translation in the middle of Baruch (iii. 20), where the manuscript ends abruptly. The work was afterwards completed, as it is supposed, by Wycliffe, who thus before he died in 1384 had the joy of seeing his hope fulfilled and the Scriptures circulated in various forms among his countrymen.

Like the earlier Saxon translations, Wycliffe's translation was made from the Latin Vulgate, and from the text commonly current in the 14th century, which was far from pure. It was also so exactly literal that in many places the meaning was obscure. The followers of Wycliffe were not blind to these defects, and within a few years after his death a complete revision of the Bible was undertaken by John Purvey, who had already become notorious for his opinions, and had shared in the disgrace of Nicholas de Hereford<sup>1</sup>.

Purvey has left, in a general Prologue, an interesting account of the method on which he proceeded in his revision, which is marked by singular sagacity and judgment. He had, as will be seen, clear conceptions of the duties of the critic and of the translator, and the comparison of his work with Wycliffe's shews that he was not unable to carry out the design which he formed. After enumerating several obvious motives for undertaking his task, he continues: 'For these resons and othere, with comune charite to saue alle men in oure rewme, whiche God wole haue sauid, a symple creature [so he calls himself] hath translatid the bible out of Latyn into English. First, this symple creature hadde myche trauaile, with diuerse felawis and helperis, to gedere manie elde biblis, and othere doctouris, and comune glosis, and to make oo Latyn bible sumdel [somewhat] trewe<sup>2</sup>; and thanne to v. 6, x. 1, &c.

<sup>2</sup> The collation of manuscripts must have been very partial and scanty. Thus in 1 John ii. 14 all the copies of Purvey's translation read 'brithren,' i.e. fratres for patres, a blunder of which I can find no trace in Bentley's

<sup>1</sup> Prologue, c. xv. p. 57. Mr Froude's statement (which is retained in his last edition, 1870) that the second version, based upon Wycliffe's, was 'tinted more strongly with the 'peculiar opinions of the Lollards,' is, as far as I have compared the two, wholly without foundation. The differences are exactly those which the Prologue describes. It need not be said that it was not made 'at the 'beginning of the fifteenth century',

 (History of England, III. p. 77). [The Lollard opinions are in Purvey's Pro-

placed the original version, and in spite of its stern proscription in a convocation in 1408 under the influence of Archbishop Arundel<sup>1</sup>, it was widely circulated through all classes till it was at last superseded by the printed versions of the 16th century<sup>2</sup>.

But this first triumph of the English Bible was not won without a perilous struggle. One or two contemporary notices of the state of feeling over which it was achieved and of that again out of which it sprung are of deep interest. Thus a scholar writes when asked to teach the ignorant the contents of the Gospel: 'Brother, I knowe wel that I am holde by Crystis lawe to parforme thyn axinge, bote natheles we beth now so fer yfallen away fram Cristis lawe, that if Y wolde answeere to thyn axingus I moste in cas vnderfonge the deth; and thu wost wel, that a man is yholden to kepe his lyf as longe as he may<sup>3</sup>.' Many think it amiss, says Wycliffe, 'that men schulden knowe Cristus lyfe, for thenne prestus schullen schome of hyre lyues, and specyaly these hye prestus, and

<sup>2</sup> The translation included all the Apocryphal Books except 2 Esdras. The Epistle to the Laodiceans was not included in Wycliffe's or Purvey's translation, but was added afterwards in some MSS. The texts of the original translation and of the revision are generally uniform.

It is scarcely necessary to add that Sir T. More's statement that 'the Holy Bible was translated [into English] long before Wycliffe's days' is not supported by the least independent evidence. He may have seen a MS. of Wycliffe's version, and (like Lambert, see p. 24) have miscalculated the date. Bp. Bonner (for instance) had a copy [now at Lambeth], and there was a fine one at the Charterhouse [now in the Bodleian]. See p. 19. Compare Tindale's Answer to More, III. p. 168 (Parker Soc. ed.). [In Dec. 1868 Henry Bradshaw wrote to Dr Westcott: 'There is one thing that I could wish you had mentioned in your first chapter, for though I have never seen it remarked anywhere, it has long struck me as being very remarkable; I mean the apparent fact that the English Wycliffite version seems so much to have superseded the Latin. I have examined scores of English copies of Latin Bibles, and I have never seen a XVth century copy, never a copy which could be put later in execution than the completion of the English version. I dare say there are such copies, but I don't think my experience is likely to be exceptional, and as such it is a thing worth noting in the history of the English Bible, as showing how little effect the proscription had.']

'for they reuersen Crist bothe in worde and in dede. Yet there was a vigorous party to which the reformers could trust. 'On comfort,' he adds, 'is of knyghtes, that they 'saueren muche [care much for] the gospel, and haue wylle 'to rede in Englysche the gospel of Cristys lyf<sup>1</sup>.' But the fear of death and the power of enemies could not prevail against the spirit in which the work was wrought.

'Cristen men,' one says, 'owe moche to traueile nyȝt 'and day aboute text of holy writ, and namely the gospel 'in her modir tunge, sithe Jhesu Crist, very God and very 'man, tauȝt this gospel with his owne blessid mouth and 'kept it in his lyf<sup>2</sup>.' 'I besek and with alle my hert pray 'them that this werk redyn,' writes Wycliffe, in the preface to his Harmony of the Gospels, 'that for me thei pray the 'mercy of God, that I may fulfyllen that is set in the 'draghing of this boke; and that he at whos suggestyon 'I this werke began, and thei that [this] werk redyn, and 'alle cristen men with me, thurgh doynge of that that is 'wrytyn in this bok, may com to geder to that blisse 'that neuer salle ende<sup>3</sup>.' And Purvey when he revised Wycliffe's work knew well what was required of the interpreter of Scripture. 'He hath nede to liue a clene 'lif, and be ful deuout in preiers, and haue not his wit 'ocupied about worldli thingis, that the Holi Spiryte, Autour 'of wisdom, and kunnyng [knowledge], and truthe, dresse 'him in his werk and suffre him not for to erre...Bi this 'maner,' he concludes, 'with good liuyng and greet traueil, 'men moun come to trewe and cleer translating, and trewe 'vndurstonding of holi writ, seme it neuere so hard at the 'bigynnyng. God grante to us alle grace to kenne wel, 'and kepe wel holi writ, and suffre ioiefulli sum payne for 'it at the laste<sup>4</sup>.'

The last words were not allowed to remain without fulfilment. As long as the immediate influence of Wycliffe lasted the teaching of his followers was restrained within reasonable bounds. Times of anarchy and violence followed, and spiritual reform was confounded with the destruction of society. The preachers of the Bible gave occasion to their enemies to identify them with the enemies of order; and the reestablishment of a strong government led to the enactment of the statute De hæretico comburendo (2 Hen. IV), which was soon put in force as a powerful check on heresy. It is impossible to determine whether the Wycliffite Bible was among 'the books' mentioned in the preamble of the act by which the Lollards were said to excite the people to sedition<sup>1</sup>. Later parallels make it likely that it was so; but it was not long before the Version was directly assailed.

In a convocation of the province of Canterbury held at Oxford under Archbishop Arundel in 1408, several constitutions were enacted against the party of the Reformation. The one on the use of the vernacular Scriptures is important both in form and substance. 'It is a dangerous thing,' so it runs, 'as witnesseth blessed St Jerome, 'to translate the text of the holy Scripture out of one 'tongue into another; for in the translation the same 'sense is not always easily kept, as the same St Jerome 'confesseth, that although he were inspired (etsi inspiratus 'fuisset), yet oftentimes in this he erred; we therefore 'decree and ordain that no man hereafter by his own 'authority (auctoritate suâ) translate any text of the 'Scripture into English or any other tongue, by way of 'a book, pamphlet, or treatise; and that no man read any 'such book, pamphlet, or treatise, now lately composed 'in the time of John Wycliffe or since, or hereafter to be 'set forth in part or in whole, publicly or privately, upon 'pain of greater excommunication, until the said translation be approved by the ordinary of the place, or, if 'the case so require, by the council provincial. He that 'shall do contrary to this shall likewise be punished as 'a favourer of heresy and error<sup>2</sup>.'

245 (whose translation I have generally followed). The original Latin is given in Wilkins' Concilia, III. 317.

Four years after came the insurrection and death of Sir John Oldcastle. A new and more stringent act was passed against heresy (2 Hen. V), and the Lollards as a party were destroyed. But the English Bible survived their destruction. The terms of the condemnation under Archbishop Arundel were explicit, but it was practically ineffectual. No such approbation as was required, so far as we know, was ever granted, but the work was still transcribed for private use; and the manuscripts are themselves the best records of its history<sup>1</sup>.

Of about one hundred and seventy copies of the whole or part of the Wycliffite versions which have been examined, fifteen of the Old Testament and eighteen of the New belong to the original version. The remainder are of Purvey's revision, which itself has in some very rare cases undergone another partial revision. Of these not one-fifth are of an earlier date than Arundel's condemnation<sup>2</sup>. The greater part appear to have been written between 1420 and 1450; and what is a more interesting fact, nearly half the copies are of a small size, such as could be made the constant daily companions of their owners. Others again are noticeable for the rank of those by whom they were once possessed. One belonged to Humphrey, the 'good' duke of Gloucester<sup>3</sup>; another to Henry VI, who gave it to the Charterhouse<sup>4</sup>; another (apparently) to Richard III<sup>5</sup>; another to Henry VII (?), another to Edward VI<sup>6</sup>; and another was presented to Queen Elizabeth as a new-year's gift by her chaplain<sup>1</sup>. There are yet other copies with interest of a different kind<sup>2</sup>. One probably was that of Bp. Bonner<sup>3</sup>: another records in a hand of the 16th century, that 'this ancient monyment of holy 'scripture dothie show, how the Lord God in all ages and 'tymes wold haue his blessed woorde preserved for the 'comforte of his elect children and church in all tymes 'and ages, in despyte of Sathane<sup>4</sup>.'

<sup>1</sup> Two names however are connected too closely with Wycliffe to be omitted altogether. John of Gaunt vigorously supported Wycliffe in his endeavours to circulate an English version of the Bible, and after his death successfully opposed a Bill brought into the House of Lords, 1390, to forbid the circulation of the Scriptures in English (Hist. Acc. p. 33). Anne of Bohemia also, according to the testimony of Archbishop Arundel, 'constantly studied the four 'Gospels in English' (Foxe, III. 202, ed. Townshend). The subsequent conduct of Arundel is not inconsistent with the belief that this version was Wycliffe's.

and R. Crowley printed from it the General Prologue in 1550, 'the 'Originall whereof is founde written 'in an olde English Bible,' so he writes on the title-page, 'bitwixt the 'olde Testament and the Newe. 'Whych Bible remaynith now in y<sup>e</sup> 'Kyng his maiesties Chamber.'

The book retains a binding apparently of the age of Edward VI, which bears stamped on one side Verbum Domini and on the other manet in aeternum.

Part of Crowley's notice to the reader is worthy of being quoted:

'[This Prologue] was at y<sup>e</sup> fyrste 'made common to fewe men y<sup>t</sup> wolde 'and were able to optayn it. But 'nowe it is made commen to all 'menne, that be desyrouse of it. 'Forget not therfore, [gentle reader,] 'to take it thanckfully, to vse it 'Christenly, and to esteme it of no 'lesse value than a most precieuse 'iewell, fyrst framed by the Diuine 'wisdomme of gods spirite poured vpon 'the fyrste Autoure, preserued by 'goddis mercyfull prouidence, and 'nowe offered vnto the by God hym- 'selfe, that thou hongring the perfecte 'knowledge of goddis worde shuldest 'not be destituid of so necessarye a 'meane to attayne to the same.'

Duchess of Richmond, Surrey's sister, to Henry Fitz Alan, Earl of Arundel, and by him in September, 1576, to Richard Wiclif. In the Wardrobe Accounts of Edward IV (1480) there is an item for binding his Bible, but nothing to shew whether it was Latin or English, or possibly French.]

<sup>4</sup> [Forshall and Madden, Pref. p. lx.] But it must be observed that in spite of the wide circulation of the English Version the Latin Vulgate remained the Bible of those who could read, just as afterwards in Cranmer's time. One interesting memorial of this remains. The 'Per- 'sones Tale' in Chaucer (c. 1386—1390) abounds in passages of the Bible in English. The Latin 'catch-word' is very rarely given; and in no one case have I observed a real coincidence with either of the Wycliffite versions. On the contrary, the renderings differ from them more than might have been expected in contemporary versions of the same Latin text; and the same text (e.g. Acts iv. 12) is turned differently in different places. One or two examples are worth quoting.

'Allas! I caytif man, who shal 'delivere me fro the prisoun of my 'caytif body?' (Rom. vii. 24).

'An avaricious man is in the thral- 'dom of idolatrie' (Eph. v. 5).

'Go, quod Iesu Crist, and have na- 'more wil to sinne' (John viii. 11).

Thus the books themselves speak to us and witness of the work which they did<sup>1</sup>. In fact, they help us to understand Foxe's famous testimony that in 1520... 'great 'multitudes...tasted and followed the sweetness of God's 'holy Word almost in as ample manner, for the number 'of well-disposed hearts, as now... Certes, the fervent zeal 'of those Christian days seemed much superior to these 'our days and times, as manifestly may appear by their 'sitting up all night in reading and hearing; also by 'their expenses and charges in buying of books in English, 'of whom some gave five marks [equal to about £40 in 'our money], some more, some less for a book: some gave 'a load of hay for a few chapters of St James or of St 'Paul in English... To see their travails, their earnest seek- 'ings, their burning zeal, their readings, their watchings, 'their sweet assemblies... may make us now in these days 'of free profession, to blush for shame<sup>2</sup>. So Foxe wrote in 1563, and after three centuries the contrast is still to our sorrow<sup>3</sup>.

[The Wycliffite origin of the translation of the Bible was never seriously questioned till, in an article on the Pre-Reformation English Bible in the Dublin Review for July, 1894, Father (now Abbot) Gasquet propounded the theory that the so-called Wycliffite Version was in reality the orthodox version mentioned by Sir Thomas More and others, which was sanctioned by the Church and the use of which was conditionally permitted. This view was subjected to criticism by Mr F. D. Mathew in the English Historical Review for January, 1895, by Dr F. G. Kenyon in Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts, 1895, and by a writer in the Church Quarterly Review for October, 1900, and January, 1901, with the result that the Wycliffite origin of the translations which came into existence in the 14th century has been reestablished. Abbot Gasquet has no doubt brought into greater prominence the fact that the version was found where it could hardly have been except by express permission of the Church, but it is remarkable that notwithstanding such permission it was never allowed to be printed. Perhaps this may have been because some taint of Wycliffite heresy was believed to be attached to it. In Germany, France, Italy, and Spain, translations from the Vulgate into the vernacular languages of those countries existed many years before the Reformation.]

<sup>3</sup> [The later of the Wycliffite Versions of the New Testament was printed by Lewis in 1731, and reprinted by Baber in 1810. The earlier version was published by Pickering in 1848 from a MS. in the possession of Mr Lea Wilson and afterwards in the collection of Lord Ashburnham. The text in Bagster's Hexapla (1841) is of the later version, from a MS. which belonged successively to the Duke of Sussex, Mr Lea Wilson, and the Earl of Ashburnham. But the great authority on the subject of the Wycliffite translations is the monumental work of Forshall and Madden in four volumes quarto, Oxford, 1850, which contains both versions of the Old and New Testaments and Apocrypha, with an elaborate critical apparatus, preface, and glossary. Reprints from this edition of the New Testament (1879) and of the Poetical Books, Job—Song of Solomon (1881), were edited for the Clarendon Press by Professor Skeat.]

CHAPTER II.

THE PRINTED BIBLE.

This is the doctrine simple, ancient, true;

Such is life's trial, as old earth smiles and knows.

If you loved only what were worth your love,

Love were clear gain and wholly well for you:

Make the low nature better by your throes!

Give earth yourself, go up for gain above!

BROWNING, Dramatis Personæ, James Lee's Wife, VII. 2.

CHAPTER II.

THE PRINTED BIBLE.

THE general testimony of Foxe to the circulation of the English Scriptures at the beginning of the 16th century, which has been just quoted, is illustrated by several special incidents, which he records. These, however, shew at the same time that the circulation and study of the manuscripts was both precarious and perilous. 'I did once,' says Lambert in 1538, 'see a booke of the Newe Testamēt '(which was not vnwryttē by my estimation this C. yeres) 'and in my minde right wel translate after the example of 'that which is red in the Church in Laten. But he that 'shewed it me said, he durst not be known to haue it by 'him, for many hadde bene punished afore time for keping 'of such as conuict of heresy<sup>1</sup>. And that this fear was not ungrounded may be seen by the registers of the dioceses of Norwich and Lincoln, which contain several examples of men charged before the bishops with the offence of reading or perusing 'the New Law' (that is, the New Testament) in English<sup>2</sup>.

But meanwhile a momentous change had passed over Western Europe. 'Greece,' in the striking language of an English scholar, 'had risen from the grave with the New 'Testament in her hand'; and the Teutonic nations had welcomed the gift. It had been long felt on all sides that the Latin Bible of the mediæval Church could no longer satisfy the wants of the many nations of a divided world. Before the end of the 15th century Bibles were printed in Spanish, Italian, French, Dutch, German and Bohemian; while England as yet had only the few manuscripts of the Wycliffite versions. But, like Wycliffe's, these were only secondary versions from the Vulgate. The Hebrew text of the Old Testament was published as early as 1488, though very few except Jews could use it; but the Greek text of the New Testament was not yet printed. Scholars however were being duly trained for the work of direct translation. The passionate declamation then current against Hebrew and Greek shews that the study of both was popular and advancing<sup>1</sup>. And England, though late to begin, eagerly followed up the 'new learning'<sup>2</sup>. From 1509 to 1514 Erasmus was Professor of Greek at Cambridge, and, as appears probable, it was the fame of his lectures which drew there William Tindale about the year 1510<sup>3</sup>, to whom it has been allowed more than to any other man to give its characteristic shape to our English Bible. And the man, as we shall see, was not unworthy of the glorious honour for the attainment of which indeed he lived equally and died.

§ 1 TINDALE.

With Tindale the history of our present English Bible begins<sup>4</sup>; and for fifteen years the history of the Bible is almost identical with the history of Tindale. The fortunes of both if followed out in detail are even of romantic interest. Of the early life of Tindale we know nothing.

<sup>2</sup> According to Erasmus, England was second only to Italy and in advance of France and Germany. Erasmus himself studied Greek at Oxford. Compare Hallam, Introduction to Lit. of Europe, i. pp. 269 f.

<sup>3</sup> [This is not now so probable since the discovery of an entry in the Oxford Register by which it appears that William Hichyns, who is supposed to be Tindale, took his M.A. degree in 1515.]

He was born about 1484<sup>1</sup>, at an obscure village in Gloucestershire<sup>2</sup>, and 'brought up from a child,' as Foxe says, in the University of Oxford, where he was 'singularly 'addicted to the study of the Scriptures'. From Oxford he went to Cambridge, and after spending some time there, as we have noticed, he returned about 1520 to his native county as tutor in the family of Sir John Walsh of Little Sodbury. Here he spent two years, not without many controversies, in one of which he made his memorable declaration to 'a learned man' who 'said we were 'better be without God's laws than the Pope's': 'I defy 'the Pope and all his laws'; and said, 'If God spare my 'life, ere many years I will cause a boy that driveth the 'plough shall know more of the Scripture than thou 'doest'. The boast was not an idle phrase. Erasmus, <sup>1</sup> [Probably later.] The dates in Tindale's life up to his coming to London in 1522-3 are fixed only approximately and by conjecture. There is no adequate external evidence to determine them exactly, but the amount of error cannot be great. I may refer by anticipation to a promised Life of Tyndale by the Rev. R. Demaus [published in 1871], as certain to exhaust all the information on the subject which is left to us.

<sup>2</sup> The exact place is uncertain, but it was near Nibley Knoll, one of the Cotswold hills, on which a monument has lately been erected to his memory. Mr F. Fry informs me that 'there 'are Tindales now in those parts'; and further that 'Hunt's Court, 'where Tindale is said to have been 'born, did not come into the possession of the Tindale family till later.' Tindale was known also by the name Hutchins (Hychins, Hochin), which had been assumed, it is said, by his great-grandfather; and in official documents he is described by both titles: e.g. in the Articles against Munmouth, Strype, Eccles. Mem. 1.

488. [Demaus (ed. 2) was of opinion that all the evidence is in favour of Melksham Court, in the parish of Stinchcombe, being the home of Tindale's family.]

<sup>3</sup> He studied in Magdalen Hall, called Grammar Hall from the labours of Grocyn, W. Latimer, and Linacre there in favour of classical learning (Anderson, i. 26). [He probably took the degree of M.A. in 1515.]

Mr Fry informs me that the MS. quoted in the Historical Account, p. 41 n., purporting to contain translations by Tindale ('W.T.') from the New Testament and dated 1502, was unquestionably a forgery. The MS. was afterwards burnt [in 1865 at Sotheby's, when the sale of Offor's Library had begun]; but the facsimile of a single page, for the sight of which I am indebted to Mr Fry, seems absolutely conclusive as to its spuriousness.

had published the Greek Testament for the first time, with a new Latin version, in 1516, before Tindale left Cambridge; and Tindale must have been acquainted with the effect which its introduction there had immediately produced<sup>1</sup>. At the same time, as he tells us, he 'had 'perceaued by experyence, how that it was impossible to 'stablysh the laye people in any truth, excepte y<sup>e</sup> scripture 'were playnly layde before their eyes in their mother 'tonge, that they might se the processe, ordre and meaning of the texte'... 'Which thinge onlye,' he says, 'moved 'me to translate the new testament<sup>2</sup>.'

When his enemies grew so powerful as to endanger his patron, 'I gat me,' he says, to 'London.' 'If I might 'come to the Bishop of London's service'—Tunstall's, of whose love of scholarship Erasmus had spoken highly—'thought I, I were happy.' By this time he knew what his work was, and he was resolutely set to accomplish it<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> One memorable instance of its influence is seen in the narrative of Bilney, afterwards martyred in 1531, who was first roused to a lively faith by reading in Erasmus' edition, 1 Tim. i. 15, as he narrates in touching words in a letter addressed to Tunstall: Foxe, Acts and Monuments, iv. 635. Bilney's Latin Bible is still preserved [in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge], with many passages marked, and among them the one on which he dwelt most in the night before his death. Anderson, i. p. 301. [The Librarian, Mr C. W. Moule, informs me that the volume is a small folio copy of the Vulgate printed at Lyons in 1520 at the expense of Antony Koberger, and presented to the College in 1588 by Robert Willon, Rector of Wilbrabam Parva and formerly Fellow. See Masters's History of Corpus, ed. Lamb, p. 321. W.A.W.]

was suggested by a phrase in the Exhortation of Erasmus. 'I would,' he writes, 'that the husbandman at 'the plough should sing something 'from hence [the Gospels and Epistles].'

<sup>3</sup> No phrase could more completely misrepresent Tindale's character than that by which Mr Froude has thought right to describe him at this time—'the young dreamer' (ii. 30). Tindale could not have been much less than forty years old at the time, and he was less of a 'dreamer' even than Luther. From the first he had exactly measured the cost of his work; and when he had once made his resolve to translate the Scriptures, he never afterwards lost sight of it, and never failed in doing what he proposed to do.

I do not think that the phrase 'fiery young enthusiast,' which Mr Froude has substituted for 'young 'dreamer' in his last edition is much happier, though it certainly indicates a very different character. 1870.

At the same time he was prepared to furnish the bishop for whose countenance he looked with an adequate test of his competency. The claim which he preferred was supported by a translation of a speech of Isocrates from the Greek. 'But god,' he continues, and the story can only be given fitly in his own words, 'sawe that I was 'begyled, ād that that counsell was not the nexte way 'vnto my purpose'—to translate the Scriptures—'And 'therfore he gate me no favoure in my lordes sight. Wher- 'uppon my lorde answered me, his house was full: he had 'mo thē he coude well finde, and advised me to seke in 'london, wher he sayd I coude not lacke a service.'

The bishop's prediction was fulfilled in a way which he could not have anticipated. Tindale had indeed already found a friend ready to help him in an alderman of London, Humphrey Munmouth. Munmouth, who was afterwards (1528) thrown into the Tower for the favour which he had shewn Tindale and other reformers, has left an interesting account of his acquaintance with him in a petition which he addressed to Wolsey to obtain his release. 'I heard '[Tindale], he writes, 'preach two or three sermons at 'St Dunstan's-in-the-West in London', and after that I 'chanced to meet with him, and with communication I 'examined what living he had. He said he had none at 'all, but he trusted to be with my lord of London, in his 'service, and therefore I had the better fantasy to him. 'Afterward [when this hope failed, he]...came to me again, 'and besought me to help him; and so I took him into my 'house half a year; and there he lived like a good priest as 'methought. He studied most part of the day and of the 'night at his book; and he would eat but sodden meat by 'his good will, nor drink but small single beer. I never 'saw him wear linen about him in the space he was with

<sup>1</sup> It is not known when Tindale was admitted to Holy Orders; but it is at least clear from the silence of Sir T. More that he was not the W. Tindale who is said to have 'made 'profession in the monastery of the

'Observants at Greenwich in 1508'; for More does not fail to taunt Joye and Jerome, who had belonged to that monastery, with being renegade friars, while he brings no such charge against Tindale.

'me. I did promise him ten pounds sterling to pray for my father and mother their souls and all Christian souls. I did pay it him when he made his exchange to Hamburgh<sup>1</sup>.'

This time of waiting was not lost upon Tindale. In the busy conflicts and intrigues of city life he learnt what had been hidden from him in the retirement of the country. 'In london,' he continues, 'I abode almoste an yere, and marked the course of the worlde...and vnderstode at the laste not only that there was no rowme in my lorde of londons palace to translate the new testament, but also that there was no place to do it in all englonde...<sup>2</sup>'

So he left his native country for ever, to suffer, as he elsewhere says, 'poverty, exile, bitter absence from friends, hunger and thirst and cold, great dangers and innumerable other hard and sharp fightings<sup>3</sup>,' but yet to achieve his work and after death to force even Tunstall to set his name upon it.

Tindale's first place of refuge was Hamburgh. This free city, like Antwerp, offered great advantages to religious exiles; and at a later period we find Coverdale also living there for some months<sup>4</sup>. At the same time, as no press was yet established at Hamburgh, Tindale may not have remained there during the whole of the year 1524, if, as appears likely, he published the Gospels of St Matthew and St Mark separately at that date<sup>5</sup>. Among other places, Wittenberg, where Luther was then living, was easily accessible, and it is not unlikely that Tindale found some opportunity of seeing the great leader with whom the work of the Reformation was identified. The fact of a passing visit would explain satisfactorily the statement of Sir T.

More<sup>1</sup>, while the more exact account of Spalatinus<sup>2</sup>, who makes no mention of Luther, leads to the belief, on all grounds the most probable, that Tindale, though acquainted with Luther's writings and ready to make use of them<sup>3</sup>, lived independently, with his fellow-exiles, at Hamburgh<sup>4</sup> or elsewhere, till his chosen work was completed. In the next year (1525) Tindale went to Cologne, and there began to print the translation of the New Testament, which he had by that time completed<sup>5</sup>. It was a time of sore trial for the Reformers. Luther's marriage troubled some. His breach with Karlstadt alienated others. The rising of the peasants furnished a ready pretext to the lukewarm for confounding the new doctrines with revolutionary license. But Tindale laboured on in silence, and ten sheets of his Testament were printed in quarto when his work was stopped by the intrigues of Cochläus, a relentless enemy of the Reformation<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Dialogue, Book III. ch. 8. 'It is to be cōsidered that at the tyme of this translacyon, Hychens [Tindale] was with luther in Wyttenberge, & set certayne glosys in the mergent, framed for the settinge forth of the vngracyous secte. By saynt Iohan quod your frende yf that be trewe that Hychens were at that tyme wyth Luther, it is a playne token that he wrought som what after his counsaile... Very trewe quod I. But as touchyng the confederacye betwene Luther and hym [it] is a thyng well known and playnly confessed, by soche as hauē ben taken and conuicted here of heresye comyng frome thens....'

To this Tindale's reply is simply: 'When he sayth "Tyndall was confederate with Luther," that is not truth.' This statement is of course consistent with the fact of a visit to Luther. Sir T. More's information was without doubt derived from Cochläus. See also the letter of Lee, p. 34.

<sup>5</sup> Fryth did not join him till 1528; and there is no evidence that either his amanuensis Roye, or Joye, if he was with him at the time, had any independent part in the translation. See below, Ch. III. The date of the printing of the New Testament is established by the use of a woodcut as the frontispiece to St Matthew which was afterwards cut down and used in an edition of Rupert of Deutz, finished June 12, 1526. A facsimile of each of these woodcuts is given in Mr Arber's edition of the fragment.

It is a strange and vivid picture which Cochläus, who is the historian of his own achievement, draws of the progress and discovery of the work<sup>1</sup>. The translation of 'the New Testament of Luther'—so he calls it—was, in his eyes, part of a great scheme for converting all England to Lutheranism. The expense, as he learnt, was defrayed by English merchants; and their design was only betrayed by their excess of confidence. But though Cochläus was aware of the design, he could not for some time find any clue to the office where it was being executed. At last becoming familiar with the printers of Cologne while engaged on a book to be published there, he heard them in unguarded moments boast of the revolution which would be shortly wrought in England. The clue was not neglected. He invited some of them to his house, and plying them with wine learned where three thousand copies of the English Testament were being worked off, for speedy and secret distribution through England. He took immediate measures to secure the aid of the authorities of the city for checking the work. The printers were forbidden to proceed, but Tindale and Roye taking their printed sheets with them escaped to Worms by ship. Cochläus—it was all he could then do—warned Henry, Wolsey, and Fisher of the peril to which they were exposed, that so they might take measures 'to prevent the importation of the pernicious merchandise.'

Meanwhile Tindale pursued his work under more favourable circumstances. The place to which he fled was already memorable in the annals of the Reformation. It was then not much more than four years since the marvellous scene been photo-lithographed and published with an excellent introduction by Mr E. Arber (London, 1871), who has printed at length with great exactness and illustrated by careful notes the original records bearing upon the early life and work of Tindale.

1538, 1549, in which Cochläus mentions the transaction: the last account, from De Actis et Scriptis M. Lutheri, pp. 132 ff., is in every respect the most detailed. Cochläus thinks that Henry VIII was as much indebted to him for the information as Ahasuerus to Mordecai, though he gave him no acknowledgment for the service.

when Luther entered Worms (1521) to bear witness before the Emperor. But within that time the city had 'become 'wholly Lutheran!'. So Tindale found a safe retreat there, and prepared two editions of his New Testament instead of one. The edition, which had been commenced at Cologne, was in quarto and furnished with marginal glosses. A description of this had been sent to England by Cochläus, and therefore, as it seems, to baffle his enemies Tindale commenced a new edition in small octavo without glosses. This octavo edition was finished first. In a short epistle to the reader, which is placed at the end, the translator apologizes for 'the rudnes off the worke' then first accomplished: 'Count it' he says 'as a thyng not havyng his 'full shape, but as it were borne afore hys tyme, even as a 'thīg begunne rather then fynessed. In tyme to come (yf 'god have apoynted vs there vnto) we will geve it his full 'shape: and putt out yf ought be added superflously: and 'adde to yff ought be oversene thorowe negligence: and 'will enforce to brynge to compendeousnes, that which is 'nowe translated at the lengthe, ād to geve lyght where it 'is requyred, and to seke ī certayne places more proper 'englysshe, and with a table to expōde the wordes which 'are nott cōmenly vsed, and shewe howe the scripture 'vseth many wordes, which are wother wyse vnderstonde of 'the cōmen people: ād to helpe with a declaracion where 'one tonge taketh nott another. And will endeuer oure 'selves, as it were to sethe it better, and to make it more 'apte for the weake stomakes: desyrynge them that are 'learned, and able, to remember their duetie, and to helpe 'there vnto: and to bestowe vnto the edyfyīge of Christis 'body (which is the cōgregacion of them that beleve) those 'gyftes whych they have receaved of god for the same 'purpose. The grace that cometh of Christ be with thē 'that love hym.' The whole book then closes with the characteristic words: 'praye for vs.'

The words just quoted in part describe the general

Prologue and glosses with which the quarto edition was furnished, and Tindale appears to have lost no time in completing this interrupted work<sup>1</sup>. Both editions reached England without any indication of the translator's name<sup>2</sup> early in 1526; and, as might have been expected, the quarto edition first attracted attention, while for a short time the undescribed octavo escaped notice.

Before the books arrived Henry VIII had received a second warning of the impending danger from his almoner Lee, afterwards archbishop of York, who was then on

<sup>1</sup> The quarto edition was commenced by Quentel. The octavo was printed by P. Schoeffer, the son of one of the first great triumvirate of printers. The same printer, it has been conjectured, completed the quarto; but of this there is no direct evidence, as the Grenville Fragment contains only sheets A—H, while A—K were printed by Quentel. There is not however any reasonable doubt that the quarto edition was completed about the same time as the first octavo, and therefore it seems likely that it was completed at Worms and by Schoeffer. Two editions, a large and a small, one with and one without glosses, made their appearance simultaneously in England. Three thousand copies of the first sheets of the quarto were struck off and six thousand is said to have been the whole number of New Testaments printed. Moreover it is not likely that Tindale would allow the sheets which he rescued to lie idle. On the other hand, as Mr F. Fry reminds me, there is no direct evidence that the quarto edition was printed at Worms or printed in 1525, or that the Cologne sheets were used in this edition. But on the whole the conjectural interpretation of the facts which I have ventured to give seems to me to be correct. It is of course possible that

'the chapters of Matthew' referred to by Necton as in his possession before the Testaments may refer to these sheets, and not to another separate publication of that Gospel. Strype, Memoirs i. 2, p. 63. See also Mr Arber, l. c. pp. 26–7. 1871. For specimens of the Glosses, see App. v.

<sup>2</sup> Tindale's name was attached to the Parable of the Wicked Mammon in 1528, and he there gives his reasons for printing his New Testament anonymously. 'The cause why I set my name before this little treatise and have not rather done it in the New Testament is, that then I followed the counsel of Christ, which exhorteth men (Matt. vi.) to do their good deeds secretly, and to be content with the conscience of well-doing and that God seeth us; and patiently to abide the reward of the last day which Christ hath purchased for us: and now would I fain have done likewise, but am compelled otherwise to do.' (To the Reader, p. 37, ed. Park. Soc.) He wished to separate his own writings distinctly from the violent satires of W. Royce. In speaking simply of 'the New Testament' it seems evident that Tindale included the two editions, quarto and octavo. In the revised edition (1534) his name was added.

the Continent. Writing to the king from Bordeaux on Dec. 2nd, 1525, Lee says: 'Please it your highness moreover to understand that I am certainly informed, as I passed in this country, that an Englishman your subject, at the solicitation and instance of Luther, with whom he is, hath translated the New Testament into English, and within few days intendeth to arrive with the same imprinted in England. I need not to advertise your grace what infection and danger may ensue hereby if it be not withstanded. This is the next way to fulfil your realm with Lutherians.' And then he adds, 'All our forefathers, governors of the Church of England, hath with all diligence forbidden and eschewed publication of English Bibles, as appeareth in constitutions provincial of the Church of England<sup>1</sup>...'.

The account which reached Lee's ears had travelled far and was inaccurate in its details; but the swiftness with which it reached him is a proof of the interest which Cochläus' discovery excited. Another notice of Tindale's translation which appears in the diary of a German scholar under August 1526 is more truthful and full of interest. After mentioning other subjects of conversation at the dinner table, as the war with the Turks, the exhaustion of the bishops by the peasants' war, the literary troubles of Erasmus, he adds, one told us that '6000 copies of the English Testament had been printed at Worms. That it was translated by an Englishman who lived there with two of his countrymen, who was so complete a master of seven languages, Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish, English, French, that you would fancy that whichever one he spoke was his mother tongue. He added that the English, in spite of the active opposition of the king, were so eager for the Gospel as to affirm that they would buy a New

'Testament even if they had to give a hundred thousand 'pieces of money for it!'

The reception of the books in England answered to these anticipations. They were eagerly bought, and as eagerly proscribed and sought out for destruction. Sir T. More fiercely attacked the translation as ignorant, dishonest and heretical<sup>2</sup>. In the autumn Tunstall and Warham issued mandates for the collection and surrender of copies<sup>3</sup>. Tunstall attacked it in a Sermon at Paul's Cross, and professed to have found 3000 errors in it: 'and truly,' writes one [Lambert] who heard him, 'my heart lamented greatly 'to hear a great man preaching against it [the New Testament], who shewed forth certain things that he noted for 'hideous errors to be in it, that I, yea, and not only I, but 'likewise did many other, think verily to be none!'

The enumeration of languages is 'Hebraicæ, Græcæ, Latinæ, Italicæ, 'Hispanicæ, Britannicæ, Gallicæ.' The passage is misquoted in the life of Tindale prefixed to the edition of Park. Soc. with 'Dutch' (i.e. German) for 'French' (p. xxx. n.). The error is important, for if the printed reading be correct, it is unlikely that Tindale had spent a long time at Wittenberg with Luther.

<sup>2</sup> His great charge was the disregard of 'ecclesiastical terms,' 'church, 'priest, charity, grace, confess, penance,' for which Tindale substituted 'congregation, elder, love, favour, 'knowledge, repentance.' Tindale's reply is full of interest.

A similar charge against the translation was made by R. Ridley (uncle of N. Ridley). Writing in Feb. 1527 to [Henry Golde] the chaplain of Archbp. Warham, he says: 'By this 'translation shall we losse al thies 'cristian wordes penaunce, charite, confession, grace, prest, chirche, which 'he alway calleth a congregation, 'quasi turcharum et brutorum nulla 'esset congregatio, nisi velit illorum 'etiam esse ecclesiam; Idololatria 'callith he worshipping of images... Cochlæus (Acta et Scripta Martini Lutheri, Moguntiae, 1549, p. 135) says 'supra duo milia depravationum.']

The attack of Tunstall appears to have been the result of a deliberation of the Cardinal and the bishops. In a preface added to the English translation of Henry VIII's answer to Luther's letter of 1525 it is said in the name of the king that he had 'with the deliberate aduysse of..... 'Thomas lorde Cardynall.....and other reuerende fathers 'of the spyritualtye, determyned.....[Tindale's] vntrue 'translatyons to be brenned, with further sharpp correction 'and punisshment against the kepars and reders of the 'same.....<sup>1</sup>' Roye, in his Brief Dialogue, gives an account of the discussion which issued in this condemnation, and represents at least the popular opinion as to the parts played by the several actors<sup>2</sup>. The betrayal of the New Testament is compared with the betrayal of Christ. The part of Judas is assigned to Standish, bishop of St Asaph. The Cardinal 'spake the words of Pilat, Sayinge, I fynde 'no fault therin.' But the argument of 'bisshop Cayphas' [Tunstall] prevailed, who pleaded that it was better that the Gospel be condemned than their estate contemned; and so the Cardinal and all the bishops decided that the book should be burnt.

The decision being once made was vigorously carried out. Copies of the New Testament were bought up and burnt in Antwerp and London and Oxford<sup>3</sup>. Diplomacy was invoked to restrain the printers. But all was in vain. The tide was fairly flowing and it could not be checked. A formidable popular organization was ready in England to welcome the books and to spread them. Numerous agents were employed both in importing them from Holland and in circulating them. There is even something quaintly human in the spirit of the trader which sh<sup>ew</sup>ed itself in this sacred work. One John Tyball came with a friend to London (1526) to buy one of Tindale's New Testaments. After giving some proof of their sincerity they shewed 'the 'Friar Barnes of certain old books that they had, as of four 'Evangelists and certain epistles of Peter and Paul in 'English. Which books the said Friar did little regard, 'and made a twit of it and said "a point for the<sup>n</sup>! for they "be not to be regarded toward the new printed Testament "in English. For it is of more cleaner English." And 'then the said Friar Barnes delivered to them the said 'New Testament in English...and after...did liken the 'New Testament in Latin to a cymbal tinkling and brass 'sounding<sup>1</sup>. Thus by 1530 swiftly and silently six editions, of which three were surreptitious, were dispersed, and Tindale could feel that so far his work was substantially indestructible. He had anticipated its immediate fate. 'In burning the New Testament,' he wrote soon after the book reached England (1527), 'they did none other thing 'than that I looked for, no more shall they do if they burn 'me also, if it be God's will it shall so be. Nevertheless in 'translating the New Testament I did my duty and so do 'I now...?' Yet so fierce and systematic was the persecution both now and afterwards, that of these six editions, numbering perhaps 15,000 copies, there remains of the first one fragment only, which was found about thirty years ago<sup>2</sup>, attached to another tract, of the second, one copy, wanting the title-page, and another very imperfect<sup>3</sup>; and of the others, two<sup>or</sup> three copies, which are not however satisfactorily identified<sup>1</sup>.

Two characteristic incidents will be sufficient to shew the strength and weakness of the popular movement to which the origin and circulation of the translation was due.

The Eastern Counties, which took an active part on the popular side in the barons' war and in the great revolution, seem<sup>1</sup> to have been most ready to welcome the New English Testament. Nearly all the places out of London mentioned in direct connexion with the first circulation of the books lie in this district, as Norwich, Bury, Colchester. And Cambridge, which had enjoyed the teaching of Erasmus, was early and deeply leavened by the 'new learning.' Bilney, Latimer, and Barnes, men of distinction in the University and not young students, were its representatives. Their position made them bold. On Christmas Eve, 1525, Barnes preached a sermon in which he criticized among other things the luxury of Wolsey. This personal attack gave force to the accusation against him, which after a little delay was laid before the Cardinal. A messenger came early in February of the next year to search for heretical<sup>books</sup>, but his visit was anticipated by private information. The books were placed carefully beyond his reach, but he arrested Barnes. With such an offender the process was short and simple. After he had appeared before the court the choice was left him of abjuration or the stake. A bitter struggle revealed his present weakness, and on the next Sunday in company with some German traders—'Stillyard men'—committed 'for Luther's 'books and Lollardy<sup>2</sup>,' he performed a memorable penance

<sup>1</sup> Of these three editions one was printed by Endhoven, and the two others by Ruremonde, but all at Antwerp: Anderson, I. 129—133; 163—165. The Dutch copy in the Library of Emm. Coll. Cambridge [printed in 1538 without the name of place or printer], as Dr Colton points out, is Coverdale's and not Tindale's version. It is very probable that other editions [besides the six which Anderson mentions] existed of which no trace has yet been discovered.

in St Paul's<sup>1</sup>. 'The Cardinal had a scaffold made on the top of the stairs for himself, with six-and-thirty Abbots, mitred Priors and Bishops, and he in his whole pomp mitred, which Barnes spake against, sat there enthronised, his chaplains and spiritual doctors, in gowns of damask and satin, and he himself in purple, even like a bloody antichrist. And there was a new pulpit erected on the top of the stairs also for [Fisher] the Bishop of Rochester, to preach against Luther and Dr Barnes; and great baskets full of books standing before them within the rails, which were commanded after the great fire was made before the Rood of Northen<sup>2</sup> there to be burned; and these heretics after the sermon to go thrice about the fire and to cast in their faggots.' The ceremony was duly enacted. Barnes humbly acknowledged the mercy which he had received, and the obnoxious books were burnt. 'And so the Cardinal,' Foxe continues with grave humour, 'departed under a canopy with all his mitred men with him, till he came to the second gate of Paul's; and then he took his mule and the mitred men came back again<sup>3</sup>.'

The tidings of this scene and of Fisher's sermon reached Tindale. 'Mark, I pray you,' he wrote not long afterwards, 'what an orator he [Rochester] is, and how vehemently he persuadeth it! Martin Luther hath burned the pope's decretals: a manifest sign, saith he, that he would have burned the pope's holiness also, if he had had him! A like argument, which I suppose to be rather true, I make: Rochester and his holy brethren have burnt Christ's Testament: an evident sign verily, that they would have burnt Christ Himself also, if they had had Him<sup>4</sup>.' But so it was that for a while the persecution triumphed. The faith of the confessors was not yet purified and strengthened.

From Cambridge and London we pass to Oxford. One of the first and most active distributors of Tindale's Testaments was Thomas Garret, curate of All Hallows, Cheapside. It seems that he had been engaged some time in circulating them at Oxford and elsewhere before the suspicion of the government was roused. At last, in Feb. 1528<sup>1</sup>, tidings of his labours reached Wolsey, and search was made for him in all London. It was found that he was then 'gone to Oxford to make sale of [the 'books] there to such as he knew to be the lovers of the 'Gospel,' for this was not his first labour of the kind. A messenger was despatched thither to apprehend him, but the timely warning of a friend gave him an opportunity of escaping. But 'after that he was gone a day's 'journey and a half he was so fearful that his heart would 'no other but that he must needs return again unto 'Oxford.' He was immediately apprehended, but again escaped from custody and sought out his friend Dalaber, who has recorded the story. With 'deep sighs and plenty of tears, he prayed me,' Dalaber writes, 'to help to convey 'him away; and so he cast off his hood and his gown, 'wherein he came unto me, and desired me to give him 'a coat with sleeves, if I had any; and told me that he 'would go into Wales, and thence convey himself into 'Germany, if he might. Then I put on him a sleeved 'coat of mine, of fine cloth in grain, which my mother 'had given me. He would have another manner of cap 'of me, but I had none but priest-like, such as his own 'was. Then kneeled we both down together on our knees, 'lifting up our hearts and hands to God, our heavenly Tindale may be speaking here of the burning of Luther's translations, which were found in possession of the Hanse merchants; for it is not certain that the English Testaments were burnt till after Tunstall's sermon (i.e. after April, 1526). See p. 35.

<sup>1</sup> Mr Demaus has pointed out to me that this is certainly the date of Garret's apprehension. At the same time there can be no doubt that his connexion with Oxford commenced at an earlier time, and probably in 1526.

'Father, desiring him, with plenty of tears, so to conduct and prosper him in his journey, that he might well escape the danger of all his enemies, to the glory of his holy name, if his good pleasure and will so were. And then we embraced, and kissed the one the other...and so he departed from me appparelled in my coat....' But when Garret thus fled others remained behind not unworthy to carry on his work. 'When he was gone down the stairs from my chamber,' Dalaber continues, 'I straightways did shut my chamber-door, and went into my study shutting the door unto me, and took the New Testament of Erasmus' translation in my hands, kneeled down on my knees, and with many a deep sigh and salt tear, I did with much deliberation read over the tenth chapter of St Matthew his Gospel; and when I had so done, with fervent prayer I did commit unto God that our dearly beloved brother Garret, earnestly beseeching him in and for Jesus Christ's sake, his only begotten Son our Lord, that he would vouchsafe not only safely to conduct and keep our said dear brother from the hands of all his enemies; but also that he would vouch endue his tender and lately-born little flock in Oxford with heavenly strength by his Holy Spirit, that they might be well able thereby valiantly to withstand, to his glory, all their fierce enemies; and also might quietly, to their own salvation, with all godly patience bear Christ's heavy cross, which I now saw was presently to be laid on their young and weak backs, unable to bear so huge a one, without the great help of his Holy Spirit. This done, I laid aside my books safe....' Within a short interval Garret was brought back to Oxford. By this time numerous discoveries had been made. Forbidden books had been found carefully secreted. The Cardinal's College, which had received a large infusion of Cambridge men, was deeply infected with the new heresy. But for the moment old influences were too powerful. The 'lately-born flock' was not ripe for the trial. Before many days were over Garret and Dalaber took a principal part in a public act of penance in company with Fryth and Taverner and Coxe and Udall and Ferrar and many others destined to play an important part in the coming struggle of the Reformation. One detail of their punishment was to throw a book into a fire kindled at Carfax. The procession passed away, the fire died out, the books were consumed, and such was the end of the first appearance of Tindale's New Testament at Oxford<sup>1</sup>.

Twelve years later (1540) Barnes and Garret were martyred together, two days after the execution of Crumwell.

Even within a short time this zeal of persecution brought out into greater prominence the extent of the movement against which it was directed. One of those who had originally (June, 1527) contributed money for the purpose of buying up Tindale's Testaments was Nix, bishop of Norwich<sup>2</sup>. This singular plan for stopping the sale of the books having failed, Nix wrote three years afterwards in deep distress to Archbishop Warham to obtain some more effectual interference in the matter. His letter is in every way so quaint and characteristic that it must be quoted in its original form:

'I am accombred with such, as kepith and redith these arronious boks in Englesh.....My Lorde, I have done that lieth in me for the suppresson of suche parsons; but it passith my power, or any spiritual man for to do it. For dyverse saith openly in my Diocesse, that the Kings grace wolde, that they shulde have the saide arroneous boks.....And they [with whom I confer] say, that wher-
'somever they go, they here say, that the Kings pleasure is, the Newe Testament in English shal go forth, and men sholde have it and read it. And from that opinion I can no wise induce them but I had gretter auctoritie to punyshe them, than I have. Wherefore I beseiche your good Lordshap...that a remedy may be had. For now it may be done wel in my Diocesse: for the Gentil-

'men and Commenty be not greatly infect; but marchants, and suche that hath ther abyding not ferre from the See... 'There is a Collage in Cambrige, called Gunwel haule [Gonville Hall], of the foundation of a Bp. of Norwich. 'I here of no clerk, that hath commen ought lately of 'that Collage, but saverith of the frying panne, tho he spek 'never so holely'<sup>1</sup>....

The fears and wishes of Nix were probably shared by a large party in England, and ten days after he wrote an imposing assembly was convened by Archbishop Warham, at which the errors of Tindale and his friends were formally denounced, and a bill drawn up to be published by preachers. In this it was stated, among other things, that, in spite of the widespread feeling to the contrary, it was not part of the King's duty to cause the Scriptures to be circulated among the people in the vulgar tongue. And that he 'by th' advise and deliberation of his 'counceill, and the agrement of great learned men, thinkith 'in his conscience that the divulging of this Scripture at 'this tyme in Englisshe tonge, to be committed to the 'people...shulde rather be to their further confusion and 'destruction then the edification of their soules'. Thus in the very condemnation of the vernacular Bible, the general demand for it is acknowledged, and a translation is only deferred till a more convenient opportunity, which was nearer at hand than More or Tunstall could have imagined. Even in Warham's assembly 'there were' on Latimer's testimony 'three or four that would have had the Scripture 'to go forth in English.' 'The which thing also your 'grace,' so he writes to the King, 'hath promised by your 'last proclamation: the which promise I pray, God that 'your gracious Highness may shortly perform, even to-day before to-morrow. Nor let the wickedness of these 'worldly men detain you from your godly purpose and 'promise<sup>3</sup>.'

Thus the first battle for the Bible was being fought in England. Meanwhile the work had advanced one step further abroad. Very early in the same year it is likely that Tindale continued his work by publishing separately translations of Genesis and Deuteronomy. It is not known when the other books of the Pentateuch were printed. The earliest edition which contains the five books has at the end of Genesis the date '1530, the 17th of January.' Perhaps however this may indicate, according to our style, Jan. 1531; and there is no evidence to shew when the whole collection was issued, or indeed whether it was issued as a whole. The marginal glosses with which these translations are annotated are full of interest and strongly controversial. The spirit and even the style of Luther is distinctly visible in them. In the directness and persistency of their polemics against Rome they differ much from the glosses in the quarto Testament. Thus Tindale finds in the ceremonies of the Jewish Church the origin of the Romish rites (note on Ex. xxviii.). For example, on Ex. xxix. 37, he adds, 'Toch not the chalyce nor the altare stōne, nor holy oyle and holde youre hande out off the fonte' On Ex. xxxvi. 5, he writes. 'when wil the Pope saye hoo, and forbid to offere for the bylding of saint Peters chyrch: and when will our spiritualtie saye hoo, and forbid to geue thē more londe, ād to make moe fūdacions? neuer verely vntill they haue all.' Even Tindale too could descend to a pleasantry like Luther. Thus on Ex. xxxii. 35, he remarks, 'The popis bull sleeth moo thā Aarons calfe...' The tonsure is criticized Levit. xxi. 5, 'Of the hethē preastes therfore toke our prelates the ensample off their balde pates.' One grim touch of satire may be added, Deut. xi. 19, 'Talk of them [the Lord's words] when thou sittest in thine house.' 'Talke of robynhod saye oure prelates.'

of Tindale's work on the Old Testament was published during his lifetime, except the 'Epistles from the Old Testament,' which were added to the revised edition of his New Testament. For in the midst of his constant perils and anxieties from within and from without Tindale found time to revise his New Testament carefully. The immediate occasion for the publication of his work was the appearance of an unauthorised revision in August 1534, by George Joye. The demand for the New Testaments, which appears to have slackened since 1530, was again so great that three surreptitious editions were printed at Antwerp in that year<sup>1</sup>; and Joye undertook to revise the sheets of a fourth edition. In doing this he made use, as he says, of the Latin text, and aimed at giving 'many words their pure and native signification.' The title of the book is singularly affected<sup>2</sup>, and the alterations were

<sup>1</sup> [According to Joye (An Apology to W. Tindale, ed. Arber, 1882, pp. 20-1), writing in November 1534, two pirated editions were sold off more than a year before, the first having apparently been issued soon after (Joye says 'a non after') the appearance of Tindale's translation. A third was printed in the course of 1534, and Joye was asked but declined to correct it. The fourth edition which gave great offence to Tindale was edited by Joye and was published in August 1534.]

At the end of the New Testament is this colophon:

One copy only of this edition is known, which is in the Grenville Library in the British Museum.

It is not true, as is commonly said, that Joye 'expunged' the word 'resurrection' from his New Testament. It stands in such critical passages as Acts i. 22; iv. 2; xvii. 18, 32, &c.; 1 Cor. xv. 12, &c.; nor did Tindale bring this charge against him, but that 'throughout Matthew, Mark and Luke perpetually, and often in the Acts, and sometimes in John, and also in the Hebrews, where he findeth this word "Resurrection," he changeth it into the "life after this," "life," or "very life," and such like, as one that abhorred the name of the resurrection.' (W. T. yet once more to the Christian reader, in the N.T. of 1534.) Thus in Matt. xxii:

such as to arouse the just indignation of Tindale, whose name however is nowhere connected with the version. Among other new renderings Tindale specially notices that of 'the life after this' for 'resurrection.' Still Joye does not avoid the word 'resurrection'; and if this were the only change, the particular substitution would be of little moment in the connexion where it occurs, but comparatively few paragraphs are left wholly untouched as far as I have examined the book. One continuous passage will exhibit Joye's mode of dealing with the text. The words in italics are variations from Tindale:

'That thing (om. T.) which was from the beginning 'declare we unto you, (add. concerning T. 1st ed.) which we 'have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which 'we have looked upon, and our hands have handled; 'even that same thing which is (of the word of T.) life. For 'that (the T.) life appeared, and we have seen it (om. T.), 'wherefore we (and T.) bear witness and shew unto you 'that eternal life, which was with the Father and appeared 'unto us. That same thing (om. T.) which we have seen 'and heard declare we unto you, that ye may have fellow'ship with us, and that our fellowship may be with the 'Father and His Son Jesus Christ.' (1 John i. 1—3.)

Several of the changes noticed are suggested by the Vulgate; others are due apparently only to a mistaken effort to obtain clearness: none mark a critical examin-

23, 30, we read 'life after this'; xxii. 31. 'the life of them that be dead.'

So also Luke xx. 27, 33, 36 (children of that life). John v. 29 is translated 'and shall come forth, they that have 'done good unto the very life. And 'they that have done evil into the life 'of damnation.' In John xi. 24, 25 the word 'resurrection' is retained. From these examples it is obvious that Joye's object was simply exegetical in the particular passages which he altered, and that he had no desire to expunge the idea or the word 'resurrection' from his version. Later writers have not dealt justly with him.

1 that Word: and God was that Word. 4 life (om. the). 5 darkness (om. the). 10 and the world (om. yet). 11 into his own and his (om. own) received. 15 bare witness of him, saying. 16 favour for favour 17 favour and verity.

In Ephes. i. again these are found:

5 that we should be chosen to be heirs. 6 in his beloved son. 8 wisdom and prudence. 13 the Gospel of your health. 18 what thing that hope is.

ation of the original. But Joye knew that Tindale was studying the Greek afresh for his revised edition*, which he had had some time in hand, and so he might well be said not to have 'used the office of an honest man.' However Tindale's own work was ready in the November of the same year. The text was not only revised, but furnished also with short marginal notes. Prologues were added to the several books<sup>1</sup>; the beginnings and endings of the lessons read in Church were marked; and a translation of 'the Epistles taken oute of the olde testament, 'whiche are red in the church after the vse of Sals-burye vpon certen dayes of the yere,' which include a large number of fragments from the Old Testament and the Apocrypha, classed together by Tindale under one head<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The relation of the 'Epistles' containing translations of the Old Testament to the text of Tindale's continuous translation will be noticed afterwards. The following is (I hope) an accurate list of them. Gen. xxxvii. 6—22; Ex. xii. 1—11; xx. 12—24; xxiv. 12—18; Lev. xix. 1—18; Num. xx. 2—13; 1 Kings xvii. 17—24; xix. 3—8; Prov. xxxi. 10—31; Cant. ii. 1—14; Is. i. 16—19; ii. 1—5; vii. 10—15; xi. 1—5; xii. 1—6; xlix. 1—7; li. 1—8; liii. 1—12; lviii. 1—9; lx. 1—6; lxii. 6—12; Jerem. xvii. 13—18; xxiii. 5—8 (wrongly given xxxiii.); Ezek. i. 10—13; xviii. 20—28; xxxvi. 23—28; Joel ii. 12—19; 23—27; iii. 17—21; Hos. xiv. 1—9 (wrongly given xiii.); Amos ix. 13—15; Zech. ii. 10—13; viii. 3—8; Mal. iii. 1—4. From the Apocrypha, Esther xiii. 8—18; Wisd. v. 1—5; Eccclus. xv. 1—6; xxiv. 7—15; 17—22; xlv. 17; xlv. 4 (part); li. 9—12.

In his reference to these, Mr Anderson is singularly unhappy. He omits six of the chapters from which the passages are taken (he does not give the verses), and of those which he gives, six are wrong, from a confusion of x and v. He suppresses all the passages from the Apocrypha and converts Esther xiii. (apocryphal) into Esther viii. (canonical). He argues from the publication of these passages, 'that there were other chapters in 'manuscript' (1. p. 570), wholly neglecting to notice that these lessons were a definite collection from the service book. It is not generally worth while to note mistakes, but this error deserves to be signalized, because it does not spring from inaccuracy, but apparently in some degree from want of candour, for Mr Anderson labours to shew that Tindale would not have translated the Apocrypha. [This is hardly just to Anderson. He undoubtedly made mistakes in his account of the passages from the Old Testament translated by Tindale, but he omitted the references to the Apocrypha, not because he laboured to shew that Tindale would not have translated it, but because, regarding it as it is still regarded in Scotland, he did not concern himself with the history of its translation.

One of the few copies of this edition which have been preserved is of touching interest. Among the men who had suffered for aiding in the circulation of the earlier editions of the Testament was a merchant-adventurer of Antwerp, Mr Harman, who seems to have applied to Queen Anne Boleyn for redress. The Queen listened to the plea which was urged in his favour, and by her intervention he was restored to the freedom and privileges of which he had been deprived. Tindale could not fail to hear of her good offices, and he acknowledged them by a royal gift. He was at the time engaged in superintending the printing of his revised New Testament, and of this he caused one copy to be struck off on vellum and beautifully illuminated. No preface or dedication or name mars the simple integrity of this copy. Only on the gilded edges in faded red letters runs the simple title Anna Regina Angliæ<sup>1</sup>.

The interest of the Queen in the work of Tindale appears to have extended yet further<sup>2</sup>: an edition of his revised New Testament, the first volume of Holy Scripture printed in England, appeared in the year in which she was put to death (1536), and from the press of a printer with whom her party was connected<sup>3</sup>. Tindale, who suffered in

For this reason in giving an account of the Authorised Version he omits the Company appointed to revise the Apocrypha, and mentions them only in a footnote, as distinguished from those 'engaged upon the Sacred Text.' In the last Revision, only one of the Scotch members of the Companies took an active part in the revision of the Apocrypha. W. A. W.]

<sup>1</sup> The copy was bequeathed to the British Museum by the Rev. C. M. Cracherode in 1799, but I have been unable to learn its previous history. It may have been 'bound in blue 'morocco' when it was presented to Anne Boleyn, as Mr Anderson says (i. 413), though it is very unlikely: the present binding is obviously of the 18th century [and is stamped with the arms of Mr Cracherode].

The shield on the title-page is filled with the arms of France and England quarterly. The first quarter is defaced, and the outline of the wood-engraving below is mixed with the charge. The capitals [at the beginning of the several books] are exquisitely illuminated.

<sup>3</sup> This was not T. Berthelet, as is commonly supposed, but T. Godfray. This fact has been ascertained beyond all doubt by Mr Bradshaw. The engraved border, on the evidence of which the work has been assigned to the same year, may have been martyred before the book was finished, but at least he must have been cheered with the knowledge of its progress. He had worked for thirteen years in exile by foreign instruments, and now in his last moments he was allowed to rejoice in the thought that his labour had found its proper home in his own land. For this end he had constantly striven: for this he had been prepared to sacrifice everything else; and the end was gained only when he was called to die.

It is impossible to follow in detail the circumstances of Tindale's betrayal and martyrdom, yet the story is well worth pondering over. Some of the life-like touches in Foxe's narrative bring out the singleness of the character of the man whom he worthily called 'for his notable 'pains and travail an apostle of England.' One work had absorbed all his energy, and intent on that he had no eye for other objects. The traitor by whose devices he was taken (May, 1535) seemed to him, in spite of warnings, Berthelet, was used by Godfray before it passed into Berthelet's possession; and there is no evidence that Berthelet used it as early as 1536.

[ 'It is doubtful,' says Mr Jenkinson (Early English Printed Books in the University Library, Cambridge, III. p. 1730), 'whether this represents 'Mr Bradshaw's final opinion.' It is certain that the border in question was used by Berthelet in 1530 in a book printed by him, 'Gravissimæ ...Italiæ et Galliæ Academiæ' 'censuræ—de veritate illius propositionis...quod ducere relictam fratris 'mortui...sit de iure divino.' Again, it is found in another book also printed by him, Kotser codicis R. Waksfeldi, which must have been issued between 1533 and 1536, because of the references in it to Queen Anne Boleyn. According to Leland (De viris illustribus) Berthelet also printed an edition of Chaucer. (See Tyrwhitt's Chaucer, App. to Pref.)

If this is Thynne's edition of 1532, 'Printed by Thomas Godfray,' which has the same border on the title-page, it may throw some light on the relation between Godfray and Berthelet. From the undated edition (? 1550) which is said to have been 'printed 'by' each of the four booksellers, Bonham, Kele, Petit, and Teye, it is clear that 'printed by' sometimes meant 'printed for,' and therefore Thynne's edition may have been printed by Berthelet for Godfray. However this may be, it is not improbable that Tindale's New Testament of 1536, which has the same border, was printed by Berthelet, and it is certain, from the evidence given above, that Mr Bradshaw was mistaken in supposing that Berthelet did not use the border so early as 1536.]

honest, handsomely learned and very conformable.' He even furnished him with money, 'for in the wily subtilties 'of this world he was simple and inexpert.' But in defence of himself Tindale needed no counsel ; even by an adversary he was called 'a learned, pious and good man': his keeper, and his keeper's daughter, and others of his keeper's household were won over by him to his belief. His last prayer when fastened to the stake (Oct. 1536) witnessed equally to his loyalty and his faith : 'Lord ! open the King of England's 'eyes.'

Before his imprisonment Tindale revised his New Testament once again for the press. This last edition contains one innovation in the addition of headings to the chapters in the Gospels and Acts, but not in the Epistles ; and is without the marginal notes, which were added to the edition of 1534. But it is chiefly distinguished by the peculiarity of the orthography, which has received a romantic interpretation. Tindale, as we have seen, had affirmed that 'he who followeth the plough' should in a few years have a full knowledge of the Scripture, and from the occurrence of such words as maester, faether, moether, stoone, in this edition it was concluded by a biographer that in his last years he adapted his translation to 'the pronunciation of 'the peasantry.' The conjecture seemed plausible and it is scarcely surprising that it has been transformed by repetition into an acknowledged fact. It is however not borne out by an examination of the book itself. Whatever may be the explanation of the orthography it is evident from its inconsistency that it was not the result of any fixed design. Nay more, there is not the least reason to suppose that some of the forms are provincial, or that the forms as a whole would make the language plainer to rustics. The headings too, which have been also supposed to have been designed 'to help to the understanding of the subjects 'treated of,' just fail when on that theory they would be most needed<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Two copies of this edition are known. That which I have used is in the University Library at Cambridge. [The other is in the Library

But though this pleasant fancy of the literal fulfilment of an early promise must be discarded, Tindale achieved in every way a nobler fulfilment of it. Instead of lowering his translation to a vulgar dialect, he lifted up the common language to the grand simplicity of his own idiom. 'It pleased God,' as he wrote in his first Prologue, 'to put [the translation] in his mind,' and if we look at his life and his work, we cannot believe that he was left without the Spirit of God in the execution of it. His single honesty is beyond all suspicion. 'I call God to recorde,' so he writes to Fryth in the Tower, 1533, 'against y<sup>e</sup> day we shall appeare before our Lord Iesus, to geue a recknyng of our doings, that I neuer altered one sillable of Gods word agaynst my cōscience, nor would this day, if all that is in the earth, whether it be pleasure, honour or riches, might be geuen me!' Not one selfish thought mixed with his magnificent devotion. No treacherous intrigues ever shook his loyalty to his king: no intensity of distress ever obscured his faith in Christ. 'I assure you,' he said to a royal of Exeter College, Oxford, and there is a fragment in the British Museum.] The orthography in the Table of the four Evangelists and the Prologue to the Romans which follows (not displaced by the binder) offers no marked peculiarities. In sheet A we find aengell, waeye, faether, maske, waere, saeyde, moether, aroese, behoelde, toeke, harde (heard), &c., &c. In B, maester, mother, moether, father, sayd, or sayde (consistently), fayth, stoede, &c. In C, sayde, angels, moether, harde, maester, master, father, &c. In D, faether, moether, mother, sayde, hearde, &c. In F on one side, faether, moether, broether, and on the other, angels, sayde, daye, brother, told, hearde, &c. In Y and Z we have almost consistently faeyth, saeyde, hoepe, almoest, praye, &c. Yet again in b prayer, &c. In the headings of the Epistles we have saynct and sacynct. Some spellings certainly belong to a foreign compositor, thongs (tongues, 1 Cor.

xiii.) [but twice in the same page tonges]; though (taught). Some I cannot explain, caled (called), holly (holy), which forms are consistently used. Of possible explanations none seems more likely than that the copy was read to a Flemish compositor (at Brussels? or Malines?) and that the vowels simply give the Flemish equivalents of the English vowel sounds. See note at the end of the section, p. 54.

The text is carefully revised, as will be shewn afterwards, and the chapter headings are simply transferred from the table of the Gospels and Acts in the Testament of 1534. Mr F. Fry has since found substantially the same text in an edition dated 1534 (G. H.), i.e. probably 1535, January—March. [Mr Fry's copy, now in the Library of the Bible Society, has a title-page with the date 1535.]

envoy<sup>1</sup>, 'if it would stand with the king's most gracious 'pleasure to grant only a bare text of the Scripture to be 'put forth among his people, like as is put forth among 'the subjects of the emperor in these parts [the Nether- 'lands], and of other Christian princes, be it of the transla- 'tion of what person soever shall please his majesty, I shall 'immediately make faithful promise never to write more, 'nor abide two days in these parts, after the same; but 'immediately repair into his realm, and there most humbly 'submit myself at the feet of his royal majesty, offering my 'body, to suffer what pain or torture, yea, what death his 'grace will, so that this be obtained.' His life had seemed friendless, but his one dearest companion (Fryth) may interpret the temper common to them both. 'Doubt not,' he writes from the Tower to his desolate congregation, 'but 'that god...shal so prouide for you, that ye shall haue an 'hundred fathers for one, an hūdred mothers for one, an 'hundred houses for one, and that in this lyfe, as I haue 'proued by experience<sup>2</sup>.' We dilute the promise by our comments: these martyrs proved it in their lives.

The worth of Tindale as a scholar must be estimated by his translation, which will be examined afterwards. Of the spirit in which he undertook the great work of his life something has been said already. To the end he retained unchanged, or only deepened and chastened his noble forgetfulness of self in the prospect of its accomplishment, with a jealous regard for the sincere rendering of the Scriptures. Before he published the revised edition of 1534 he had been sorely tried by the interference of Joye, which might, as he thought, bring discredit to the Gospel itself.

<sup>1</sup> Vaughan's dispatch (1531) quoted by Anderson, i. p. 278. Fryth's language (1533) is to the same effect: 'This hath bene offered you, is offered, 'and shall be offered: Graunt that the 'word of God, I meane y<sup>e</sup> text of 'Scripture, may go abroad in our 'English tounge, as other nations 'haue it in their tounge, and my 'brother William Tyndall, and I haue 'done, & will promise you to write 'no more. If you wil not graunt this 'condition, then will we be doing 'while we haue breath, and shew in 'few wordes that the Scripture doth in 'many: and so at the lest saue some.' Fryth's Works, p. 115 (ed. 1573).

The passage with which he closes his disclaimer of Joye's edition reflects at once his vigour and its tenderness.* There is in it something of the freedom and power of Luther, but it is charged with a simple humility which Luther rarely if ever shews.... 'My part,' Tindale writes, 'be not in Christ if mine heart be not to follow and live according as I teach, and also if mine heart weep not night and day for mine own sin and other men's indifferently, beseeching God to convert us all and to take his wrath from us and to be merciful as well to all other men, as to mine own soul, caring for the wealth of the realm I was born in, for the king and all that are thereof, as a tender-hearted mother would do for her only son.

'As concerning all I have translated or otherwise written, I beseech all men to read it for that purpose I wrote it: even to bring them to the knowledge of the Scripture. And as far as the Scripture approveth it, so far to allow it, and if in any place the word of God disallow it, there to refuse it, as I do before our Saviour Christ and His congregation. And where they find faults let them shew it me, if they be nigh, or write to me if they be far off: or write openly against it and improve it, and I promise them, if I shall perceive that their reasons conclude I will confess mine ignorance openly.

'Wherefore I beseech George Joye, yea and all other too, for to translate the Scripture for themselves, whether out of the Greek, Latin or Hebrew. Or (if they will needs)...let them take my translations and labours, and change and alter, and correct and corrupt at their pleasures, and call it their own translations and put to their own names and not to play bo-peep after George Joye's manner...But I neither can nor will suffer of any man, that he shall go take my translation and correct it without name, and make such changing as I myself durst not do, as I hope to have my part in Christ, though the whole world should be given me for my labour<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> 'W. T. yet once more to the Christian Reader' in the N. T. of 1534. I cannot find this address in my copy of Tindale's Works published by the Parker Society. Part of it is given in the Life, pp. lxii. ff.

The Grenville fragment of Tindale's first quarto Testament with glosses has been perfectly reproduced in photo-lithography by Mr E. Arber, London, 1871.

The first octavo has been printed: (1) by Mr Offor [1836], but this edition, though verbally accurate, is wholly untrustworthy in spelling; and (2) in facsimile by Mr F. Fry [1862] with most scrupulous exactness.

The revised edition of 1534 (M. Emperour) is given in Bagster's Hexapla, carefully and well, as far as I have observed.

The final revision of 1535, 1534 G. H. has not yet been published as a whole or in a collation, though it is from this that Tindale's work has passed directly into our Authorised Version. [The edition of 1535 is probably an unauthorised reprint.]

NOTE to p. 51.

Mr F. Fry has made an ample collection of the spellings peculiar to or characteristic of the edition of 1535. By the help of this, which he most kindly communicated to me, I have drawn up the following table of the substitutions of vowel sounds. They seem to me to fall (as Mr W. A. Wright has suggested) under the general description which Bosworth has given of the peculiarities of the Flemish orthography: Anglo-Saxon Dictionary, p. cxi. The unequal distribution of the peculiarities to which attention has been called already (p. 51, note) is a most important fact in this connexion. [See Fry on Tindale's N.T., 1878, pp. 63-5.]

§ 2. COVERDALE.

Tindale's character is heroic. He could see clearly the work to which he was called and pursue it with a single unswerving faith in GOD and in the powers which GOD had given him. It was otherwise with Miles Coverdale, who was allowed to finish what Tindale left incomplete. The differences of the men are written no less on their features than on their lives. But our admiration for the solitary massive strength of the one must not make us insensible to the patient labours and tender sympathy of the other<sup>1</sup>. From the first Coverdale appears to have attached himself to the liberal members of the old party and to have looked to working out a reformation from within through them. As early as 1527 he was in intimate connexion with Crumwell and More<sup>2</sup>; and in all probability it was under their patronage that he was able to prepare for his translation of Holy Scripture. How long he thus laboured we cannot tell<sup>3</sup>. In 1529 he met Tindale at Hamburg<sup>4</sup>, and must have continued abroad for a considerable part of the following years up to 1536. In the meantime a great change had passed over England since

Some sounds are expressed in different ways, especially 'o.' Thus we have aloene and aloone; boeldely and booldly; boethe and booth; coete and coote; hoeme and hoome; loeke and louke (loke 1534); noene and noane; stoene and stoone; thoese and thoouse; whoem and whoom. So also we have theare and there; tought and thaught (taught).

Other exceptional forms are tappe (top), touth (to the 1534), waere and wore (where), woeld (would), te (the), mouny (money).

<sup>3</sup> In an undated letter to Crumwell he says, evidently in reference to some specific 'communication' from him, 'Now I begin to taste of Holy Scriptures...Nothing in the world I desire but books as concerning my learning: they once had, I do not doubt, but Almighty God shall perform that in me which he of his plentiful favour and grace hath begun.' Anderson fixes this in 1531. The letter however from style seems to be nearly contemporary with another addressed to Crumwell in 1527. [State Papers, I. 383.]

the 'Bill' of 1530<sup>1</sup>. At the close of 1534 a convocation under the presidency of Cranmer had agreed to petition the king that he would 'vouchsafe to decree that the Scriptures should be translated into the vulgar tongue, by some 'honest and learned men, to be nominated by the king, and 'to be delivered to the people according to their learning<sup>2</sup>.' Crumwell, who must have been well aware of the turn which opinion had taken, seems now to have urged Coverdale to commit his work to the press. At any rate by 1534 he was ready, 'as he was desired,' 'to set forth' (i.e. to publish) his translation<sup>3</sup>, and the work was finished in October, 1535.

But up to the present time the place where it was printed is wholly undetermined, though most bibliographers agree that it was printed abroad. Various conjectures have been made, but when examined minutely they are found to be unsupported by any substantial evidence. The woodcuts and type are certainly not those used by Egenolph of Frankfort, to which however they bear a very close resemblance<sup>4</sup>. On the other hand, no book printed by Froschover of Zurich has yet been found with more than the two larger kinds of type used in Coverdale's Bible<sup>5</sup>. The question is further complicated by the fact that the title-page and

<sup>2</sup> Strype, Cranmer, p. 34 (ed. 1812). It is uncertain whether it was after this resolution (as seems most likely), or not till after the corresponding resolutions of 1536, that Cranmer endeavoured to engage the bishops in a translation or revision of the English Bible [New Testament], of which attempt Strype has preserved an amusing anecdote: Cranmer, p. 48.

Strype says that Cranmer took 'an 'old English translation which he 'divided into nine or ten parts...to 'be sent to the best learned bishops 'and others, to the intent they should 'make a perfect correction thereof.' It has been argued that the epithet 'old' can only refer to a copy of the Wycliffite version—as if that were available for such a purpose; but in point of fact the epithet is not found in Foxe's MSS. [Harl. MS. 422, Plut. lxx. E fol. 87], to which Strype refers as the authority for his account.

<sup>3</sup> The date is added in the edition of 1550. The words do not imply that he commenced it then.

<sup>5</sup> Mr Fry, l.c. p. 28. It is right to add that I am convinced, on internal grounds, that Froschover was the printer, though at present no satisfactory direct evidence of the fact can be adduced. Froschover, it may be added, printed the edition of 1550.

preliminary matter were reprinted in a different (English) type<sup>1</sup>, and the five remaining title-pages represent three

Dr Ginsburg informs me that he has complete typographical proof that the Bible was printed by Frosch-over. [See the article on Coverdale by Mr Tedder in the Dict. of Nat. Biography.]

[In the Catalogue of the Caxton Exhibition in 1877 the late Henry Stevens of Vermont propounded (pp. 86—90) a theory that the Bible of 1535 was printed at Antwerp by Jacob von Meteren at his own cost, and that the translation was his work, Coverdale occupying the humbler position of corrector of the press. This theory would have been grotesque but for the fact that it was adopted by the authorities of the British Museum in their Catalogue, in which Antwerp is given as the place of printing and Van Meteren as the printer, without a hint that these were in any way doubtful. All this cobweb is spun out of the simple statement by Simeon Ruytinck, in his Leven van Emanuel van Meteren (E. van Meteren, Nederlandische Historie, 1614, fol. 672), that his father, Jacob van Meteren, had in his youth learnt the art of printing and had shewn especial zeal in defraying the expenses of translating and printing the English Bible in Antwerp, employing for the purpose a learned student, Miles Coverdale by name. This is probably what Ruytinck heard, not quite accurately, from Emanuel; but in a document in the possession of the Dutch Church, Austen Friars, Emanuel himself in 1610 deposes, 'That he was brought to England Anno 1550, in King Edward's the 6th dayes, by his Father, a furtherer of reformed religion, and he that caused the first Bible at his costes to be Englished by Mr Myles Coverdale in Andwarp, the w<sup>ch</sup> his father, with

'Mr Edward Whytchurch, printed both in Paris and London.' (See Introduction to the Registers of the Dutch Reformed Church, by W. J. C. Moens, 1884.)

There is nothing in either of these statements to imply anything so absurd as that the first English Bible was translated by a Dutchman, and the only safe inference that can be drawn from them is that Jacob van Meteren found means which enabled Coverdale to carry out his work of translation at Antwerp. So far the two accounts agree. But according to Ruytinck the printing also was done at Antwerp, whereas Emanuel van Meteren places it at Paris and London. This fact, together with the introduction of the name of Edward Whitchurch, makes it probable that the English Bible with which Jacob van Meteren had to do was rather Matthew's of 1537 or the Great Bible of 1539 and not Coverdale's of 1535.

Whitchurch's initials are conspicuous in the Bible of 1537, and he was on intimate terms with Rogers, for it was to his house that Rogers appears to have come on his return to England in 1548. He was also associated with Grafton in printing the Great Bible.

In estimating the value of Emanuel van Meteren's evidence, it must be remembered that his knowledge could only have been derived from hearsay, for he was not born till 1535.

No trace of Jacob van Meteren has been found among the Antwerp printers.]

distinct issues, two in 1535, and one in 1536. Two copies<sup>1</sup> have a title-page corresponding to the body of the book, dated 1535, and one<sup>2</sup> of them preserves a single page of the original preliminary matter. Another copy<sup>3</sup> has a title-page in English type, corresponding to the English preliminary matter, dated also 1535. The two other title-pages are printed in English type, but with the date 1536<sup>4</sup>. Thus there can be no reason to doubt that the book was issued both with the foreign and English title-pages, &c.<sup>5</sup>, though it may still be doubted whether the English title-page, &c. belong to 1536 or to 1535<sup>6</sup>.

One important difference between the foreign and English title-pages must be noticed. In the former it is said that the book is 'faithfully and truly translated out of 'Douche [German] and Latyn in to Englishe': in the latter the sources of the version are left unnoticed, and it is said simply to be 'faithfully translated into English.' It is possible that the explanatory words taken in connexion with some further details in the original prologue may have been displeasing to the promoters of the edition<sup>7</sup>, and that a new and less explicit title-page, &c. was substituted for

It is of course impossible to determine the cause of the suppression of the foreign title-page and Prologue. Coverdale may have explained too much in detail 'the Douche and 'Latyn' sources from which he borrowed to suit the wishes of his patrons or publishers. The change in the title-page suggests the conjecture, which is however otherwise unsupported.

<sup>6</sup> It is possible (as has been suggested to me) that when some copies of the English title-page had been struck off with the date 1535, corresponding to the imprint, this date was afterwards changed in the setting of the page to 1536 to suit the actual time of the English issue; so that the two title-pages belong really only to one issue. The only difference observable in the facsimiles of the two title-pages is the inversion of one of the ornaments on the side of BIBLIA.

<sup>7</sup> [The less subtle explanation of Stevens (Bibles in the Caxton Exhibition, p. 70) is probably the true one. The title is in a woodcut border, and when the two lines of the quotation from Joshua were added, space had to be provided for them by omitting some of the preceding words.]

the first. However this may have been, the statement itself, as will be seen afterwards, was literally true, and Coverdale describes clearly enough in the existing prologue the secondary character of his work<sup>1</sup>.

Coverdale indeed disclaims the originality which friends and detractors have alike assigned to him. And it is in this that the true beauty and truth of his nature are seen. He distinctly acknowledges that he could but occupy for a time the place of another; nay he even looks to this as the best fruit of his labours that he should call out a worthier successor to displace himself. 'Though it [Scripture],' he writes, 'be not worthely ministred vnto the [Christian reader] in this translacyon (by reason of my rudnes); 'Yet yf thou be feruēt in thy prayer, God shal not onely sende it the in a better shappe, by the mynistracyon of ether that beganne it afore [Tindale], but shall also moue the hertes of them, which as yet medled not withall, to take it in hande, and to bestowe the gifte of theyr vnderstondynge thereon'....

Yet in the meantime he saw that there was something for him to do. It was a noble end if he could secure that Holy Scripture should be 'set forth' (as he was able to obtain) 'with the Kynges most gracious license.' And so plainly disclosing his motives he says... 'whan I cōsydered how greate pytie it was that we shulde wante it so longe, & called to my remembraunce y<sup>e</sup> aduersite of them, which were not onely of rype knowlege, but wolde also with all theyr hertes haue perfourmed y<sup>t</sup> they beganne, yf they had not had impediment.....these and other reasonable causes consydered I was the more bolde to take it in priateness of epithets was not much considered by early editors. Mr Fry has shewn, l.c. pp. 10 ff., that all the dedications found in copies of the first edition with Q. Jane's name belong to the edition of 1537.

'I doute not but thou wilt helpe to amende it, yf loue be

The translation of Tindale went forth to the world without any dedication or author's name. All that was personal was sunk in the grandeur of the message opened to Englishmen. But it could not be so with Coverdale's. His object was to bring about the open circulation of the Scriptures, and that could only be by securing the king's favour. To this end the work was dedicated to Henry VIII in language which to us now is in many parts strangely painful, though it was not out of harmony with the taste and peculiar circumstances of the time<sup>2</sup>.

... 'I thought it my dutye,' he says, 'and to belonge
'vnto my allegiaunce, whan I had translated this Bible, not
'onely to dedicate this translacyon vnto youre hyghnesse,
'but wholly to commytte it vnto the same: to the intent 'that yf any thyng therin be translated amysse (for in 'many thynges we fayle, euen whan we thynke to be sure)
'it may stōde in youre graces handes, to correcte it, to 'amende it, to improue it, yee & cleane to reiecte it, yf 'your godly wysdome shall thynke it necessary.' But even so the spirit of the humble and true scholar asserts itself. For he continues, 'And as I do with all humblenes
'submitte myne vnderstondynge and my poore translacyon
'vnto y<sup>e</sup> spirite of trueth in your grace, so make I this 'protestacyon (hauyng God to recorde in my cōscience),
'that I haue nether wrested nor altered so moch as one
'worde for the mayntenaūce of any maner of secte: but 'haue with a cleare conscience purely & faythfully translated
'this out of fyue sundry interpreters, hauyng onely the 'manyfest trueth of the scripture before myne eyes<sup>3</sup>...'.

<sup>2</sup> The Dedication of the Authorised Version is even more painful and less capable of excuse. It seems strange that this should hold its place in our

Still acting on the broad principle of 'becoming all 'things to all men,' Coverdale afterwards (1538) revised his New Testament, according to the Latin and published it with the Vulgate in parallel columns<sup>1</sup>. His great object was to interpret the Latin itself to some who used it ignorantly, and also to shew openly the substantial identity of Scripture in different languages. Many disparaged this translation or that... 'as though,' he says, 'the holy goost 'were not the authoure of his scripture aswell in the 'Hebrue, Greke, French, Dutche, and in Englysh, as in 'Latyn. The scripture & worde of God is truly to euery 'Christē man of lyke worthynesse and authorite, in what 'language so euer the holy goost speaketh it. And ther- 'fore am I, and wyl be whyle I lyue (vnder youre moost 'gracious fauoure and correction)'—he is still addressing Henry VIII—'alwaye wylynge and ready to do my best 'aswel in one translation, as in another<sup>2</sup>.' And thus in the <sup>1</sup> Of this Latin-English Testament there are three editions. The first was printed by Nyclson 1538 and dedicated to Henry VIII. This was executed while Coverdale was in Paris and disowned by him on the ground that 'as it was disagreable to my 'former translation in English, so 'was not the true copy of the Latin 'text observed' (Remains, p. 33). Accordingly he revised it, weeding out 'the faults that were in the Latin 'and English before' (id.), and printed a new edition in Paris in the same year, which was published by Grafton and Whitchurch, and dedicated to Lord Crumwell. Nyclson however put forth another impression of his edition under the name of John Hollybushe (1538).

It is probable that Coverdale simply left instructions with the printer as to how the work should be done, not foreseeing the difficulties which would arise, and that the printer engaged Hollybushe to superintend the work, which Coverdale when he saw it disavowed. Coverdale's own Testament is an adaptation of his version to the Latin. Hollybushe's is a new version from the Latin on the basis of Coverdale's. Specimens are given in App. vi.

The titles of the two principal editions are the following:

The newe testament both Latine and Englyshe ech correspondent to the other after the vulgare text, comunely called S. Ieroms. Faythfully translated by Myles Couerdale Anno M.CCCCC.XXXVIII....Printed in Southwarke by Iames Nicolson. Set forth wyth the Kynges moost gracious licence.

The new testamen both in Latin and English after the vulgare texte: which is red in the church. Translated and corrected by Myles Couerdale: and prynted in Paris, by Fraunces Regnault. M.CCCCC.XXXVIII. in Noiembre...Cum gratia & privilegio regis.

particular case of translations from different texts he re-affirms his general principle of the utility of various translations, applied before to various renderings of the same text ... 'for thy part, most gentle reader, take in good worth that I here offer thee with a good will, and let this present translation be no prejudice to the other, that out of the Greek have been translated before, or shall be hereafter. For if thou open thine eyes and consider well the gift of the Holy Ghost therein, thou shalt see that one translation declareth, openeth, and illustrateth another, and that in many places one is a plain commentary unto another<sup>1</sup>.'

It is very difficult to ascertain the exact relation in which the first edition of Coverdale's Bible stood to the civil authority. There can be no doubt that it was undertaken by the desire of Crumwell, and its appearance may have been hastened by the change of feeling which found expression in the resolutions of Convocation in 1534, though it could not have owed its origin to them. But when it was finished in October 1535 Crumwell appears to have been unable to obtain a definite license from the king, or it may be that he thought it more prudent to await the publication of the book. So much is certain that the first edition went forth without any distinct royal sanction. The book was not suppressed, and this was all<sup>2</sup>. But Convocation was not satisfied; and in 1536 they again petitioned that a new translation might be undertaken. Nothing however was presented to the King must have been that of 1535. According to Coverdale, the Bishops to whom it was referred said there were many faults in it, but admitted there were no heresies. 'Then,' said the King, 'in God's name let it go abroad among our people,' and accordingly the 4<sup>o</sup> edition printed by Nyclolson in 1537 bore on the title-page, 'Set forth with the Kinges moost gracious licence.' After this it is hardly likely that the Great Bible also would be referred to the Bishops.]

done; but the relation in which the king stood to the Papal See had already given greater importance to the public recognition of the supremacy of Scripture.

So it happened that when a council was held in the next year under the presidency of Crumwell, as vicar-general, to determine certain articles of faith, the varieties of opinion about Scripture found vigorous expression. Alexander Ales has left a vivid account of the meeting which has been transcribed by Foxe. 'At the king's pleasure all the learned men, but especially the bishops, assembled, to whom this matter seemed chiefly to belong ..... The bishops and prelates attending upon the coming of Crumwell, as he was come in, rose up and did obeisance unto him as to their vicar-general, and he again saluted every one in their degree, and sat down in the highest place at the table, according to his degree and office.....' Thereupon Crumwell opened the discussion by sketching in a short speech the king's purpose and commands. He will not, he said, 'admit any articles or doctrine not contained in the Scripture, but approved only by continuance of time and old custom, and by unwritten verities, as ye were wont to do..... His majesty will give you high thanks, if ye will set and conclude a godly and a perfect unity: whereunto this is the only way and mean, if ye will determine all things by the Scripture, as God commandeth you in Deuteronomy; which thing his majesty exhorteth and desireth you to do.' On this 'the bishops rose up altogether giving thanks unto the king's majesty ..... for his most godly exhortation.....' There was less unanimity afterwards. The discussion turned upon the Sacraments. Cranmer wisely urged moderation and accuracy of definition. Ales, at the invitation of Crumwell, proceeded to investigate the meaning of the word. Stokesley, bishop of London, interrupted him as he was examining the opinions of the fathers, and was in turn checked by Fox of Hereford, who reminded both that 'they were commanded by the king that these controversies should be determined only by the rule and judgment of the 'Scripture.' Then specially addressing the bishops he continued.....'The lay people do now know the holy 'Scripture better than many of us; and the Germans have 'made the text of the Bible so plain and easy, by the 'Hebrew and Greek tongues, that now many things may 'be better understood without any glosses at all than by all 'the commentaries of the doctors. And, moreover, they 'have so opened these controversies by their writings, that 'women and children may wonder at the blindness and 'falsehood that have been hitherto... Truth is the daughter 'of time, and time is the mother of truth; and whatsoever 'is besieged of truth cannot long continue; and upon 'whose side truth doth stand, that ought not to be thought 'transitory, or that it will ever fall...' But Stokesley, hard pressed in the argument, replied to Ales with inconsiderate warmth.....'Ye are far deceived if ye think that there is 'none other word of God but that which every souter and 'cobbler doth read in their mother tongue. And if ye 'think that nothing pertaineth unto the Christian faith, 'but that only that is written in the Bible, then err ye 'plainly with the Lutherans'.....'Now when the right noble 'lord Crumwell, the archbishop, with the other bishops, who 'did defend the pure doctrine of the Gospel, heard this, 'they smiled a little one upon another, forasmuch as they 'saw him flee, even in the very beginning of the disputation, 'unto his old rusty sophistry and unwritten verities.....' 'Thus, through the industry of Crumwell, the colloquies 'were brought to this end, that albeit religion could not 'wholly be reformed, yet at that time there was some 'reformation had throughout all England<sup>1</sup>.'

In the meantime the first edition of Coverdale's Bible was exhausted. The fall and death of Queen Anne, which had seemed likely to be fatal to the cause of the reformers, had not stayed the desire for the vernacular Scriptures which sprang from popular and not from political impulses. The feeling of the clergy and the bishops was indeed divided on the question, but even among them the king could find sufficient support to justify a decided step in directly authorising the publication of the English Bible<sup>1</sup>. Two editions of Coverdale's translation, in folio and quarto, 'overseen and corrected,' were published by Nycolson in Southwark in 1537, and for the first time the quarto has 'Set forth with the Kinges moost gracious licence.' The name of Queen Jane was substituted for that of Queen Anne in the dedication without further change, and at length the English Bible was not only tacitly overlooked but distinctly allowed to circulate freely. Coverdale, through Crumwell's influence, had established a precedent, and successors were found at once to avail themselves of it.

The revised edition of Coverdale differs slightly in text and arrangement from that of 1535. One significant addition is worthy of notice, a prayer to be used before reading the Bible 'Because that whan thou goest to studye in ' holy scripture thou shuldest do it with reuerence, therefore ' for thyn instruccyon and louynge admonicyon therto, the ' Reuerende father in God, Nicolas<sup>2</sup>, Bysshoppe of Salis- ' bury hath prescrybed this prayer folowinge, taken out of ' the same.

<sup>1</sup> According to Foxe, Crumwell, as Vice-gerent, issued in 1536 an injunction that by Aug. 1 every church should be provided with 'a book of ' the whole Bible, both in Latin, and ' also in English...for every man that ' will, to look and read thereon...' (Foxe, Acts and Monuments, v. 167.)

It is however certain that this injunction was not published. The original draught may have contained the provision, which is the more likely as it is not similar in form to the corresponding injunction of 1538.

§ 3 MATTHEW (ROGERS).

Coverdale, we have seen, looked earnestly for the displacing of his own work by another. His prayers and the prayers of his readers were answered sooner than he could have hoped. Tindale, at the time of his martyrdom, had published of the Old Testament the Pentateuch and book of Jonah, with a few detached pieces, being 'Epistles from the Old Testament according to the use of Salisbury,' including Lessons from Ecclesiasticus and Wisdom<sup>2</sup>. But he had left in manuscript, according to universal belief, a version of the books from Joshua to 2 Chronicles inclusive, which came into the hands of his friend John Rogers. This work was not to be lost; so Rogers, by the help of an unknown fellow-labourer, Thomas Matthew, or simply under this assumed name<sup>3</sup>, put together a composite Bible made

<sup>1</sup> [This prayer is also found on the back of the title of a copy of the Bible of 1535 which is in the Cambridge University Library.] Coverdale's Bible of 1535 has been reprinted by Bagster, London, 1838; and, as far as I can judge, the reprint has been very well executed. [It was made from a copy then in the library of the Duke of Sussex, and now in my possession (W. A. W.)]

<sup>2</sup> This alone is sufficient to refute Anderson's supposition that Tindale, if he had lived, would not have been guilty of printing the Apocryphal with the Canonical Books. [See p. 47.]

tion of John Rogers and Thomas Matthew. The name Thomas Matthew stands at the end of the dedication and the initials I.R. at the end of the Exhortation to the study of Scripture. In the official sentence Rogers is described as 'Johannes Rogers alias Mathew, presbyter secularis' (Foxye, Acts, ed. 1563, p. 1029), and the earliest writers assume the identity of Rogers and Matthew. Compare Strype, Mem. III. 1, p. 288.

It is of course quite possible that the identification simply expressed the known responsibility of Rogers for the Bible called Matthew's. Compare Chester's Life of J. Rogers (London, 1861), pp. 47 f., 55 f., 113. At the up of Tindale's translation from Genesis to 2 Chronicles, and his revised New Testament of 1535 (or 1534 G. H.)<sup>1</sup>, with the remainder of the Old Testament including Jonah<sup>2</sup>, and the Apocrypha from Coverdale. The expense of the work was defrayed by two citizens of London, R. Grafton and E. Whitchurch, and it was printed abroad<sup>3</sup>. It was same time it must be observed that the Christian name as well as the surname is changed, and the earliest evidence does not recognize this change.

tracts. [See p. 44.] It has been published with the Prologue and Coverdale's version by Mr F. Fry in facsimile (1863). As some writers still venture to say that Matthew gives Tindale's and not Coverdale's version, it may be worth while to indicate the various readings of one chapter (chap. ii.).

ready for publication in 1537, and furnished with a dedication to Henry, drawn up in terms exactly similar in tenor to those which have been already quoted; 'for vnto whom,' Matthew asks, 'or in to whose proteccyon shulde the defence 'of soche a worck be soner cōmytted (wherin are containyd 'the infallyble promeses of mercy...wyth the whole summe 'of Christyanitye) then vnto his maiestye, which not onely 'by name and tittle, but most euydently & openly, most 'Christenly & wyth most Godly pollicye, dothe profess 'the defence therof.' Whether Cranmer was privy to the preparation of this edition or not is uncertain<sup>1</sup>, but it is evident that the authors of it had good reason to be assured that he would welcome its appearance. The first tidings of its arrival in England is contained in a letter which he addressed to Crumwell<sup>2</sup>. 'My especial good lord...', he writes, 'these 'shall be to signify unto the same, that you shall receive by 'the bringer thereof a bible in English, both of a new 'translation and of a new print, dedicated unto the king's 'majesty, as farther appeareth by a pistle unto his grace in 'the beginning of the book, which in mine opinion is very 'well done, and therefore I pray your lordship to read the 'same. And as for the translation, so far as I have read 'thereof, I like it better than any other translation heretofore made; yet not doubting but that there may and will 'be found some fault therein, as you know no man ever contents of Cranmer's letter to Crumwell of Aug. 13th, and wrote to Crumwell with a present of six Bibles on the same day that Cranmer wrote the second letter of thanks. Cranmer's Works, p. 346 n. (ed. Park. Soc.).

'did or can do so well, but it may be from time to time amended. And forasmuch as the book is dedicated unto the king's grace, and also great pains and labour taken in setting forth of the same; I pray you, my Lord, that you will exhibit the book unto the king's highness, and to obtain of his grace, if you can, a licence that the same may be sold and read of every person, without danger of any act, proclamation, or ordinance, heretofore granted to the contrary, until such time that we the bishops shall set forth a better translation, which I think will not be till a day after doomsday<sup>1</sup>. And if you continue to take such pains for the setting forth of God's word, as you do, although in the mean season you suffer some snubs, and many slanders, lies, and reproaches for the same, yet one day He will requite altogether...' He was not long in waiting for the news of Crumwell's success. In little more than a week he thanks him for that he 'hath not only exhibited the bible...to the king's majesty, but also hath obtained of his grace, that the same shall be allowed by his authority to be bought and read within this realm...<sup>2</sup>'; and he continues, 'you have shewed me more pleasure herein, than if you had given me a thousand pound...<sup>3</sup>'. Nor was he satisfied with this first acknowledgment. A fortnight afterwards he writes again: 'These shall be to give you most hearty thanks that any heart can think, and that in the name of them all which favoureth God's word, for your diligence at this time in procuring the king's highness to set forth the said God's word and his gospel by his grace's authority. For the which act, not only the king's majesty, but also you shall have a perpetual laud and memory of all them that be now, or hereafter shall be, God's faithful people and the favourers of his word<sup>4</sup>'.

The work which Crumwell had achieved was certainly one which required great address. The Preface to the Bible, to which Cranmer specially called his attention, may have smoothed his way; but the king could not have been ignorant that the translation was in part the very work of Tindale, which he had by the advice of his council condemned more than once. The Prologue to the Romans had been condemned separately and was not to be easily overlooked, and the most superficial inspection would have shewn the boldness of the notes with which the text was copiously furnished<sup>1</sup>. It is impossible to tell what considerations availed with Henry. He may have been glad to act independently of the bishops. But however this may have been, by Cranmer's petition, by Crumwell's influence, and by Henry's authority, without any formal ecclesiastical decision, the book was given to the English people, which is the foundation of the text of our present Bible. From Matthew's Bible—itself a combination of the labours of Tindale and Coverdale—all later revisions have

<sup>1</sup> The notes in Matthew are distributed not quite equally throughout the Old and New Testament. [Many of them are from Lefèvre's French Bible of 1534. See Appendix XI. for examples from each book.] The commentary on the Psalms is the most elaborate. On the Apocryphal books I have noticed only a few various readings (2 Esdr. iv.: Tob. xii.: Eccles. xxxiii.: 2 Macc. ii.), and two notes: one on 2 Macc. iv. 'Olympiades: These were kepte euery 'fiftye yere (sic),' where 'fiftye' [=fifte] is a misprint for Coverdale's 'fifth'; and the other of considerable interest on 2 Macc. xii. [expanded from Olivetan]. 'Judge upon this 'place whether the opinion hath been 'to pray for the dead, as to be bap- 'tised for them, 1 Cor. xv., which 'thing was only done to confirm the 'hope of the resurrection of the dead, 'not to deliver them from any pain. 'S. Paul did not allow the ceremony 'of Christening for the dead, no more 'doth any place of the canonical

'scripture allow the ceremony of 'offering for the dead. Furthermore: 'This whole book of the Maccabees, 'and especially this second, is not 'of sufficient authority to make an 'article of our faith, as it is before 'sufficiently proved by the authority 'of S. Jerome in the prologue of the 'books called Apocrypha.' [The Prayer of Manasses is taken literally from Olivetan.]

One or two other notes may be quoted: John vi. 33. 'The word of 'the Gospel which is Christ, is the 'true and lively bread of heaven that 'giveth life to the whole world.' [From Lefèvre's French Bible of 1534.] John v. 2. 'Slaughter house. 'The Greek hath sheep house, a place 'where they killed the beasts that 'were offered.' James ii. 24. 'Justified, that is, is declared just, is 'openly known to be righteous, like 'as by the fruits the good tree is 'known for good. Otherwise may 'not this sentence be interpreted...'

been successively formed. In that the general character and mould of our whole version was definitely fixed. The labours of the next seventy-five years were devoted to improving it in detail.

Matthew's Bible must have been eagerly welcomed. In the same year in which it was imported a scheme was made for reprinting it in England in a smaller form by 'Douce men living within this realm,' 'for covetousness'.<sup>1</sup> Grafton, who had ventured a large sum upon the original edition, which consisted of fifteen hundred copies, begged Crumwell for protection, and suggested that he might command in the king's name 'that every curate have one of them...yea and that every Abbey should have six...yea,' he adds, 'I would none other but they of the Papistical sort should be compelled to have them. It does not appear what answer Crumwell gave. His action at least was effectual; for there is no reason to think that the reprint was ever executed'.<sup>2</sup> Grafton and Whitchurch were reimbursed for their expenditure; and in the next year they were ready to embark in a new enterprise, which was designed to supplant their first, and was undertaken under the direct patronage of Crumwell<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Taverner's Bible does not answer fully to the description; otherwise it might be supposed that this 'smaller' edition was meant.

On the other hand Mr F. Fry informs me that 'Mr Lenox has the centre of a first title and last leaf of 'a Matthew which he considers to belong to the pirated edition,' and that he himself has 'two leaves which may be of it.' [I have no information with regard to the title and last leaf in Mr Lenox's Library, but the other two leaves mentioned by Mr Fry, which are now in the Library of the Bible Society, are not what he supposed them to be. In the copy of Matthew's Bible in the Cambridge University Library they are inserted in their proper place in the Apocrypha, foll. 12, 13, and were apparently reprinted to make good a defective quire. They are distinguished by the use of the comma instead of the virgule, but the differences in the text are trifling, and shew that the leaves were not cancelled on account of any error. I have not at present found another copy in which the reprinted leaves occur in their place W. A. W.]

§ 4. THE GREAT BIBLE (CRUMWELL, CRANMER, TUNSTALL AND HEATH).

It is indeed evident that Crumwell's zeal for the circulation of the vernacular Scriptures could not be satisfied with the license which he had obtained for the Bibles of Coverdale and Matthew. The first was imperfect in its conception: the second was burdened with notes and additions which could not fail sooner or later to call out bitter antagonism. Under these circumstances he appears to have applied to Coverdale, who was in England in the early part of 1538, to undertake the charge of a new edition on the basis of Matthew's, but with a more complete critical collation of the Hebrew and Latin texts than had been hitherto attempted. Grafton and Whitchurch had earned by their former work the privilege of undertaking the conduct of this, but the resources of the English press were not adequate to carry it out as Crumwell wished. And so

p. 27 n.). It was also revised by E. Becke, and his altered text was published in 1549 by Daye and Seres (both folio and 8vo). I have not however examined the texts of these editions at any length, but a cursory collation shews considerable differences in the reproductions both of Matthew and of Becke's revision, which extend alike to text and notes. An edition by Daye, 1551 (with 3 Macc.), gives the Old Testament text of Taverner, though it is called 'Matthew's.'

[The editions of 1549 printed by Raynalde and Hyll, and of 1551 by Hyll alone, for 'certayne honest men 'of the occupacyon,' are little more than reprints of Matthew's Bible of 1537, with the addition of Tindale's prologues to some of the books. The edition of 1549 has the prologues to the books of the Pentateuch, Jonah, and the Epistle to the Romans, but not those to the New Testament, the Gospels or the other Epistles, while they are all given in the edition by Hyll in 1551.

Becke's edition of 1549 by Daye and Seres and that of 1551 by Daye alone contain all Tindale's prologues. The notes from Matthew are considerably altered in both, but in the 1549 edition the text is not substantially changed. In 1551 Becke with slight alterations adopted Taverner's text of the Old Testament except in Deut. xxxii.—Joshua xiii. and the Psalms. He added the third book of Maccabees, and gave a new translation of 3 Esdras, Tobit, and Judith (see Dore's Old Bibles, 2nd ed. pp. 144 &c.). Becke had nothing to do with the edition printed by Hyll in 1551, as stated in the account given of him in the Dictionary of National Biography.

In the book of Revelation in Becke's edition of 1549 the woodcuts are accompanied by descriptions in doggerel verse. In the edition of 1551 woodcuts and verse are omitted.] about Lent Coverdale proceeded with Grafton to Paris to superintend the printing there. A license was obtained from Francis for the execution of the work<sup>1</sup>, which was commenced on a splendid scale by Regnault. Coverdale pressed forward the enterprise with all haste, for even from the first they were 'dayly threatened,' and looked 'ever 'to be spoken withall.' By September he could inform Crumwell that 'Youre Lordshippes worke of the Bible... 'goeth well forward, and within few monethes, will drawe 'to an ende, by the grace of Allmightie God.' Three months later when the text was almost finished the danger of interruption to the printing became imminent. Coverdale conveyed as much of the Bible as was ready to Crumwell by the help of Bishop Bonner, ambassador at Paris, that 'if these men proceed in their cruelty against us, and 'confiscate the rest yet this at the least may be safe<sup>2</sup>.' In four days more the expected inhibition came. An order from the Inquisitor-general for France forbade the further progress of the work and the removal of the printed sheets. Coverdale and Grafton made their escape, but not long after returned to Paris and conveyed presses, types and workmen to London, and even rescued a large quantity of the condemned sheets—'four great dry-vats' full—which had been sold to a tradesman as waste-paper, instead of being burnt. Thus that which had seemed to be for the hindrance of Crumwell's design really forwarded it permanently in a wonderful manner by introducing into England the materials and men best suited to carry it out. The Bible, henceforth known as the Great Bible<sup>3</sup>, was finished in April, but without the critical and explanatory com-clause was of course sufficiently wide to admit of the interference of the Inquisition.

While the revision was going forward he had set 'in a pryvate table the 'dyversitie of redinges of all textes [Hebrew, Chaldee, 'Greek, Latin], with such annotacions, in another table, as 'shall douteles delucidate and clear the same, as well with- 'out any singularyte of opinions, as all checkinges and 'reprofes'. it must be carefully borne in mind that these seven issues do not give the same text, however like they may be externally. The text of 1539 is quite distinct from that of April, 1540, and this again from that of November, 1540, 1541, which is in the main the text of the later reprints. Compare Chap. III.

It is worthy of remark that this Bible has no dedication. The title-page—said to have been designed by Holbein—represents (at the top) the king giving the Bible (Verbum Dei) to Crumwell and Cranmer: they in turn (on the sides) distribute it among ecclesiastics and laymen: at the bottom a crowd is listening to a preacher. Labels with various texts &c. issue from the mouths of the chief figures. The composition includes many other details and will repay a careful examination. It is well described in the Historical Account, pp. 91, 92.

The reference of 'Coverdale's Bible' to the Bishops by the king, and their confession that there were no heresies to be maintained thereby, appears to refer to this edition (Fulke, p. 98). [But see p. 63, note 2.]

In a preliminary explanation of signs some account is given of the delay in the publication of the notes: 'We haue also (as ye may se) added 'many handes both in the mergent 'of this volume and also in the text, 'vpon the which, we purposed to 'haue made in the ende of the Byble '(in a table by them selues) certen 'godly annotacions: but forsomoch 'as yet there hath not bene sofficient 'tyme minystred to the kynges moost 'honorable counsell, for the ouersight 'and correccyon of the sayde annota- 'cyons, we wyll therfore omyt them, 'tyll their more conueniēt leysour, 'doynge now nomore but beseke the, 'most gentle reader, that when thou 'commest at soch a place where a 'hande doth stande...& thou canst 'not attayne to the meanyng and 'true knowledge of that sentence, 'then do not rashly presume to make 'any priuate interpretacyon therof: 'but submyt thy selfe to the iudge- 'ment of those that are godly learned 'in Christ Jesu.'

'they be put in prynte, yf it be y<sup>r</sup> lordshippes good pleasure, 'y<sup>t</sup> I shall do so.' But Coverdale's regret was ineffectual. The various marks which he designed remained in the text of several editions of the Great Bible, but nothing more than a general explanation of their import was ever given. The volume of 'annotations' was deferred till a more convenient occasion, which never came. But in the mean time a complete English text of the Scriptures was provided for public use, which, by an injunction framed beforehand, Crumwell, as the king's vice-gerent, required should be set up in some convenient place in every church throughout the kingdom before a specified day<sup>1</sup>. 'A 'domino factum est istud' is the worthy motto with which it concludes<sup>2</sup>.

There is no evidence to shew that Cranmer had any <sup>1</sup> There cannot be the least doubt that the 'Bible of the largest volume 'in English' was the edition being prepared in Paris. No one who has seen Coverdale's, Matthew's, and Crumwell's Bibles together would hesitate as to the application of the description: the Bible and the injunction corresponded and were both due to the same man. I cannot agree with Mr Anderson in supposing Matthew's Bible to have been intended: II. 34, in spite of Strype, Cranmer, I. 117. The date by which the Bible was to be procured was left blank. At the time when the injunctions were drawn up the interruption of the printing could not have been definitely foreseen. Similar proclamations were issued by the king in May, 1540, immediately after the publication of the second (Cranmer's) Great Bible; and again in May, 1541, after the publication of the fourth, which bore the names of Tunstall and Heath. Anderson, II. pp. 131, 142

It may be added that Cranmer in his injunctions for the clergy of the diocese of Hereford (between May and November, 1538) requires that every one 'shall have, by the first day 'of August next coming (1539?), as 'well a whole bible in Latin and 'English, or at the least a new 'testament of both the same languages, as the copies of the king's 'highness' injunctions.' These injunctions were probably issued after September, and the date fixed in 1539. Cranmer, Works, II. p. 81.

<sup>2</sup> One passage which occurs at the end of the Introduction is worthy of being quoted, and it seems characteristic of Coverdale:

'With what judgment the books of 'the Old Testament are to be read.

...'The books of the Old Testament 'are much to be regarded because they 'be as it were a manner of foundation, whereunto the New Testament 'doth cleave and lean, out of the 'which certain arguments of the New 'Testament may be taken. For there 'is nothing shewed in the New Testament, the which was not shadowed 'before in the figures of Moses' Law, 'and forespoken in the revelations of 'the Prophets, some things even evidently expressed...

share in the first preparation of the Great Bible, or even that he was acquainted with the undertaking. The selection of Coverdale for the execution of the work, and Coverdale's correspondence, distinctly mark it as Crumwell's sole enterprise. But Cranmer was not slow in furthering it. By the autumn of the same year arrangements were completed for the printing of a new edition, in London with the help of the materials obtained from Paris; and the archbishop had drawn up a preface for it, which he had transmitted to Crumwell for the approbation of the king. By a strange coincidence Crumwell received from Henry on the very day on which Cranmer wrote to him to make a final decision about the price, &c.<sup>1</sup>, the absolute right of licensing the publication of Bibles in England for five years. Thus all difficulties were removed from the way, and the Bible with the Preface of the archbishop was finished in April, 1540. Two other editions followed in the same year (July: November, the title-page is dated 1541): and three more in 1541 (May: November: December). These six editions all have Cranmer's prologue, but the third and fifth bear the names of Tunstall and Heath upon the title-page, who are said to have 'overseen and perused' the translation 'at the commandment of the kinges highnes.' The cause of this nominal revision is obvious. Crumwell had been disgraced and executed in July. The work which he had taken so much to heart was naturally suspected; and thus the open sanction of two bishops, prominent among the party opposed to him, was required to confirm its credit. And so it was that at last by a strange irony 'my lord of London' authorised what was in a large part substantially

The variations in the texts of these editions of the Great Bible will be considered afterwards. But one important change was made in the original design of the book which requires to be noticed now. Coverdale, as we have seen, looked upon the notes as an important part of the work, and the reference to them was retained through three editions<sup>2</sup>. With the fall of Crumwell all hope of publishing a commentary disappeared, and the 'pointing hands' were removed. It is not difficult to understand the objections to Coverdale's design, and a narrative which Foxe has preserved will explain the influence which led to its suppression.

'Not long after [the death of Crumwell], he writes, 'great complaint was made to the king of the translation 'of the Bible, and of the preface of the same; and then 'was the sale of the Bible commanded to be stayed, the 'bishops promising to amend and correct it, but never 'performing the same. Then Grafton was called, and first 'charged with the printing of Matthew's Bible, but he, 'being fearful of trouble, made excuses for himself in all 'things. Then was he examined of the great Bible, and 'what notes he was purposed to make: to the which he 'answered, that he knew none. For his purpose was, to 'have retained learned men to have made the notes; but 'when he perceived the king's majesty and his clergy 'not willing to have any, he proceeded no further. But

Bible alone for four years: March, 1542 (II. p. 152).

For the relation between the texts of the several issues of the Great Bible see Chap. III. § 4. I cannot tell by what surprising oversight Mr Anderson describes Crumwell's Bible as being Matthew's text.

'for all these excuses, Grafton was sent to the Fleet, and
'there remained six weeks, and before he came out was 'bound in three hundred pounds, that he should neither
'sell, nor imprint nor cause to be imprinted any mo
'Bibles until the king and the clergy should agree upon
'a translation. And thus was the Bible from that time

The publication of the Great Bible and the injunction for its free exhibition in the parish churches marked a memorable epoch. The king in a declaration appointed 'to be read by all curates upon the publishing of the 'Bible in English' justly dwelt upon the gravity of the measure. He commanded 'that in the reading and hearing thereof, first most humbly and reverently using and 'addressing yourselves unto it'—the curate is speaking to his congregation—'you shall have always in your remembrance and memories that all things contained in 'this book is the undoubted will, law, and commandment 'of Almighty God, the only and straight means to know 'the goodness and benefits of God towards us, and the 'true duty of every Christian man to serve him accordingly...And if at any time by reading any doubt shall 'come to any of you, touching the sense and meaning 'of any part thereof; that then, not giving too much to 'your own minds, fantasies and opinions, nor having 'thereof any open reasoning in your open taverns or 'alehouses, ye shall have recourse to such learned men as 'be or shall be authorised to preach and declare the same. 'So that avoiding all contentions and disputations in 'such alehouses and other places...you use this most high 'benefit quietly and charitably every of you, to the edifying of himself, his wife and family...<sup>2</sup>

Among others Bp Bonner 'set up Six Bibles in certain convenient places of St Paul's church,' after the king's proclamation in May, 1540<sup>3</sup>, with an admonition to readers to bring with them 'discretion, honest intent, charity, reverence and quiet behaviour. That there should no such number meet together there as to make a multitude. That no exposition be made thereupon but what is declared in the book itself. That it be not read with noise in time of divine service; or that any disputation or contention be used at it<sup>1</sup>.' It is scarcely surprising that the novelty of the license granted to the people should have led them to neglect these instructions. Bonner was forced, as he pleads, by the great disorders created by the readers to issue a new admonition in which he threatened the removal of the Bibles. 'Diverse wilful and unlearned persons,' he writes, 'inconsiderately and indiscreetly...read the same especially and chiefly at the time of divine service...yea in the time of the sermon and declaration of the Word of God...Wherefore this is eftsoons of honest friendship to require and charitably to desire and pray every reader of this Book that either he will indeed observe and keep my former advertisement and friendly admonition adjoined hereunto...either else to take in good part and be content that the said Bibles for the said abuses be taken down, for assuredly, the fault and disorder herein not amended but increased, I intend, being thereunto enforced, upon right good considerations, and especially for the said abuses, to take down the said Bibles, which otherwise I would be right loth to do, considering I have been always and still will be by God's grace right glad that the Scripture and Word of God should be well known and also set forth accordingly<sup>2</sup>.'

The popular zeal for reading the Scriptures was not always manifested thus inconsiderately. In a public document drawn up to justify the position of the English Church in 1539<sup>3</sup> great stress is laid upon the revolution in common habits which was thus effected. 'Englishmen have now in hand in every Church and place, almost every man the Holy Bible and New Testament in their mother tongue instead of the old fabulous and fantastical books of the Table Round, Launcelot du Lac, &c., and such other, whose unpure filth and vain fabulosity the light of God has abolished utterly.'

One narrative, which is derived from actual experience, will illustrate the feelings of the time. It was taken by Strype from a manuscript of Foxe.

'It was wonderful to see with what joy this book of God was received not only among the learned sort and those that were noted for lovers of the reformation, but generally all England over among all the vulgar and common people; and with what greediness God's word was read and what resort to places where the reading of it was. Every body that could bought the book or busily read it or got others to read it to them if they could not themselves, and divers more elderly people learned to read on purpose. And even little boys flocked among the rest to hear portions of the holy Scripture read. One William Maldon happening in the company of John Foxe, in the beginning of the reign of Q. Elizabeth, and Foxe being very inquisitive after those that suffered for religion in the former reigns, asked him if he knew any that were persecuted for the Gospel of Jesus Christ that he might add it to his Book of Martyrs. He told him he knew one that was whipped by his own father in king Henry's reign for it. And when Foxe was very inquisitive who he was and what was his name, he confessed it was himself; and upon his desire he wrote out all the circumstances. Namely that when the king had allowed the Bible to be set forth to be read in all Churches immediately several poor men in the town of Chelmsford in Essex, where his father lived and he was born, bought the New Testament and on Sundays sat reading of it in the lower end of the Church: many would flock about them to hear their reading: and he

'among the rest, being then but fifteen years old, came 'every Sunday to hear the glad and sweet tidings of the 'Gospel. But his father observing it once angrily fetched
'him away and would have him say the Latin Matins with 'him, which grieved him much. And as he returned at 'other times to hear the Scripture read, his father still 'would fetch him away. This put him upon the thoughts 'of learning to read English that so he might read the 'New Testament himself; which when he had by diligence
'effected he and his father's apprentice bought the New 'Testament, joining their stocks together, and to conceal 'it laid it under the bedstraw and read it at convenient 'times. One night his father being asleep he and his 'mother chanced to discourse concerning the crucifix, and 'kneeling down to it and knocking on the breast then 'used, and holding up the hands to it when it came by on 'procession. This he told his mother was plain idolatry...
'His mother enraged at him for this said, "Wilt thou not 'worship the cross which was about thee when thou wert
'christened and must be laid on thee when thou art dead?"
'In this heat the mother and son departed and went to the result of the first open reading of the English Bible, and the revelation which it made of the thoughts of many hearts. Classes and households were divided. On the one side were the stern citizens of the old school to whom change seemed to be the beginning of license: on the other young men burning with eager zeal to carry to the uttermost the spiritual freedom of which they had caught sight. And between them were those to whom all they had been taught to reverence was still inestimably precious while yet they could not press to extremity those by whom the old tenets were assailed.

§ 5. TAVERNER.

While Crumwell was hurrying forward his Bible in Paris, another edition was being printed in London. This also was based on Matthew, and seems to have been executed in considerable haste. The editor was a layman and a lawyer, R. Taverner, who had a great reputation as a Greek scholar. At an earlier time he was one of the students of 'Cardinal College,' Oxford, who had suffered persecution upon the first circulation of Tindale's New Testament [see p. 42]. He was acquainted with Crumwell, and by his influence the king appointed him to be one of his clerks of the signet. In the reign of Edward VI he had a special license to preach, and a quaint account<sup>1</sup> has been preserved of the studiously unclerical habit—with a velvet bonnet and damask gown, and gold chain and sword—in which he discharged the duty. It was his humour also, as we are told<sup>1</sup>, 'to quote the law in Greek.' These little touches are important, for they throw no small light upon the spirit in which he accomplished his revision. In one respect he stands above his predecessors. His Dedication to Henry is couched in language full at once of respect and manliness. He gives the king due credit for what he had done and speaks with modesty of Taverner's Bible (like Crumwell's) was published in 1539, in two editions, folio and quarto<sup>1</sup>. It is furnished with a marginal commentary based upon Matthew's, but shorter, and containing some original notes. In the same year in which his Bible was printed, Taverner likewise put forth two editions (quarto and octavo) of the New Testament through another printer but the same publisher; but the appearance of the Great Bible must have checked the sale of his works. The Bible and the New Testament were each reprinted once, and his Old Testament was adopted in a Bible of 1551 [see p. 73, note]. With these exceptions his revision appears to have fallen at once into complete neglect.

§ 6. A TIME OF SUSPENSE.

After the publication of the Great Bible (1539—1541) the history of the English Version remains stationary for a long time. Nothing was done to amend it and severe restrictions were imposed upon its use. In 1542 a proposition was made in convocation in the king's name for a translation of the New Testament to be undertaken by the Bishops. The books were portioned out, but Gardiner brought the scheme to an end by pressing the retention of a large number of Latin terms which would practically have made a version such as the Rhemish one was afterwards<sup>1</sup>. As this condition was obviously inadmissible, the king, by Cranmer's influence, resolved to refer the translation to the two Universities. Convocation was no more consulted on the subject, and the Universities did nothing.

In the next year Parliament proscribed all translations bearing the name of Tindale, and required that the notes in all other copies should be removed or obliterated. At the same time it was enacted that no women (except noble or gentle women), no artificers, apprentices, journeymen, serving-men, husbandmen, or labourers, should read to themselves or to others, publicly or privately, any part of the Bible under pain of imprisonment. Three years later (1546) the king repeated the prohibition against Tindale's books with many others and included Coverdale's New Testament in the same category. Thus the Great Bible alone remained unforbidden, and it was probably at this time that the great destruction of the earlier Bibles and Testaments took place. And even where the book has been preserved, the title-page has been in many cases destroyed that the true character of the volume might escape the observation of a hasty inquisitor.

names like Christus, zizania, didrachma, tetrarcha, and others again which have apparently no special force, as simplex, dignus, ejicere, oriens, tyrannus. [See Fuller's Church History, Cent. XVI, Book v. p. 238 (ed. 1655).]

For the proclamation was not allowed to remain idle. The party of the 'old learning' even outran the letter of the edict. This had enjoined 'the burning of certain 'translations of the New Testament,' but, 'they were so 'bold as to burn the whole Bible, because they were of 'those men's, Tindale's or Coverdale's, translation; and 'not the New Testament only.' Nay more, they were anxious to escape from the responsibility which they had incurred by sanctioning the Great Bible. Tunstall and Heath, who had been 'appointed to overlook the translation' at the time of Crumwell's execution, and had 'set their names thereunto, when they saw the world 'somewhat like to wring on the other side denied it; and 'said they never meddled therewith<sup>1</sup>.'

But in the midst of this reaction Henry died (Jan. 28, 1547). The accession of Edward restored the reforming party to power, and the young king himself is said to have shewn a singular devotion to the Bible. According to some the English Bible was first used at his coronation<sup>2</sup>. 'When three swords were brought,' so Strype writes<sup>3</sup>, 'signs of his being king of three kingdoms, he 'said, there was one yet wanting. And when the nobles 'about him asked him what that was, he answered, The 'Bible. "That book," added he, "is the Sword of the 'Spirit, and to be preferred before these swords..." And 'when the pious young king had said this, and some other 'like words, he commanded the Bible with the greatest 'reverence to be brought and carried before him.' However this may have been, the work of printing the English Scriptures was carried on during his reign with great activity. Thirty-five Testaments and thirteen<sup>4</sup> Bibles were published in England in the six years and a half for which he occupied the throne. The public use of them was made the subject of special admonition and inquiry. Among the injunctions issued by the king (1547) on his accession was one requiring that all beneficed persons 'shall provide 'within three months next after this visitation, one book of the whole Bible of the largest volume in English; and 'within one twelve months next after the said visitation, 'the Paraphrasis of Erasmus also in English upon the 'Gospels, and the same set up in some convenient place 'within the...Church..., whereas their parishioners may 'most commodiously resort unto the same and read the 'same.' And again, 'that they shall discourage no man '(authorized and licensed thereto) from the reading any 'part of the Bible, either in Latin or in English, but shall 'rather comfort<sup>1</sup> and exhort every person to read the 'same, as the very lively word of God, and the special 'food of man's soul that all Christian persons are bound 'to embrace, believe and follow, if they look to be saved<sup>2</sup>.' In the next year Cranmer instituted inquiries into the fulfilment of these injunctions in his articles for the visitation of the diocese of Canterbury<sup>3</sup>, further asking 'whether '...priests being under the degree of a bachelor of divinity 'have of their own the New Testament both in Latin 'and English and the Paraphrase of Erasmus upon the 'same.'

But beyond this nothing of moment was actually achieved with regard to the English Version of the Scriptures. At this crisis the constitution of the English Church and the remoulding of the Service-books were of more urgent importance than the revision of the Bible; but Cranmer did not overlook this work. In 1549 Fagius and Bucer were appointed by his influence to professorships at Cambridge, and during their stay with him at Lambeth, before they entered on their work there, 'the 'archbishop himself directed of what subject matter their 'lectures should be. As it had been a great while his pious

'and most earnest desire that the Holy Bible should come 'abroad in the greatest exactness and true agreement with 'the original text, so he laid this work upon these two 'learned men. First that they should give a clear plain 'and succinct interpretation of the Scripture according to
'the propriety of the language; and secondly illustrate 'difficult and obscure places and reconcile those that 'seemed repugnant to one another. And it was his will
'and his advice that to this end and purpose their public
'readings should tend...Fagius, because his talent lay in 'the Hebrew learning, was to undertake the Old Testa'ment; and Bucer the New...Fagius entered upon the 'Evangelical prophet Esaias and Bucer upon the gospel
'of the Evangelist John, and some chapters in each book
'were dispatched by them. But it was not long but both 'of them fell sick, which gave a very unhappy stop to 'their studies'. Nothing indeed is here said of an immediate revision of the authorised Bible, but the instructions point to the direction in which the great archbishop's thoughts were turned.

Meanwhile a fragment of a version of the New Testament—the Gospel of St Matthew and the beginning of St Mark—was completed by Sir John Cheke—at one time professor of Greek at Cambridge and tutor to Edward VI.
He seems to have aimed at giving a thoroughly English rendering of the text, and in this endeavour he went to far greater lengths of quaintness than Taverner. Thus he coins new words to represent the old 'ecclesiastical' terms for which More and Gardiner contended most earnestly:
frosent (apostle): biword (parable): gainbirth (regeneration): uprising or gainrising (resurrection): tablers (moneychangers): tollers (publicans): freshman (proselyte): and uses strange participial forms: gospeld (xi. 5): devild (viii.
28): moond (iv. 24); and even crossed for crucified. The fragment remained in manuscript till quite lately<sup>2</sup>, and it is not certain that it was designed for publication. As it will not be necessary to revert to it again, a specimen may be given to shew its general style :

‘At that time Jesus answered and said : I must needs, ‘O Father, acknowledge thanks unto Thee, O Lord of ‘heaven and earth, which hast hidden these things from ‘wise and witty men, and hast disclosed the same to babes ; ‘yea and that, Father, for such was thy good pleasure ‘herein. All things be delivered me of my Father. And ‘no man knoweth the Son but the Father, and he to whom ‘the Son will disclose it. Come to me all that labour ‘and be burdened and I will ease you. Take my yoke on ‘you and learn of me, for I am mild and of a lowly heart. ‘And ye shall find quietness for yourselves. For my yoke ‘is profitable (χρηστός) and my burden light.’ (Matt. xi. 25—30.)

In the reign of Mary no English Bible was printed. Rogers and Cranmer were martyred : Coverdale with difficulty escaped to the Continent : the bones of Fagius and Bucer were burnt ; but no special measures appear to have been taken for the destruction of the English Scriptures, or for the restriction of their private use. The public use of them in churches was necessarily forbidden. Proclamations against certain books and authors were issued, but no translations of the Old or New Testament were (as before) mentioned by name. Copies of the Bible which had been set up in churches were burnt ; but they were not sought out or confiscated. Evidently a great change had come over the country since the time of Henry VIII. And in the mean time though the English press was inactive the exiles abroad were busy, and at the close of Mary’s reign a New Testament was printed at Geneva, which was the first step towards a work destined to influence very powerfully our Authorised Version. The origin of this must now be traced.

§ 7. THE GENEVAN BIBLE.

It is unnecessary to dwell upon the disastrous discussions at Frankfurt which divided the English exiles of Mary's reign. The task of continuing the revision of the Bible fell naturally to the non-conforming party who retired to Geneva, the active centre of the labours of Calvin and Beza. Among them was W. Whittingham, who married Calvin's [wife's] sister<sup>1</sup>; and it is to him in all probability that we owe the Genevan Testament<sup>2</sup>, which appeared in 1557 [in Roman type], with an Introductory Epistle by Calvin. The reviser's own address to the reader is anonymous, but it is definitely personal, and claims the work for a single man, and no one seems more likely than Whittingham to have undertaken it.

'As touchīg the perusing of the text,' he writes, 'it was 'diligently reuised by the moste approued Greke examples, 'and conference of translations in other tonges, as the 'learned may easely iudge, both by the faithful rendering of 'the sentence, and also by the proprietie of the wordes, and 'perspicuitie of the phrase. Forthermore that the Reader 'might be by all meanes proffited, I haue deuided the text 'into verses and sectiōs<sup>3</sup>, according to the best editions in 'other langages....And because the Hebrewe and Greke 'phrases, which are strange to rendre in other tongues, and 'also short, shulde not be to harde, I haue sometyme interpreted them, without any whit diminishing the grace of

Hexapla, and again separately in 1842.]

<sup>3</sup> The division into verses was first given in Stephens' Gr. Lat. Test. of 1551. See Tregelles, An Account of the Printed Text... p. 33. The use of supplemental words is found in Münster's O.T. 1534, but the italics are said to have been borrowed by the reviser of 1557 from Beza's Testament of 1556. A different type was employed in the Great Bible to mark readings borrowed from the Vulgate, e.g. 1 John v 7.

'the sense, as our lāgage doth vse them, and sometyne
'haue put to [added] that worde, which lacking made the 'sentence obscure, but haue set it in such letters as may 'easily be discerned from the cōmun text.'

The attractiveness of the book was enhanced by a marginal commentary, in which the author boasts that to his knowledge he has 'omitted nothing vnexpounded, wherby he that is anything exercised in the Scriptures of 'God, might iustely cōplayn of hardenes.' It was at least far more complete than any yet available for the English reader. So it was that the edition received a ready welcome and soon found its way to England. It was, however, only the beginning of a larger enterprise. Within a few months after it was finished, a thorough revision of the whole Bible was commenced, and was continued 'for 'the space of two yeres and more day and night.' The striking difference between the translation of the New Testament in this complete edition of the Bible (1560) and the separate New Testament (1557)<sup>1</sup>, is a signal proof of the amount of independent labour bestowed upon the work. The names of those who were engaged upon it are not given, but they were several and perhaps not the same during the whole time. The accession of Elizabeth broke up the society in part, but 'Whittingham with one or two 'more, being resolved to go through with the work, did 'tarry at Geneva an year and an half after Q. Elizabeth 'came to the Crown<sup>2</sup>. These were probably Gilby and has shewn, the text of the translation in the Bible and not that of the New Testament of 1557. [Before the Geneva Bible appeared in 1560 a separate edition of the Psalms from the Bible Version was issued in 1559. Sampson<sup>1</sup>. Under their care the Bible was finished in 1560, and dedicated to Q. Elizabeth in bold and simple language without flattery or reserve.

'The eyes of all that feare God in all places beholde 'your countreyes,' thus they address the Queen, 'as an 'example to all that beleue, and the prayers of all the 'godly at all tymes are directed to God for the preserua- 'tiō of your maiestie. For considering Gods wonderful 'mercies toward you at all seasons, who hath pulled you 'out of the mouthe of the lyons, and how that from your 'youth you haue bene brought vp in the holy Scriptures, the 'hope of all men is so increased, that thei cā not but looke 'that God shulde bring to passe some wōderful worke by 'your grace to the vniversal comfort of his Church. There- 'fore euen aboue strēgth you must shewe your selfe strong 'and bolde in Gods matters...This Lord of lordes & King 'of kings who hath euer defended his, strengthē, cōfort and 'preserue your maiestie, that you may be able to builde vp 'the ruines of Gods house to his glorie, the discharge of 'your conscience, and to the comfort of all them that loue 'the comming of Christ Iesus our Lord<sup>2</sup>.'

The cost of the work was defrayed by members of the congregation at Geneva, 'whose hearts God touched' to encourage the revisers 'not to spare any charges for the 'furtherance of suche a benefite and fauour of God'; and one of those most actively engaged in this service was John Bodley, the father of the founder of the Bodleian Library, who received afterwards from Elizabeth a patent for the exclusive right to print the revision in England for seven years<sup>3</sup>. A folio edition was published by him in the next year<sup>4</sup>, but this was printed at Geneva, and he does not

<sup>2</sup> The aim of the book was indicated by the original title of the address to the reader, which was 'To our be- 'loved in the Lord the brethren of 'England, Scotland, Ireland, &c.' This superscription was altered in appear to have availed himself afterwards of the privilege, though the patent may have helped the sale of the work.

1578 to 'To the diligent and Christian 'reader,' and afterwards to 'To the 'Christian reader.' (Comp. Ander- son, II. 356-7.)

The form in which the Bible was published marked its popular destination. Its size—a moderate quarto—offers a marked contrast to the ponderous folios of Coverdale, Matthew and the Great Bible. With the same view the text was printed for the first time in Roman letter; and the division of the chapters into verses was introduced<sup>1</sup>. A marginal commentary also was added, pure and vigorous in style, and, if slightly tinged with Calvinistic doctrine, yet on the whole neither unjust nor illiberal<sup>2</sup>.

It was not therefore surprising that from the time of its first appearance the Genevan Bible became the household Bible of the English-speaking nations; and it continued to be so for about three-quarters of a century. It was never sanctioned for public use in churches; but the convenience of its form and the simple clearness of its notes gained it a wide popularity with the mass of the people<sup>3</sup>.

1561. No printer's name is attached to the book. One other edition was printed at Geneva in 1569, by J. Crispin. [Some copies have the date 1570 on the title. It is this edition which has the Calendar taken from the French Bible printed by Francois Estienne in 1567.]

<sup>1</sup> [A kind of fatality seems to attend those who write about the history of the English Bible. In the article on Whittingham in the Dictionary of National Biography we are informed that in the Geneva Bible of 1560 'the old black letter was abandoned for Italian characters.' It is printed in Roman type. It is also said that 'the Apocrypha was for the first time omitted,' which is not the fact, 'as were the names and days of saints from the calendar prefixed.' There was no calendar prefixed. These errors are partially corrected in the volume of Errata, where we are told to substitute 'Roman' for 'Italian,' and for the words 'omitted...prefixed' to read 'differentiated, as regards its authoritative value, from the rest of 'the Old Testament.' Here is a new error, for this differentiation is already to be found in Matthew's Bible of 1537 and in Coverdale's of 1535.]

<sup>3</sup> [In the Historical Catalogue of Bibles in the Library of the British and Foreign Bible Society, p. 61, it is estimated that between 1560 and 1644 at least 140 editions of the Genevan Bible or Testament appeared.]

And the intrinsic merits of the book justified its popularity; for it was not without cause that the revisers say when reviewing their work: 'we may with good conscience 'protest, that we haue in every point and worde, according 'to the measure of that knollage which it pleased almightie 'God to giue vs, faithfully rendred the text, and in all hard 'places moste syncerely expounded the same. For God is 'our witnes that we haue by all meanes indeuored to set 'forthe the puritie of the worde and right sense of the 'holy Gost for the edifying of the brethren in faith and 'charitie.'

Thus it came to pass that the revision found a ready welcome even from those who were not predisposed in its favour. Some time after the 'Bishops' Bible' was undertaken, Bodley applied to Cecil for an extension of his patent. The secretary consulted Parker before replying to the request. Parker's answer is conceived in a generous spirit. He and the bishop of London [Grindal] 'thought 'so well of the first impression [of the Bible] and the review 'of those who had since travailed therein, that they wished 'it would please him [Cecil] to be a means that twelve 'years' longer term might be by special privilege granted 'him [Bodley], in consideration of the charges by him 'and his associates in the first impression, and the review 'since sustained; and that though one other special Bible 'for the Churches were meant by them to be set forth, as 'convenient time and leisure hereafter should permit, yet 'should it nothing hinder but rather do much good to have 'diversity of translations and readings.....'

<sup>1</sup> Strype's Parker, i. 412. One other revision of the New Testament must be classed with the Genevan versions, that by Lawrence Tomson, which was professedly based on Beza, and contained a new Commentary, translated in the main from his. This was published in 1576, and dedicated to F. Walsingham and F. Hastings; and became so popular that it was frequently substituted for the Genevan revision in the editions of the Genevan Bible.

Tomson repeats the promise of the Genevan editor with regard to the Commentary with even greater emphasis: 'I dare avouch it, and whoso 'readeth it, shall so find it, that there 'is not one hard sentence, nor dark 'speech nor doubtful word, but is so 'opened, and hath such light given 'it, that children may go through

§ 8 THE BISHOPS' BIBLE. •

The Genevan revision was, as has been seen, the work of exiles whose action was unfettered by considerations of national policy. A work was comparatively easy for them which was not possible in the English Church. The commencement of Queen Elizabeth's reign was beset by many of the same difficulties which had occupied the great reformers on the accession of Edward VI. In the face of these it was not likely that measures would be taken for the revision of the English Bible. It was enough at first to restore what had been already once established. The injunctions which were issued by the Queen (1559) were closely moulded on those which had been put forth by Edward VI, and contained the same charge for the provision of a copy 'of the whole Bible of the largest volume' to be set up in some convenient place in each church. No limitation however was now added to the general encouragement to read the Scriptures; but it was said significantly that all should 'read the same with great humility and reverence, as the very lively word of God<sup>1</sup>.'

The concessions thus made fell in with the general desire of the people. This was shewn in a characteristic manner during the progress of the Queen from the Tower to Westminster on her accession to the throne. Various symbolic greetings were devised to welcome her on the way; and one above all seems to have attracted popular interest. At the 'Little Conduit in Cheape' a pageant was prepared 'and it was told her Grace that there was placed 'Time.' "Time?" quoth she, "and Time hath brought me 'hither.'" And with Time also was 'Truth the daughter

'with it, and the simplest that are 'may walk without any guide, without 'wandering and going astray.'

<sup>1</sup> Cardwell, Doc. Ann. (ed. 2) 1. 214. In the Injunctions of 1547 it is said, 'They [the parsons, vicars, &c.] shall discourage no man, authorized and licensed thereto, from the reading

'any part of the Bible either in Latin
'or in English...' In the Injunctions of 1559 the words in italics are omitted. Cardwell, Doc. Ann. (ed. 2) 1. pp. 9, 214. On the other hand, the words in italics in the text are not contained in the Injunctions of 1547.

'of Time,' who held a book in her hand upon the which was written 'Verbum veritatis,' the word of Truth—the Bible in English—'which she delivered to the Queen. But 'she, as soon as she had received the book kissed it, and 'with both her hands held up the same and so laid it upon 'her breast with great thanks to the city therefor'—'to the 'great comfort,' it is added afterwards, 'of the lookers-on'.

It is likely indeed that in this respect the zeal of the Queen was suspected to be cooler than that of many about her. 'On the morrow of her coronation,' so Bacon writes, 'it being the custom to release prisoners at the inauguration of a prince...one of her courtiers...besought her with 'a loud voice, That now this good time there might be four 'or five principal prisoners more released; those were the 'four Evangelists and the apostle St Paul, who had been 'long shut up in an unknown tongue, as it were in prison, 'so as they could not converse with the common people. 'The Queen answered very gravely, That it was best first 'to inquire of them whether they would be released or 'no'.

Thus at first the Great Bible was allowed to retain its place as the authorised Bible for ecclesiastical use, but the wide circulation of the Genevan edition made its defects generally known, and Parker, who was naturally inclined to biblical studies, as soon as an opportunity offered, took measures for the review of the old translation. This was about 1563-4. The method which he followed has been described by Strype. 'The Archbishop,' he writes, 'took 'upon him the labour to contrive and set the whole work 'a going in a proper method, by sorting out the whole 'Bible into parcels..., and distributing those parcels to able 'bishops and other learned men, to peruse and collate each 'the book or books allotted them: sending withal his 'instructions for the method they should observe; and they 'to add some short marginal notes for the illustration or 'correction of the text. And all these portions of the 'Bible being finished and sent back to the archbishop, he 'was to add the last hand to them and so to take care for 'printing and publishing the whole<sup>1</sup>.'

Among those whose help he sought was Sandys, bishop of Worcester. Sandys strongly urged the necessity of the work. 'Your Grace,' he says, 'should much benefit the 'Church in hastening forward the Bible which you have in 'hand those that we have be not only false printed but 'also give great offence to many by reason of the depravity 'in reading.' In another letter which accompanied his revision of the portion of Scripture assigned to him, he explains more at length the ground of his opinion. 'According to your Grace's letter of instruction I have 'perused the book you sent me and with good diligence; 'having also in conference with some other considered of 'the same in such sort, I trust, as your Grace will not 'mislike of. .... In mine opinion your Grace shall do well 'to make the whole Bible to be diligently surveyed by 'some well learned before it be put to print.....which 'thing will require a time. Sed sat cito si sat bene. The 'setters forth of this our common translation followed 'Munster too much, who doubtless was a very negligent 'man in his doings and often swerved very much from the 'Hebrew.....<sup>2</sup>.'

Other fragments of correspondence shew some of the difficulties with which Parker had to contend. Guest, bishop of Rochester, in returning the book of Psalms which had been sent to him for correction, gives a singular view of the duties of a translator. 'I have not,' he says, 'altered 'the translation but where it gave occasion of an error. 'As at the first Psalm at the beginning I turn the præter-'perfect tense into the present tense, because the sense is 'too harsh in the præterperfect tense. Where in the New 'Testament one piece of a Psalm is reported I translate it 'in the Psalms according to the translation thereof in the 'New Testament, for the avoiding of the offence that may 'rise to the people upon divers translations.....<sup>3</sup>.'

Again, Cox, bishop of Ely, writing in May, 1566, says, 'I trust your Grace is well forward with the Bible by this time. I perceive the greatest burden will lie upon your neck, touching care and travail. I would wish that such usual words as we English people be acquainted with might still remain in their form and sound, so far forth as the Hebrew will well bear, ink-horn terms to be avoided. The translation of the verbs in the Psalms to be used uniformly in one tense.....<sup>1</sup>'

However, in spite of all difficulties, the work went forward, and the Bishops' Bible, as it was called, appeared in 1568 in a magnificent volume, printed by R. Jugge cum privilegio regiæ majestatis.' No word of flattery disfigures the book. It is even without a dedication. But a portrait of the Queen occupies the centre of the engraved title-page, and others of Leicester and Burleigh occur before the book of Joshua and the Psalms. At the end is an elegant couplet on the device of the pelican feeding her young:

Matris ut hæc proprio stirps est satiata cruore.
Pascis item proprio, Christe, cruore tuos.

It was not by these signs only that Parker shewed his true sense of the character of the task which he had undertaken. The revisers, speaking through him in the Preface, express a noble consciousness of the immensity of their labour. 'There be yet,' they say, quoting the words of John Fisher, once bishop of Rochester, 'in the gospels very many darke places, whiche without all doubt to the posteritie shalbe made muche more open. For why should we dispayre herein, seing the gospell was deliuered to this intent; that it might be vtterly vnderstanded of vs, yea to the very inche. Wherefore, forasmuche as Christe sheweth no lesse loue to his Church now, then hitherto he hath done, the auctoritie wherof is as yet no whit diminished, and forasmuch as that holy spirite [is] the perpetuall keper and gardian of the same Church, whose gyftes and graces do flowe as continually and as

'abundantly as from the beginning: who can doubt but that such thinges as remayne yet vnknownen in the gospell, shalbe hereafter made open to the latter wittes of our posteritie, to their cleare vnderstanding?' They felt then that their labour was provisional, and that the Spirit had yet further lessons in His Word to teach to later ages.

It is not certainly known by whom the whole revision was actually made. Initials are placed at the end of some of the books, and this, Parker says, was done by his own wish that the several scholars might be 'more diligent, as answerable for their doings.' But it seems evident from the manner in which the initials are distributed that they do not indicate all the contributors<sup>1</sup>. They do not stand at the end of groups of books which might naturally be supposed to have been given to one reviser. Once the same initials are repeated in consecutive books. Some names too are certainly passed over. Lawrence, for example<sup>2</sup>, had a considerable part in the revision of the New Testament, and his initials nowhere occur. Of the revisers who can be probably identified eight were bishops, and from them the revision derived its popular title<sup>3</sup>.

of 2 Samuel R. M. = R. Menevensis, Richard Davies, Bp. of St David's:

of 2 Chronicles E. W. = E. Wigornensis, Edwyn Sandys, Bp. of Worcester:

of Job A. P. C. = Andrew Pearson, canon of Canterbury:

of the Psalms T. B. ? Thomas Becon: [It may be doubted whether the initials T. B. are those of Thomas Becon, who disclaims any special knowledge of Greek and may therefore be presumed not to have been much of a Hebrew scholar. They may possibly indicate Thomas Bickley, one of Parker's chaplains, and afterwards Bp. of Chichester.]

of the Song of Solomon A. P. E. = Andrew Peme, canon of Ely:

of Lamentations R. W. = R. Wintonensis, Robert Horne, Bp. of Winchester:

of Daniel T. C. L. = T. Cov. & Lichf., Thomas Bentham, Bp. of Lichfield and Coventry:

of Malachi E. L. = E. Londinensis, Edmund Grindal, Bp. of London:

of Wisdom W. C. = William Barlow, Bp. of Chichester, omitted in some copies:

of 2 Maccabees J. N. = J. Norwicensis. John Parkhurst, Bp. of Norwich

of the Acts R. E. = R. Eliensis, Richard Cox, Bp. of Ely:

When the edition was ready for publication Parker endeavoured to obtain through Cecil a recognition of it by the Queen. The revision did not, he pleaded, 'vary much 'from that translation which was commonly used by public 'order, except when the verity of the Hebrew and Greek 'moved alteration, or when the text was by some negligence mutilated from the original.' His design was to secure a uniform text for public use, and in some places the Genevan revision was now publicly read, which seemed to be an infringement of ecclesiastical discipline, and yet the Great Bible could not be honestly maintained<sup>1</sup>. There

In the copy of the edition of 1568 which I have used the letters A. P. C. do not occur after Proverbs. Mr F. Fry tells me that he has 'both 'leaves of this edition, one with A. P. 'C., and one without.' [These are now in the Library of the Bible Society.]

To the other books no initials are appended. [But in ed. 1568 we find M. C. under the initial letters of Genesis, Exodus, the Gospel of St Matthew, the Second Epistle to the Corinthians, the Epistle to the Galatians (in some copies), Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, 1 and 2 Thessalonians, 1 and 2 Timothy, Titus, Philemon, and the Hebrews, which may indicate that the revision of these books was superintended by the Archbishop himself. Similarly to the initial letters of 1 Peter v., 2 Peter iii., 1 John v., 3 John, Jude, and Rev. xxii. are attached the initials H. L., which may be those of Hugh Jones, Bishop of Llandaff, who was a friend of Parker's, and perhaps took up what had been assigned to the Bishop of Lincoln.]

which it was designed: 'Because I 'would you knew 'all,' he writes to Cecil [5 Oct. 1568], 'I send you a 'note to signify who first travailed in 'the divers Books; though after them 'some other perusing was had; the 'letters of their names be partly 'affixed in the end of their Books; 'which I thought a policy to shew 'them, to make them more diligent, 'as answerable for their doings...The 'Printer hath honestly done his diligence; if your honour would obtain of the Queen's highness that this edition might be licensed, and only 'commended in public reading in 'Churches, to draw to one uniformity, 'it were no great cost to the most 'parishes, and a relief to him for his 'great charges sustained.' (Biblioth. Sussex. II. pp. 311 f.) He presses for the grant of the Queen's license 'as well for that in many churches 'they want their Books, and have 'long time looked for this; as for 'that in certain places, be publicly 'used some translations which have 'not been laboured in your realm, 'having inspersed divers prejudicial 'notes which might have been also 'well spared.' (Id. II. p. 313.) [The list of translators given in Parker's letter to Cecil (Parker Correspondence, pp. 334-6, ed. Parker Soc.) does not exactly correspond with that given in is no evidence to shew whether the Queen returned any answer to his petition. The action of Convocation however was decided, and cannot have been in opposition to the royal will. It was ordered in the 'Constitutions and 'Canons Ecclesiastical' of 1571 that 'every archbishop and 'bishop should have at his house a copy of the holy Bible 'of the largest volume as lately printed at London.....and 'that it should be placed in the hall or the large dining 'room, that it might be useful to their servants or to 'strangers<sup>1</sup>. It was also enjoined that each Cathedral should have a copy<sup>2</sup>; and the same provision was extended 'as far as it could be conveniently done' to all churches<sup>3</sup>.

These injunctions however do not seem to have been rigorously carried out; and sixteen years afterward Arch-

the previous note. The Archbishop himself undertook Genesis, Exodus, the first two Gospels, and 2 Corinthians—Hebrews. Andrew Pier-son (Cantuariæ) was responsible for Leviticus and Numbers as well as Job and Proverbs, and Deuteronomy was the only part of the Pentateuch entrusted to Alley, Bishop of Exeter. Joshua—2 Samuel were given to Davies, Bishop of St David's; Kings and Chronicles to Sandys, Bishop of Worcester; Ecclesiastes and Canticles to Andrew Perne (Cantabrigiæ), Dean of Ely; Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Lamentations to Horne, Bishop of Winchester; Ezekiel and Daniel to Bentham, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry; the Minor Prophets to Grindal, Bishop of London; Esdras, Judith, Tobit, and Wisdom to Barlow, Bishop of Chichester; Ecclesiasticus, Susanna, Barnab, and Maccabees to Parkhurst, Bishop of Norwich; Luke and John to Scambler, Bishop of Peterborough; Acts and Romans to Cox, Bishop of Ely; 1 Corinthians to Goodman, Dean of Westminster; the Canonical Epistles and Apocrypha to Bullingham, Bishop of Lincoln. No mention is made of the translator of the Psalms, and the books from Ezra to Esther are not assigned to any one. The Sum of the Scripture, the Tables of Christ's line, the Argument of the Scriptures, the first Preface to the Whole Bible, the Preface to the Psalter, and the Preface to the New Testament, were written by the Archbishop.]

bishop Whitgift took measures for their better observance. Writing to the Bishop of Lincoln, he says: 'whereas I am credibly informed that divers as well parish churches as chapels of ease, are not sufficiently furnished with Bibles, but some have either none at all, or such as be torn and defaced, and yet not of the translation authorized by the synods of bishops: these are therefore to require you strictly in your visitations or otherwise to see that all and every the said churches and chapels in your diocese be provided of one Bible or more, at your discretion, of the translation allowed as aforesaid.....And for the performance thereof I have caused her highness' printer to imprint two volumes of the said translation of the Bible aforesaid, a bigger and a less...both which are now extant and ready<sup>1</sup>.'

There is no evidence to shew how far this new effort was successful in securing exclusively for the Bishops' Bible public use in churches. The revision did not at least gain any such hold upon the clergy as to lead even them to adopt it alone privately, and when Martin assailed the English versions (1582) he takes the Great Bible, or the Bishops' or the Genevan indifferently; and Fulke in his answer does not claim absolute precedence for any one of them. But while the Genevan Bible held its ground, there can be no doubt that the Great Bible was soon entirely displaced by the Bishops'; and no edition of it appears to have been printed after 1569.

§ 9. THE RHEIMS AND DOWAY VERSION.

The wide circulation and great influence of the reformed versions of the Bible made it impossible for the Roman Catholic scholars to withstand the demand for vernacular translations of Scripture sanctioned by authority in their churches. The work was undertaken not as in itself either necessary or generally desirable, but in special consideration of the circumstances of the time<sup>1</sup>. So it came to pass that 'since Luthers reuolt...diuers learned Catholikes, for 'the more speedy abolishing of a number of false and 'impious translations put forth by sundry sectes, and for 'the better preseruatiō or reclaime of many good soules 'endangered thereby, haue published the Bible in the 'seuerall languages of almost all the principal provinces of 'the Latin Church' in the sixteenth century<sup>2</sup>. The design of an English Version formed part of the systematic plan for winning back England to the Papacy, which was shaped and guided by the energy and skill of [Cardinal] Allen. The centre of Allen's labours was the seminary which he first established at Douai (1568), and afterwards transferred temporarily to Rheims (1578). And it was in this seminary that the Rhemish Version, as it is commonly called, was made.

The history of the Rhemish Version has not yet been traced in contemporary records<sup>3</sup>; but the prefaces to the Old and New Testaments explain with perfect clearness the objects and method of the translators. They professed to find the cause of the troubles of England in the free handling of the deep mysteries of Scripture which led men to 'contemne or easily passe ouer all the moral partes.' 'If 'our new Ministers had had [that sense of the depth and 'profundity of wisdom...], this cogitation and care that these 'and all other wise men haue, and euer had, our countrie 'had neuer fallen to this miserable state in religion, & that 'vnder pretence, colour, and coūtenance of Gods word: 'neither should vertue and good life haue bene so pitifully 'corrupted in time of such reading, toiling, tumbling and 'translating the booke of oure life and saluation...<sup>4</sup>' The text of these new translations, they plead, was full of alterations, transpositions, new pointings; the authorship and valuable contribution to this subject is by Dr J. G. Carleton, The part of Rheims in the making of the English Bible, 1902.]

authority of whole books were questioned; old terms and forms were abandoned; the language was dealt with as freely as if it were the language 'of Liuie, Virgil, or 'Terence.' 'We therfore,' they continue, 'hauing com'passion to see our beloued countrie men, with extreme 'danger of their soules, to vse onely such prophane transla'tions, and erroneous mens mere phantasies, for the pure
'and blessed word of truth, much also moued therevnto by
'the desires of many deuout persons: haue set forth, for 'you (benigne readers) the new Testament to begin withal,
'trusting that it may giue occasion to you, after diligent
'perusing thereof, to lay away at lest such their impure
'versions as hitherto you haue ben forced to occupie'<sup>1</sup>

A controversial commentary formed a necessary part of the undertaking. It was pleaded that 'though the text, 'truely translated, might sufficiently, in the sight of the 'learned and al indifferent men...controule the aduersaries 'corruptions...yet...somewhat to help the faithful reader in 'the difficulties of diuers places, we [the editors] haue also 'set forth reasonable large ANNOTATIONS, thereby to shew '...both the heretical corruptions and false deductions, & 'also the Apostolike tradition, the expositions of the holy 'fathers, the decrees of the Catholike Church and most 'auncient Coūcels: which meanes whosoever trusteth not, 'for the sense of holy Scriptures, but had rather folow his 'priuate judgmēt or the arrogāt spirit of these Sectaries, he 'shal worthily through his owne wilfulnes be deceiued...'<sup>2</sup>

The names of those who performed the work are nowhere given in connexion with it, but internal evidence leaves no doubt that the chief share in the translation was undertaken by Gregory Martin, sometime fellow of St John's College, Oxford, a scholar of distinguished attainments both in Hebrew and Greek. Upon renouncing Protestantism Martin had studied for some years at Douai and then after an interval of travel settled at Rheims as one of the readers of divinity in the English College there.

Other scholars were probably associated with Martin in the task of translation or in the composition of the notes. It is said that Dr Allen himself, Dr R. Bristow, formerly a fellow of Exeter College, and Dr J. Reynolds, formerly a fellow of New College, among others, assisted Martin in revising his translation. More particularly also the notes on the New Testament have been attributed to Dr Bristow, and those on the Old Testament to Dr Worthington. However this may be, Martin clearly identified himself with the work in a treatise which he published on the 'Manifold corruptions of the Holy Scriptures by the heretikes' (Rhemes, 1582), very shortly after the appearance of the first instalment of the new version<sup>1</sup>. Yet it may be concluded from a comparison of the annotations with this treatise that Martin's work lay in the version and not in the commentary. His labours, as it seems, proved fatal to him. He died in the same year in which the books appeared to which he had devoted his life.

When the New Testament was published the whole version had been 'long since' finished though the publication was delayed 'for lacke of good meanes<sup>2</sup>.' This 'one 'general cause,' the 'poor estate [of the favourers of the 'version] in banishment<sup>3</sup>,' delayed the appearance of the Old Testament till 1609-10 (Douai). The complete work cannot have had an extensive circulation. It was reprinted in 1635 (Rouen), and then not again for one hundred and fifteen years, when it was revised by Dr R. Challoner (1749-50); and this revision has formed the basis of the later editions<sup>4</sup>.

The New Testament, as might have been expected, attracted more attention. It was reprinted at Antwerp in 1600 and 1621, and again (at Rouen?) in 1633, though not afterwards for more than a hundred years<sup>1</sup>. But it obtained a still larger circulation by the help of its opponents. The annotations called for an answer. A powerful party in England urged Cartwright to prepare one<sup>2</sup>. Difficulties however were interposed in his way and his reply was not published in a complete form till 1618, fifteen years after his death. In the mean time Fulke, who answered Martin's book on the 'Corruptions of Holy Scripture,' answered his edition of the New Testament also (1589)<sup>3</sup>. He printed the Rhemish and Bishops' (revised 1572) version in parallel columns, and added to the Rhemish notes, which he gave at length, the refutation or qualifications which they seemed to require. This book became very popular, and the Rhemish Testament gained in this way a wide currency which it would not otherwise have enjoyed. But questions of scholarship or textual criticism are wholly subordinated in this examination to larger topics of controversy. At the same time the scriptural vocabulary was, as we shall see afterwards, insensibly increased, and even Bacon goes aside to praise 'the discretion and tenderness of the Rhemish translation,' which ever distinguished the Christian grace 'charity' (ἀγάπη) from 'love' (ἔρως)<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> The priority of the publication of the New Testament is shewn by a reference to it in the Preface to the Discoverie of the manifold corruptions ... (p. 63, Parker Soc. reprint). On the other hand the Discovery was already composed when the Preface to the New Testament was written:

<sup>3</sup> Other editions of this book were published in 1601, 1617, 1633. In the account of Fulke prefixed to the Parker reprint of his answer to Martin an edition is assigned also to the year 1580 by a surprising mistake.

§ 10. THE AUTHORISED VERSION.

There were, as we have seen, during the latter part of Elizabeth's reign two rival English Bibles<sup>1</sup>, the Bishops', which was sanctioned by ecclesiastical authority for public use<sup>2</sup>, and the Genevan, which was the common Bible of the people and even of scholars. If we may judge from the editions published, the circulation of the latter was more than quadruple that of the former, and the convenient forms in which it appeared marked its popular destination. There are only seven editions of the Bishops' Bible in quarto; all the others (eleven) are in folio; and no small edition was printed after that prepared by authority in 1584. Of the Genevan Bible, on the other hand, there are between 1568 and 1611 sixteen editions in octavo, fifty-two in quarto, and eighteen in folio<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> It would be interesting to determine the texts followed by the Elizabethan divines. On this the editions of the Parker Society, as far as I have examined them, give no help. Mr Anderson gives a few examples, II. 338. [According to Anderson the Geneva Bible was quoted by Gervase Babington, Bishop of Worcester, in his Annotations on the Five Books of Moses, and by George Abbot, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, in his Commentary on Jonah (1600). To these may be added John King, afterwards Bishop of London, in his Lectures on Jonas (1594). In an article on the Authorisation of the English Bible in Macmillan's Magazine for October, 1881, the present Archbishop of Canterbury shews that the Geneva version was used by Bishop Andrews in sermons preached in 1618, 1622, 1623, and 1624; by Bishop Laud in 1621; by Bishop Carleton in 1624; by Bishop Hall in 1613 and 1624; and by Dean Williams in 1624. In Hall's Meditations the headings are from the Authorised Version, but the quotations are almost always from the Geneva. The Archbishop examined more than fifty sermons preached between 1611 and 1630, and found that the texts of 27 were taken from the Geneva and only five from the Bishops' Bible. An independent examination which I made of the Sermons of Bishop Andrews, ranging from 1589 to 1624, proved that a very large majority of his texts were taken from the Genevan Bible, and that though he was one of the translators of the Authorised Version, he seldom preached from it. The text of his Funeral Sermon by Bishop Buckeridge in 1626 was taken from the Bishops' Bible.]

This rivalry was in every way undesirable; and in the conference on ecclesiastical matters which was held at Hampton Court shortly after the accession of James I, the authorised version of the Bible was brought forward as one of the things 'amiss in the Church.' The conference had no official or constitutional character, and was summoned by the king's proclamation, who had not yet himself been recognized as king by Parliament. But though it proved ineffectual in all other points, we owe to it our present Bible. The question was brought forward by Dr Reynolds, President of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, who quoted several mistranslations from the authorised Bibles<sup>1</sup>. 'My Lord of London (Bancroft) well added: That if every man's humour should be followed there would be no end of translating. Whereupon his Highness wished that some special pains should be taken in that behalf for one uniform translation—professing that he could never yet see a Bible well translated in English; but the worst of all his Majesty thought the Geneva to be—and this to be done by the best learned in both the Universities; after them to be reviewed by the bishops and the chief learned of the Church; from them to be presented to the Privy Council; and lastly to be ratified by his royal authority; and so this whole Church to be bound unto it and none other. Marry that he has altogether sixty-six editions in quarto, including those of later date, and that the whole number must be at least seventy. [See p. 93, note 3.]

The account given in the Preface to the Authorised Version is somewhat different from, though reconcileable with, Barlow's. 'The very Historically true is, that vpon the importunate petitions of the Puritanes, at his Maiesties comming to this Crowne, the Conference at Hampton Court hauing bene appointed for hearing their complaints: when by force of 'reason they were put from all other grounds, they had recourse at the last, to this shift, that they could not with good conscience subscribe to the Communion booke, since it maintained the Bible as it was there translated, which was as they said, a most corrupted translation. And although this was iudged to be but a very poore and emptie shift; yet euen hereupon did his Maiestie beginne to bethinke himselfe of the good that might ensue by a new translation, and presently after gaue order for this Translation which is now presented vnto thee.'

'withal he gave this caveat, upon a word cast out by my 'lord of London, that no marginal notes should be added,
'having found in them which are annexed to the Geneva
'translation, which he saw in a Bible given him by an 'English lady, some notes very partial, untrue, seditious,
'and savouring too much of dangerous and traitorous
'conceits. As for example, Ex. i. 19; 2 Chron. xv. 16<sup>1</sup>.'

Nothing further was done at the conference, and the ecclesiastical authorities do not appear to have been anxious or even ready to engage in the proposed revision<sup>2</sup>. Bancroft had expressed what was probably a very general feeling, and in the Convocation which followed shortly afterwards (March—July, 1604) it was enjoined that every parish as 'yet unfurnished of the Bible of 'the largest volume<sup>3</sup>' should provide one within a convenient time, so that it seems unlikely that they even expected that it would be speedily carried out. But

Mr Anderson claims for Dr Reynolds the honour of having proposed originally that the translation should be 'without any marginal notes' (II. 371). But the passage of Galloway which he quotes, so far from professing to give Reynolds' own scheme, gives 'the heads which his Majesty would 'have reformed at this time.' 'Sun-dry,' he continues, 'as they favoured, 'gave out copies of things here concluded: whereupon myself took occasion, as I was an ear and eye 'witness, to set them down, and 'presented them to his Majesty, who 'with his own hand mended some 'things, and eked other things which 'I had omitted. Which corrected 'copy with his own hand I have, and 'of it have sent you herein the just 'transumpt word by word.. ' The conclusion in question is: 'That a 'translation be made of the whole 'Bible, as consonant as can be to the 'original Hebrew and Greek; and

'this to be set out and printed without 'any marginal notes, and only to be 'used in all Churches of England in 'time of Divine Service' (Cardwell, Hist. of Conferences, pp. 213, 214).

<sup>2</sup> Still in the note which was made apparently by Bancroft himself of 'things as shall be reformed,' occurs 'One uniform translation of the Bible 'to be made, and only to be used in 'all the churches of England' (Cardwell, Hist. of Conferences, p. 142).

<sup>3</sup> Canon 80. From a comparison with Whitgift's injunctions (p. 102) the reference is probably to the Bishops' Bible. But Dr Reynolds' quotations from the Great Bibles 'allowed in 'the reign of Henry VIII and Edward VI,' as still publicly used, shew that these had not been done away with or forbidden.

It is worthy of notice that in Archbp. Bancroft's visitation articles of 1605 the 'Bible of the greatest 'volume' is not mentioned as in the corresponding articles of Cranmer and Whitgift (§ 48. Cardwell's Doc. Ann. ed. 2, II. 110).

about the same time the king had matured his scheme. It is not known in what manner the scholars to be entrusted with the revision were selected. It appears however that some were submitted to the king who approved of the choice, and the list was complete by June 30th. The undertaking was no doubt really congenial to James' character, and Bancroft writing to Cambridge on that day to hasten on its execution adds, 'I am persuaded his 'royal mind rejoiceth more in the good hope which he 'hath for the happy success of that work, than of his 'peace concluded with Spain<sup>1</sup>' Three weeks afterwards (July 22nd) the king wrote to Bancroft, who was acting as representative of the vacant see of Canterbury, announcing that he had 'appointed certain learned men, to the number 'of four and fifty, for the translating of the Bible,' and requiring him to take measures whereby he might be able to recompense the translators by church preferment. 'Furthermore,' he adds, 'we require you to move all our 'bishops to inform themselves of all such learned men 'within their several dioceses, as, having especial skill in 'the Hebrew and Greek tongues, have taken pains in their 'private studies of the Scriptures for the clearing of any 'obscurities either in the Hebrew or in the Greek, or 'touching any difficulties or mistakings in the former 'English translation, which we have now commanded to be 'thoroughly viewed and amended, and thereupon to write 'unto them, earnestly charging them and signifying our 'pleasure therein that they send such their observations 'either to Mr Lively, our Hebrew reader in Cambridge, 'or to Dr Harding, our Hebrew reader in Oxford, or to 'Dr Andrews, dean of Westminster, to be imparted to the 'rest of their several companies; that so our said intended 'translation may have the help and furtherance of all our 'principal learned men within this our kingdom<sup>2</sup>.'

Having provided in this manner for the future remuneration of the scholars whose services he had engaged, the king was equally prudent in endeavouring to obtain the means of defraying their immediate expenses. These 'his majesty,' it is said, 'was very ready of his most princely disposition to have borne, but some of my lords, as things now go, did hold it inconvenient'; so 'he requested the bishops and chapters to contribute toward 'this work,' with the additional stimulus that 'his majesty would be acquainted with every man's liberality.' Bancroft in communicating this notice to the different dignitaries to whom it applied, adds, 'I do not think that a thousand marks will finish the work,' so that the amount of the tax might not be left altogether in uncertainty<sup>1</sup>. But in spite of the royal request nothing seems to have been subscribed, and from the life of one of the translators it appears that they received nothing but free entertainment in the colleges till some of them met in London for the final revision of the work<sup>2</sup>.

It does not appear in what way the actual selection of the revisers was made, but it is most likely that names were suggested by the universities and approved by the king. There is also some discrepancy as to the number engaged upon the work. The king speaks of fifty-four, and only forty-seven names appear upon the list. It is possible that some were originally appointed who did not in the end take any part in the revision, or that a committee of bishops was chosen as an independent group of revisers; but no satisfactory solution of the difficulty has yet been proposed<sup>3</sup>. The delay, however, which took place in the commencement of the revision is sufficient to account for its existence; for though the preliminaries were settled before the end of 1604, the revision does not appear to have been seriously undertaken till 1607<sup>4</sup>. The death of Mr Lively in 1605 was no doubt a grave check to the progress of the scheme, and it is not hard to imagine other obstacles which may have hindered it.

<sup>3</sup> Of the bishops, Bancroft, though not among the translators, is said to have 'altered the translation in fourteen places' to make it 'speak the prelatial language,' and to have been

'so potent' in pressing his corrections that there was no contradicting him (Dr Hill quoted by Mr Anderson, II. 378).

<sup>4</sup> Some of the revisers may indeed have begun their work at once. Thus Boys is said to have worked for four years before the final revision, which

When at length the whole plan was ready for execution, the translators were divided into six companies, of which two met respectively at Westminster, Cambridge, and Oxford, and the whole work was thus divided among them<sup>1</sup>.

took nine months (Life, quoted by Anderson, II. 381). But the translators fix about two years and three-quarters as the length of time spent on the revision. See p. 116.

<sup>1</sup> This list is taken chiefly from Dr Cardwell's reprint of Burnet's list (Doc. Annals, ed. 2, II. 140 ff.). It is only approximately correct, and does not suit exactly the date 1604, as Barlow was not then Dean of Chester, nor 1607, when Mr Lively was dead. [Barlow was installed Dean of Chester 12 June, 1602, and in May, 1605, was elected Bishop of Rochester. Lively died in the beginning of May, 1605. The list is therefore correct for 1604.] Two other names, Dr J. Aglionby and Dr L. Hutton, are given elsewhere, in place of Dr Eedes and Dr Ravens. See Cardwell, l.c. ed. 2, p. 144 n. Of these scholars many (as Andrews, Overall, Savile, and Reynolds) have obtained an enduring reputation apart from this common work in which they were associated. Others, whose names are less familiar, were distinguished for special acquirements requisite for their task. Lively, Spalding, King, and Byng were successively professors of Hebrew at Cambridge, and Harding and Kilbye at Oxford. Harmer and Perrin were professors of Greek at Oxford, and Downes at Cambridge; Bedwell was the most distinguished Arabic scholar of the time. Saravia was an accomplished modern linguist. Thompson (Camb.), Chatterton, Smith, and Boys were equally distinguished for their knowledge of ancient languages. It is one sign of the large choice of Hebraists which was offered at the time that Boys, who was especially famous for oriental learning, was originally employed upon the Apocrypha.

No doubt can be entertained as to the ability and acquirements of the revisers. At the same time care was taken to check individual fancies. Their duty was accurately defined in a series of rules which were drawn up probably under the direction of Bancroft. These provide for an elaborate scheme of revision as well as furnish general directions for the execution of the work<sup>1</sup>.

1. 'The ordinary Bible read in the Church, commonly 'called the Bishops' Bible, to be followed, and as little 'altered as the truth of the original will permit.

2. 'The names of the prophets and the holy writers, 'with the other names of the text to be retained as some notes on the translators of the Authorised Version which are printed in Appendix XII. All that can be ascertained about them from internal evidence is that they were written by a member of Emmanuel to a member of Trinity, perhaps Thomas Hill, Master of the College, who came from Emmanuel. The writer took his degree in 1621, and so was a younger contemporary of the translators, and the document appears to have been written not long before

1650. It is in some places difficult to decipher.]

An account of the rules given by the English Delegates to the Synod of Dort reduces the final number of the rules to seven. Anderson, II. 377. [See Appendix XIII.]

'nigh as may be, accordingly as they were vulgarly
'used.

3. 'The old ecclesiastical words to be kept, viz. the 'word Church not to be translated Congregation, &c.

4. 'When a word hath divers significations, that to be 'kept which hath been most commonly used by the most 'of the ancient fathers, being agreeable to the propriety
'of the place and the analogy of the faith.

5. 'The division of the chapters to be altered either 'not at all or as little as may be, if necessity so require.

6. 'No marginal notes at all to be affixed, but only 'for the explanation of the Hebrew or Greek words which 'cannot, without some circumlocution, so briefly and fitly
'be expressed in the text.

7. 'Such quotations of places to be marginally set 'down as shall serve for the fit reference of one Scripture
'to another.

8. 'Every particular man of each company to take 'the same chapter or chapters; and having translated or 'amended them severally by himself where he thinketh
'good, all to meet together, confer what they have done,
'and agree for their parts what shall stand.

9. 'As any one company hath dispatched any one 'book in this manner, they shall send it to the rest to be 'considered of seriously and judiciously, for his majesty
'is very careful in this point.

10. 'If any company, upon the review of the book
'so sent, doubt or differ upon any place, to send them
'word thereof, note the place, and withal send the reasons;
'to which if they consent not, the difference to be com'pounded at the general meeting, which is to be of the 'chief persons of each company at the end of the work.

11. 'When any place of special obscurity is doubted of,
'letters to be directed by authority to send to any learned
'man in the land for his judgment of such a place.

12. 'Letters to be sent from every bishop to the rest 'of his clergy, admonishing them of this translation in 'hand, and to move and charge as many as being skilful

'in the tongues and having taken pains in that kind, to 'send his particular observations to the company either
'at Westminster, Cambridge, or Oxford.

13. 'The directors in each company to be the Deans
'of Westminster and Chester for that place; and the king's 'professors in the Hebrew or Greek in either university.

14. 'These translations to be used when they agree
'better with the text than the Bishops' Bible : viz. Tindale's, 'Matthew's, Coverdale's, Whitchurch's, Geneva.

15. 'Besides the said directors before mentioned, three 'or four of the most ancient and grave divines in either 'of the universities, not employed in translating, to be 'assigned by the Vice-Chancellor upon conference with '[the] rest of the Heads to be overseers of the translations,
'as well Hebrew as Greek, for the better observation of 'the fourth rule above specified<sup>1</sup>.'

It is impossible to tell how far all these provisions were adhered to. Almost all that is certainly known of the proceedings of the revisers is contained in the noble preface which the printers have removed from modern editions of the Bible. In this Dr Miles Smith, afterwards Bishop of Gloucester, writing in the name of his fellow-labourers, gives some account of the time which was spent upon the revision, and of the manner and spirit in which it was executed. 'Neither did we,' he says, 'run ouer the worke with that posting haste that the Septuagint did, if that be true which is reported of them, that they finished it in 72. days..... The worke hath not been hudled vp in 72. dayes, but hath cost the workemen, as light as it seemeth, the paines of twise seuen times seuentie two dayes and more' (about two years and nine months). 'We are so farre off,' he writes again, 'from condemning any of their labours that traueiled before vs in this kinde, either in this land or beyond sea, either in King Henries time or King Edwards (if there were

<sup>1</sup> Selden, in his Table Talk, has given a similar account of the proceeding of the translators, which he may have received from someone who was engaged in the work: ‘The English Translation of the Bible is the best Translation in the World and renders the Sense of the Original best, taking in for the English Translation the Bishops’ Bible as well as King James’s. The Translation in King James’ time took an excellent way. That part of the Bible was given to him who was most excellent in such a tongue (as the Apocrypha to Andrew Downs) and then they met together, and one read the Translation, the rest holding in their hands some Bible, either of the learned Tongues, or

'reuisse that which we had done, and to bring back to the 'anuill that which we had hammered: but hauing and 'vsing as great helpes as were needfull, and fearing no 'reproch for slownesse, nor coueting praise for expediti-
'tion, wee haue at the length, through the good hand
'of the Lord vpon vs, brought the worke to that passe
'that you see.'

When the revision was completed at the different centres, 'two members were chosen from each company' to superintend the final preparation of the work for the press in London, and 'Three copies of the whole Bible 'were sent there, one from Cambridge, a second from 'Oxford, and a third from Westminster'. It is not likely that this committee did more than arrange the materials which were already collected; but whatever their work was, it was completed in nine months, and the whole labour of the revision was thus brought to a successful end<sup>3</sup>.

'French, Spanish, Italian, &c.: if 'they found any fault they spoke, 'if not he read on' (Table Talk, p. 20, ed. 1868).

<sup>1</sup> As the revisers were 'six in all,' it is evident that by 'company' we must understand 'centre': i.e. Oxford, Cambridge and Westminster.

<sup>3</sup> It is remarkable that none of the many copies of the Bishops' Bible used for the revision have yet been discovered. There is an interesting volume in the Bodleian Library (Bishops' Bible, Barker, 1602), which has been commonly but certainly wrongly supposed to be one of the copies prepared for the press. The text is corrected throughout some books to the Royal Version; and in some cases letters are attached (g, j, t) which appear to indicate the sources from which the corrections were derived. Mr J. Wordsworth, Fellow of Brasenose [now Bishop of Salisbury], has kindly given me the following summary of the extent of the corrections:

Gen. i.—xxv. with g, j, t, and perhaps another letter.

Gen. xxvi. to Joshua inclusive with g (j again from Deut. xxxii. to end).

Judges—Is. iv. corrected without added letters; and so also

Jer. i.—iv.

Ezech. i.—iv.

Dan. i.—iv.

The Minor Prophets.

St Matthew, St Mark, St Luke.

St John xvii. to end.

There are also two notes on Eph. iv. 8, 2 Thess. ii. 15.

From collations which I owe to the great kindness of the Rev. H. O. Coxe, the Bodleian Librarian, it is certain that 'g' marks corrections obtained from the Genevan Version. The materials which I have are not as yet sufficient to identify 't' and 'j.' [They are probably Tremellius and Junius.]

The revised version appeared at length from the press of R. Barker, in 1611. The book is said to be 'Newly 'Translated out of the Originall Tongues; And with the 'former Translations diligently compared and reuised, by 'his Maiesties speciall Commandement.' A further notice adds that it is 'Appointed to be read in Churches.' From what has been said, it will appear with what limitations the first statement must be interpreted. The second is more difficult of explanation; for no evidence has yet been produced to shew that the version was ever publicly sanctioned by Convocation or by Parliament, or by the Privy Council, or by the king. It gained its currency partly, it may have been, by the weight of the king's name, partly by the personal authority of the prelates and scholars who had been engaged upon it, but still more by its own intrinsic superiority over its rivals. Copies of the 'whole Bible of the largest volume and 'latest edition' are required to be in churches by the Visitation Articles of Laud 1622 (St David's), 1628 (London). In the Scotch Canons of 1636 it is said still more distinctly that 'the Bible shall be of the translation 'of King James' (Cap. 16, § 1). Similar provisions are, I believe, contained in the Visitation Articles of London 1612, and Norwich 1619; but these I have been unable to see.

The printing of the Bishops' Bible was at once stayed when the new version was definitely undertaken. No edition is given in the lists later than 1606<sup>1</sup>, though the New Testament from it was reprinted as late as 1618 or

The history of the book is unknown; but the occurrence of the reference-letters is at least a certain proof that it was not designed for the press. In all probability it contains simply a scholar's collation of the Royal and Bishops' texts, with an attempt to trace the origin of the corrections.

The corrections throughout the O. T. are apparently in the same hand: those in the N. T. are in a different hand and 'considerably more 'modern.'

<sup>1</sup> [An edition of 1606 is mentioned in the Catalogue of the Duke of Sussex's Library, but this is probably an error and the Geneva Bible of that year was intended. A copy of this was sold when the Duke's Library was dispersed.]

1619<sup>1</sup>. So far ecclesiastical influence naturally reached. But it was otherwise with the Genevan Version, which was chiefly confined to private use. This competed with the King's Bible for many years, and it was not till about the middle of the century that it was finally displaced. And thus, at the very time when the monarchy and the Church were, as it seemed, finally overthrown, the English people by their silent and unanimous acceptance of the new Bible gave a spontaneous testimony to the principles of order and catholicity of which both were an embodiment.

Some steps indeed were taken for a new version during the time of the Commonwealth. The Long Parliament shortly before it was dissolved (April, 1653) made an order that 'a Bill should be brought in for a new translation 'of the Bible out of the original tongues,' but nothing more was done at that time<sup>2</sup>. Three years afterwards the scheme was revived, and Whitelocke has preserved an interesting account of the proceedings which followed.

'At the grand committee [of the House] for Religion, 'ordered That it be referred to a sub-committee to send 'for and advise with Dr [Brian] Walton, Mr Hughes, 'Mr [Edmund] Castle, Mr [Samuel] Clark, Mr Poulk<sup>3</sup>, 'Dr [Ralph] Cudworth, and such others as they shall think 'fit, and to consider of the Translations and impressions 'of the Bible, and to offer their opinions thereon to this 'Committee; and that it be especially commended to 'the Lord Commissioner Whitelocke to take care of this 'business.

'This committee often met at Whitelocke's house, and 'had the most learned men in the Oriental tongues to 'consult with in this great business, and divers excellent 'and learned observations of some mistakes in the Translations of the Bible in English; which yet was agreed

‘to be the best of any Translation in the world; great pains was taken in it, but it became fruitless by the ‘Parliament’s Dissolution<sup>1</sup>.’

With this notice the external history of the English Version appropriately ends<sup>2</sup>. From the middle of the seventeenth century, the King’s Bible has been the acknowledged Bible of the English-speaking nations throughout the world simply because it is the best. A revision which embodied the ripe fruits of nearly a century of labour, and appealed to the religious instinct of a great Christian people, gained by its own internal character a vital authority which could never have been secured by any edict of sovereign rulers<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>3</sup> The labours of Hugh Broughton on the English Bible ought not to be passed over without notice. This great Hebraist violently attacked the Bishops’ Bible, and sketched a plan for a new version which his own arrogance was sufficient to make impracticable. He afterwards published translations of Daniel, Ecclesiastes, Lamentations, and Job, and offered his help towards the execution of the royal version. His overbearing temper, as it appears, caused him to be excluded from the work; but his printed renderings were not without influence upon the revisers: e.g. Dan. iii. 5. ### THE INTERNAL HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE.

Oh, if we draw a circle premature
Heedless of far gain,
Greedy for quick returns of profit, sure
Bad is our bargain !
Was it not great? did not he throw on God,
(He loves the burthen)—
God's task to make the heavenly period
Perfect the earthen.....
That low man seeks a little thing to do,
Sees it and does it :
This high man, with a great thing to pursue,
Dies ere he knows it.....
That has the world here—should he need the next,
Let the world mind him !
This throws himself on God, and unperplex Seeking shall find Him.....
Lofty designs must close in like effects :
Loftily lying,
Leave him—still loftier than the world suspects,
Living and dying.

CHAPTER III.

THE INTERNAL HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE.

SUCH in a general outline was the external history of the English Bible. We have still to inquire how it was made? with what helps? on what principles? by what laws it was modified from time to time? and how far our authorised version bears in itself the traces of its gradual formation? To some of these questions only tentative or imperfect answers can be rendered at present; yet it is something to clear the way to a fuller investigation; and when once the novelty and complication of the problems become evident, it cannot fail but that a combination of labour will achieve their complete solution. Hitherto nothing has been done systematically towards the work. A few vague surmises and hasty generalizations have gained unchallenged currency and stopped thorough search; yet when viewed simply in its literary aspect, the history of the growth of the authorised text involves a more comprehensive and subtle criticism, and is therefore filled with a deeper interest, than any similar history. Each revision stands in a definite relation to a particular position of the English Church, and may be expected to reflect its image in some degree. Moreover we possess the work at each stage of its structure and not only in its final completeness. Each part can be examined as it was first planned and executed, and not only as it was finally incorporated into a more complex whole. We can even determine the materials out of which it was raised, and the various resources of which its authors could avail themselves at each point of their task.

For us the result stands now amidst the accumulated treasures of later researches. But if we would appreciate it rightly in itself we must once again surround it by the conditions under which it was obtained.

The close of the 15th century sealed a revolution in Europe. The ecclesiastical language of the West had given place to or at least admitted into fellowship the sacred languages of the East. It was in vain that the more ignorant of the clergy denounced Greek and Hebrew as the fatal sources of heathenism and Judaism; it was vain that they could be popularly represented as emblems of apostate peoples of GOD while the Latin symbolized the faithful; the noblest and most far-seeing scholars, lay or cleric, recognized in the new learning a handmaid of religion, and took measures for its honourable admission into the circle of liberal education. In his University at Alcalá the great Cardinal Ximenes made provision for the teaching of Hebrew and Greek with Latin, and consecrated the study in his noble Polyglott. At Louvain a foundation for the like purpose was added to the University about 1516 by Busleiden. Wolsey appears to have contemplated a similar course in his College at Oxford, where he founded in 1519 a chair of Greek<sup>1</sup>. When complaints were made, Henry, acting no doubt under his inspiration, enjoined that 'the study of the Scriptures in the original languages 'should not only be permitted for the future, but received 'as a branch of the academical institution<sup>2</sup>.' The work of Wolsey was left unfinished, but it is not without interest to find among his canons two, John Fryth and Richard Taverner, who became afterwards distinguished for their labours in the translation of Scripture, and at least seven others who were sufferers by the first persecution which followed after the introduction of Tindale's New Testament<sup>3</sup>. Thus everywhere men were being disciplined for rendering the original text of the Bible into the living languages of Europe, and at the end of the first quarter of the 16th century sufficient materials were gathered for the accomplishment of their office.

The appliances for the independent study of the Greek of the New Testament and the Septuagint Version of the Old were fairly adequate. Grammars were in wide circulation, of which the earliest was that of Lascaris (Milan, 1476), and the most enduring that of Clenardus (Louvain, 1530). In the interval between the appearance of these, numerous others were published in Italy, France, and Germany<sup>1</sup>. The first lexicon of Craston (1480) was republished in a more convenient form by Aldus (1497) and supplemented by the important collections of Guarino (Phavorinus) in his Etymologicum Magnum. But these and all other earlier lexicons were eclipsed by the so-called Commentaries of Budæus (Paris, 1529), a true Thesaurus of Greek, which still remains a vast monument and storehouse of learning. The very names of many of the great German scholars shew the passion with which the study was pursued. Melanchthon (Schwarzerd), Ecolampadius (Hausschein), Capnio (Reuchlin), Erasmus (Gerhard), Cerdanus (Horn), are memorable instances to prove the power of Greek to furnish home names to the Teutonic nations. And though England can boast of no original Greek works till a later time, yet Croke, a scholar of Grocyn, first introduced a thorough knowledge of the language into northern Germany, where, it is said, he was received 'like a heavenly messenger'.<sup>2</sup>

The pursuit of Hebrew was not less flourishing in the North. In Italy Greek had been welcomed at first as a new spring of culture. Beyond the Alps Greek and Hebrew were looked upon as the keys to Divine Truth. So it was that while Greek languished in Italy and Hebrew scarcely gained a firm footing among the mass of students; in Germany both were followed up with an ardent zeal which for good alike and for evil is yet fruitful in great issues. An Italian of the early part of the 16th century instinctively marked the spiritual difference of the North and South when he observed that in Germany Hebrew was prized in the same manner as Latin in Italy. Thus the early translators of the Old Testament found materials already fitted for their use. The first Hebrew grammar was composed by Pellican (1503). This was followed by that of Reuchlin, with a dictionary, in 1506. Another by S. Münster appeared in 1525, who published also a Chaldee grammar in 1527. Pagninus, the translator of the Bible, added a new dictionary in 1529. The great Complutensian Polyglott (published 1520, finished 1517) contained a Latin translation of the Targum of Onkelos and a complete Lexicon to the Hebrew and Chaldee texts, with a Hebrew grammar.

In the mean time, while all the chief classical authors had been published, the original texts and some of the ancient versions of Holy Scripture had also become accessible. The Latin Vulgate is supposed to have been the first book printed (c. 1455), and this first edition was followed by a multitude of others, in some of which, and notably in the Latin text of the Complutensian Polyglott, old manuscripts were used.

The Hebrew of the Old Testament was first published completely at Soncino in 1488. Many other editions followed, which were crowned by the great Rabbinical Bibles of Bomberg in 1517 and 1525: these were furnished with the Targums and the commentaries of the greatest early Jewish scholars. Complete Latin translations from the Hebrew were made by Sanctes Pagninus (1527), and by Sebast. Münster (1534-5). Considerable portions were rendered afresh in Latin by Zwingli and Œcolampadius; and single books by many writers before 1535. The Septuagint was contained in the Complutensian Polyglott, and in a distinct text in the edition of Aldus 1518. The Greek Testament appeared for the first time many years after the Latin and Hebrew texts, edited by Erasmus with a new Latin translation in 1516<sup>1</sup>. A second edition followed in 1519: a third, which may be considered his standard edition, in 1522; and others in 1527, and 1535. An edition from the press of Aldus with some variations appeared together with the Septuagint in 1518. The Complutensian Polyglott printed in 1514, in which there is an independent text of the New Testament, was not published till 1520. Other editions followed soon after which have little or no independent value.

It remains only to characterize generally the critical value of these editions. The Hebrew text of the Old Testament edited by [Jacob] Ben Chayim (1525) is substantially good. Indeed as Hebrew Manuscripts all belong to a comparatively late recension the extent of real variation between them is limited. The Latin texts accessible in the first half of the 16th century were indifferent. The Greek texts of the New Testament, and this is most important, were without exception based on scanty and late manuscripts, without the help of the oriental versions and the precious relics of the Old Latin. As a necessary consequence they are far from correct, and if the variations are essentially unimportant as a whole, yet the errors in the text of our English Testament inherited from them are considerably more important than the existing errors of translation.

Such were the materials which the first great Reformers found to help them in their work of rendering the original Scriptures into their own languages. Before the English labourers entered the field it was already occupied. Numerous students in Germany had translated separate books when Luther commenced the work which he was enabled to carry to a successful end. Luther's New Testament appeared in 1522 as the fruit of his seclusion in the Wartburg, and, like Tindale's, anonymously. The Pentateuch followed in 1523. The Historical books and the Hagiographa in 1524. The Prophets at various intervals

(Jonah in 1526) afterwards; and the whole work in 1534. The second revised edition did not appear till 1541. But in the meanwhile a band of scholars at Zurich, including Zwingli, Pellican, and Leo Juda, had taken Luther's work as the basis of a new translation up to the end of the Hagiographa, and completed it by an original translation of the Prophets and the Apocrypha. This was published in fragments from 1524—1529, and first completely in two forms in the latter year. It was republished in 1530, and with a new translation of the Hagiographa in 1531, and often afterwards<sup>1</sup>. Another German Bible with an original translation of the Prophets appeared at Worms in 1529<sup>2</sup>. The French translation of Lefevre (Faber Stapulensis) was made (1523—1534) from the Vulgate, and was not an independent work: that of Olivetan (Neuchâtel, 1535) is said to have been based in the Old Testament on Sanctes Pagninus, and in the New on Lefèvre<sup>3</sup>.

The works of the first German translators, or at least of Luther, must then be added to those previously enumerated as accessible to Tindale<sup>4</sup> during the execution.

<sup>1</sup> The editions which I have used are those of 1530 and 1534. I have not been able to consult the small edition of 1529 with glosses [they are but few]; nor have I collated the two editions or determined how far the translation in the earlier books differs as a whole from Luther's. The difference in isolated passages is very considerable.

<sup>3</sup> I have not examined Lefèvre's translation; and am ignorant also of the real character of Brucioli's Italian version (1530—1532), which is said to have been made from the original. [The marginal notes in the 1534 edition of Lefèvre were largely used in Matthew's Bible of 1537. In the Old Testament Brucioli is dependent greatly on Pagninus.]

As far as Tindale is concerned—and his work was the undoubted basis of the later revisions—his own words are sufficient: 'I had,' he says in the New Testament (1525), 'no man to counterfet [imitate], nether was of his Version of the New Testament. Luther's name was indeed at the time identified with the idea of vernacular versions of Scripture, and it is not surprising that More affirmed that Tindale's work was a translation of Luther's, an assertion in which he has been followed by writers who have less excuse<sup>1</sup>. What Tindale's version really was we have now to inquire.

§ I. TINDALE.

All external evidence goes to prove Tindale's originality as a translator<sup>2</sup>. He had, as we have seen, formed his purpose of translating the New Testament before he could have heard of Luther's<sup>3</sup>, and in the year in which that appeared (1522) went up to London with a translation from Isocrates as a proof of his knowledge of Greek. His knowledge of Hebrew and Greek is also incidentally attested by the evidence of Spalatinus<sup>4</sup>, of his opponent Joye<sup>5</sup>, and yet more clearly by the steady confidence with which he deals with points of Hebrew and Greek philology when they casually arise. Thus after defending his rendering of presbyteros (elder), charis (favour), agape (love), &c. against Sir T. More he says (1530): 'These things to be even so Mr More knoweth well enough: for

'holpe with englysshe of eny that 'had interpreted the same, or soche
'lyke thige i the scripture before-
'tyme.' (Epistle to the Reader, I. p. 390, Parker Soc. ed.) See p. 140 and App. VIII.

<sup>1</sup> Hallam's account is so amazing from the complication of blunders which it involves that it deserves to be quoted as a curiosity. 'From this translation [Luther's], and from the Latin Vulgate, the English one of Tyndale and Coverdale, published in 1535, or 1536, is avowedly taken. ... That of 1537, commonly called

'Matthews's Bible, from the name of the printer, though in substance the same as Tyndale's, was superintended by Rogers...' (Introd. to Lit. I. 373.) It is impossible that he could have examined any one of the books of which he thus summarily disposes.

'he understandeth the Greek, and he knew them long ere I'. Again in an earlier work he writes (1528): 'The Greeke tounge agreeth more with the English then wyth the Latin. And the properties of the Hebrue tounge agreeth a thousand tymes more wyth the Englishe, then wyth the Latyn<sup>2</sup>.'

But the translation of the New Testament itself is the complete proof of its own independence. It is impossible to read through a single chapter without gaining the assurance that Tindale rendered the Greek text directly, while he still consulted the Vulgate, the Latin translation of Erasmus, and the German of Luther. Thus taking a chapter at random we find in Eph. iv. the following certain traces of the peculiarities of the Greek which are lost in the Vulgate and the translations made from it.

2 in...longe sufferynge, forbearige one another...cum patientia supportantes...with pacience supportinge ech other...(Wycliffe, Rheims).

4 even as...sicut...as (Wycliffe, Rheims).

8 and hath geven...dedit...he 3af...(Wycliffe, Rheims).

17 as wother gentyls...sicut et...as hethene men (Wycliffe), as also the Gentiles (Rheims).

27 backbyter...diabolo...the deuel (Wycliffe, Rheims).

29 filthy cōmunicacion.....sermo malus.....yuel word (Wycliffe): naughtie speache (Rheims).

— butt thatt whych is good to edefye with all, when nede ys...sed si quis bonus ad ædificationem fidei... but if ony is good to the edificacioun of feith (Wycliffe); but if there be any good to the edifying of the faith (Rheims).

And so again Tindale's rendering of vv. 5, 12, 14, 22 might come from the Greek but hardly from the Latin. On the other hand it is evident that he had the Vulgate before him, and that he owed to it the rendering 'blind-

'ness of their hearts' (cæcitatem), which has wrongly retained its place in the Authorised Version.

From Luther the same chapter differs in the entire complexion of the rendering and unequivocally in the interpretation of the following passages:

5 Let ther be but one lorde...Ein Herr...

13 tyll we everychone (in the vntie of fayth...) growe vppe vnto a parfayte man...bis dass wir alle hinan kommen zu einerlei glauben...und ein vollkommener Mann werden...

A continuous passage will place the substantial independence of Tindale in a still clearer light<sup>1</sup>.

There is, however, one other authority who had greater influence upon Tindale than the Vulgate or Luther. The Greek text of the New Testament published by Erasmus, which Tindale necessarily used, was accompanied by an original Latin version in which Erasmus faithfully rendered the text he had printed. This translation is very frequently followed by Tindale. Thus in the phrases already quoted from Eph. iv.<sup>1</sup> three at least seem to be due to Erasmus, 27 backbiter, calumniatori (Erasm.); 29 filthy communication, sermo spurcus (Erasm.); id. when need is, quoties opus est (Erasm.). But on the other hand, any chapter will shew important differences between Erasmus and Tindale, not always indeed in Tindale's favour, but sufficient at least to prove that he exercised a free judgment both in the general character and in the details of his version. A collation of Col. ii. offers the following considerable variations:

A careful examination of the quarto fragment furnishes a most complete and unequivocal proof of Tindale's independence as a translator. We shall see afterwards<sup>2</sup> that he availed himself fully of Luther's notes for his own glosses, but he deals with the text as one who passed a scholar's judgment upon every fragment of the work, unbiassed by any predecessor. As nearly as I can calculate he differs from Luther in about two hundred places in the chapters contained in the fragment, Matt. i.—xxii. 12. Some examples will shew the extent and character of the differences:

TINDALE (1525).

LUTHER (Dec. 1522).

- ii. 7 the tyme of the starre      wenn der stern erschnyen were that appered [unlike Erasmus]

berg Latin Bible [printed in Luther's Sämtliche Schriften, ed. Walch, vol. xiv.] is quite different [in superstitione et humilitate, et non parcendo corpori, nec honorem ei habendo, quantum carni satis est]. In a number of passages taken almost at random where Tindale differs considerably from Luther I have noted that he agrees with Erasmus in Lu. xi. 36, 40; xix. 43. John ii. 9; x. 12. Acts iii. 16. 2 Cor. xi. 8. Gal. v. 18. Eph. v. 16; and differs from Erasmus in Luke xix. 42. John xi. 2. Acts iii. 20. Rom. ix. 11, 28. Gal. v. 5. Col. iii. 9. Other differences exist between the texts of 1525, 1534 in [Col. ii.] vv. 10, 13, 14, 16, 18, 20. In five places the latter text approaches Luther more nearly than the earlier: in one the converse holds.

On the other hand there are passages (perhaps ten in all) where Luther's judgment has evidently swayed Tindale. Of these the most remarkable are: a collation of the Grenville quarto fragment. The conclusion which Mr Anderson draws from the spelling as specimens of the whole work. And in his later labours Tindale continued to follow to the end the sure path on which he had deliberately entered. The revised edition of 1534 expressly claims upon the title-page to be 'diligently corrected and compared with the original 'Greek.' In the address 'to the Reader,' Tindale explains his work more in detail. 'Here thou hast (moost to the priority of the quarto (I. 70) is hasty and unsatisfactory. The spelling in both editions is very inaccurate. In the Sermon on the Mount I have noted among other variations the following which are more or less characteristic. The differences in text are very slight, and in no one case (except in the misprint vi. 24) does the quarto edition give a reading which has been preserved in the edition of 1534. So far therefore the quarto text seems to have been cursorily revised before it was reprinted at Worms. But a complete collation of the text is desirable.

It does not seem necessary to bring forward any further evidence of the originality of Tindale's first labours on the New Testament<sup>1</sup>. The samples given are fair

A comparison of the texts of the first and second editions fully bears out the description which Tindale here gives of his work. To take one example only: of the thirty-one changes which I have noticed in the later version of 1 John, about a third are closer approximations to the Greek: rather more are variations in connecting particles or the like, designed to bring out the argument of the original more clearly; three new readings are adopted; and in one passage it appears that Luther's rendering has been substituted for an awkward paraphrase. Yet it must be remarked that even in this revision the changes are far more frequently at variance with Luther's renderings than in accordance with them<sup>1</sup>.

The importance of the New Testament of 1534, which is altogether Tindale's noblest monument, gives a peculiar interest to the short glosses with which it is furnished. Though these do not throw much light upon the translation itself, yet they give such a lively image of the character of Tindale that a few specimens of them cannot be out of place even in a history of the text<sup>2</sup>. Generally they are pregnant with pithy comments on the passage with which they deal, designed to guide the reader to its spirit, and Bengel himself is not more terse or pointed. Such for example are the following<sup>3</sup>:

'Whē ought is sayde or done, that shuld moue to
'pryde: he dassheth thē in the tethe with his deathe &
'passion.

'A couenaunt to them that loue the worde of God to
'wynne other with worde ād dede: and another to them
'that loue it not, that it shalbe their destruccion.

'Adams disobedyēce dampned vs all yer we oureselues
'wrought euell. And Christes obedience saueth us all, yer
'we oure selues worke anye good. [Luther.]

'God choseth of his awne goodnes and mercye: calleth
'thorow y<sup>e</sup> gospell: iustifieth thorow faith and glorifieth 'thorow good workes.

'If a mā haue the gyfte, chastite is good, the more

<sup>2</sup> It is difficult to say why these marginal glosses and those on the Pentateuch were not included in the collected edition of Tindale's works. Nothing that he has written is more characteristic.

ceal what appear to me to be errors in Tindale's teaching. The passages quoted fairly reflect his whole style. Those who take account of the circumstances under which he had to work will not pass a severe judgment on unguarded or one-sided statements.

 ‘worde, with which the churche of Christ shalbe thus ‘miserablye played vnto the ende of the worlde, as is ‘paynted in these fygures.’

In other places Tindale calls attention emphatically to the substance of a text, often by a single word, and again by a brief note, as:

‘God is not knowē as a father, but thorow christ.

‘God dwelleth not in temples or churches made with ‘hādes.

‘Prayer & fastynge go to gether.

‘Search the scriptures for by thē may ye trye all ‘doctrine.

‘To haue pleasure in another mannes synne is greater wyckednes then to synne thy selfe.

‘Eternall lyfe is the seruinge of Christ.

‘He is strōge that cā beare another mannes weakenes.’

Sometimes, though rarely, the gloss is simply explanatory:

‘This John is the same Marcke, that wryte the gospel of Marcke.

These syluerlinges which we now and then call pence
 ‘the Iues call sicles, ād are worth a .x.pēce sterlynge.

‘Th[at] is thou shalt kyndle him & make him to loue.

‘Bysshopes and elders is all one & an officer chosen to ‘gouerne the congregacion in doctryne ād liuinge.’

In a very few cases the gloss takes a polemical character, but still without bitterness:

‘Go not frō house to house as freers do.

‘To speake with tonges or with the spirite, is to ‘speake that other vnderstonde not, as prestes saye their ‘seruyce.

 Luther.]

In one passage only I have noticed a mystical interpretation which is foreign to the general complexion of Tindale's notes<sup>1</sup>:

'Nyght: when the true knowledge of Christ, how he 'onlie iustifieth, is lost: then can nomā worke a good 'worke in the sight of god, how gloriouse soeuer his 'workes apere.'

In his Preface to the edition of 1534, Tindale had expressed his readiness to revise his work and adopt any changes in it which might be shewn to be improvements. The edition of 1535 [or G. H. 1535, 1534] is a proof of his sincerity<sup>2</sup>. The text of this exhibits a true revision and differs from that of 1534, though considerably less than the text of 1534 from that of 1525<sup>3</sup>. Sometimes

<sup>2</sup> Is it this edition to which Joye refers in his Apology (p. 4)? Tindale agreed, as he writes, 'that we shulde 'with one accorde in his next testament then in printing in the stede 'of this vncharitable pistle [added 'to the edition of 1534]...salute the 'reders with one comon salutacion 'to testifye our concorde.' The Apology is dated Feb. 27, 1535. It may be added that some of Joye's criticisms in his Apology on Tindale's renderings are of interest. Thus he objects to his translation in Mark xii. 26, where he plays 'boo pepe withe the 'tencis as he englissheth resuscitantur [the word given by Erasmus 'for the resurgant of the Vulgate] 'shal ryse agen, and not are reviued 'or resuscited...' (p. 13) ... 'or they ar 'all redy alyue (he saith not that 'they shalbe alyue or shall ryse agayne 'as [Tindale] in hys diligent last correction turneth the present tence 'into the future: and the verbe passiue 'into a neuter to stabliss his errour 'thus corrupting the text' (p. 15). Again he objects to the rendering in

Rom. i. 4 synce the tyme that Iesus Christ oure Lorde rose agayne from deeth, where he says that Tindale has mistaken 'what Ex eo [the rendering 'of Erasmus again] there sygnifyeth' (p. 94). In 1 Cor. xiv. 14 he maintains that spiritus 'signifyeth...the 'breathe, and voice of our tongue...' and not spirit (p. 95). Throughout he appeals only to the Latin. [In 1904 the British Museum acquired a copy of Joye's New Testament, hitherto unknown, the colophon of which is dated 9 January, 1535. It is described by Mr A. W. Pollard in The Library for Jan. 1905.]

<sup>3</sup> In 1 John I have noted sixteen variations from the text of 1534 as against thirty-two in that of 1534 from the original text. From the great inaccuracy of the edition 'finished' 1535 it is often difficult to decide what are printers' errors and what intentional changes. The changes in the Gospels and Acts are (if I may trust a very limited collation) fewer than those in the Epistles. The variations in 1 John are given at length in App. III.

In the different Epistles the number of variations is considerable. In the Epistle to the Ephesians. negthe changes are made to secure a closer accordance with the Greek<sup>1</sup>: sometimes to gain a more vigorous or a more idiomatic rendering<sup>2</sup>: sometimes to preserve a just uniformity: sometimes to introduce a new interpretation<sup>3</sup>. The very minuteness of the changes is a singular testimony to the diligence with which Tindale still laboured at his appointed work<sup>4</sup>. Nothing seemed trifling to him, we may believe, if only he could better seize or convey to others the meaning of one fragment of Scripture<sup>5</sup>.

Tindale's first Testament was without notes: so too was his last. The short Prologues to the four Evangelists are printed separately before each Gospel. The contents of the tables for the Gospels and the Acts are prefixed in detail before each chapter. The marginal references of the edition of 1534 are generally preserved. But with these exceptions the simple text of the New Testament is given without any addition except the list of books on the reverse of the [second] title-page, and the Epistles from the Old Testament at the end<sup>6</sup>. Thus Tindale lecting undoubted misprints, I have noted only the following: i. 1 Jesu (Jesus); 20 the dead (deeth); ii. 1 you haeth he quickened (hath qu. you); iii. 11 purposed to (p. in); iv. 11 and some teachers (om.); iv. 16 of himselfe (it silfe); vi. 20 messenger (a m.). Compare p. 178, n. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Mark xvi. 11 though they herde —yet they beleued it not (for when they herde—they beleued it not). Rom. xii. 13 be readi to harboure (for diligently to harboure). 2 Cor. vi. 18 be my sonnes (for be vnto me sonnes).

<sup>4</sup> One change is of considerable interest in connexion with the early associations of Tindale. In the edition of 1534 (and so in that of 1536)

the Epistle for St Catharine's day is that given in the Hereford Missal with which Tindale would be familiar in Gloucestershire. In the edition of 1535 the Epistle is given correctly from the Sarum Missal. [See p. 157, note 1.]

ended as he had begun His last Testament was a final appeal to the King and to the English people. If the text could gain currency it was enough, as he had repeatedly declared<sup>1</sup>.

Tindale, as we have seen, both in his first translation and in his two subsequent revisions of the New Testament, dealt directly and principally with the Greek text. If he used the Vulgate or Erasmus or Luther it was with the judgment of a scholar His complete independence in this respect is the more remarkable from the profound influence which Luther exerted upon his writings generally. The extent to which Tindale silently incorporated free or even verbal translations of passages from Luther's works in his own has escaped the notice of his editors. To define it accurately would be a work of very great labour, but the result, as exhibiting the points of contact and divergence in the opinions of the two great reformers, would be a most instructive passage in the doctrinal history of the time Tindale's 'Prologue' to his quarto Testament, his first known writing, almost at the beginning introduces a large fragment from Luther's Preface to the New Testament. There is indeed a ring in the opening words which might have led any one familiar with Luther's style to suspect their real source 'Euāgeliō (that we call 'the gospel) is a greke worde, & signyfyth good, mery, 'glad and ioyfull tydinge, that maketh a mannes hert glad, 'and maketh hym synge, daunce and leepe for ioye. As 'when Davyd had kylled Golyath the geaūt, cam glad 'tydinge vnto the iewes, that their fearfull and cruell enemy 'was slayne, and they delyvered oute of all daunger; for 'gladnes were of, they songe, daunsed, and wer ioyfull<sup>2</sup>.'

Prologue is printed does not appear to me to range with that used in the body of the book, though extremely like it. Moreover, and this is most worthy of notice, the orthography of the two preliminary pieces presents none of the marked peculiarities by which the translation itself is generally characterized. Even 'called' and 'Holy' are spelt according to common usage. [See p 50, note.]

The famous Prologue to the Romans (1526) is, as is well known, for the most part a paraphrase or a translation of Luther's Preface. Like the Preface to the New Testament this writing of Luther's also had been translated into Latin (1523), and Tindale's version seems at one time to follow the German and at another time the Latin text. Some phrases, as every Christian man must 'exercise himself therein [the Epistle to the Romans] as 'with the daily bread of the soul', and 'God judgeth after 'the ground of the heart.....therefore his law requireth the 'ground of the heart and love from the bottom thereof, and 'is not content with the outward work only, but rebuketh 'those works most of all which spring not of love from 'the ground and low bottom of the heart...'' shew clearly that Tindale could not have been unacquainted with the German; and on the other hand the general complexion of the Prologue is more like the Latin translation than the singet, saget und frolich ist, Gleich als do David den grossen Goliath vberwand, kam eyn gut geschrey, vnd trostlich new zeytüg vnter das Iudisch volck, das yhrer grewlicher feynd erschlagen, und sie erloset, zu freud vnd frid gestellet weren, daun sie singen vñ sprungen vnd frolich waren. The Latin translation of the passage in the Wittenberg Bible [see p. 137, note 1] may be added: Est enim Euangelium Græca vox significans bonum seu lætum nuncium, et tale quidem quod summa omnium gratulatione accipitur atque prædicatur, Vnde uoluptas et læticia in hominum animis excitatur. Nam quemadmodum cum David magnum illum Gygantem Goliath uicerat, lætum nuncium ad populum Iudaicum perferebatur, crudelissimo ipsorum hoste occiso, a quo cum essent liberati nullo non genere læticiæ atque gaudij perfundebantur, Sic et Euangelium siue Nouum Testamentum &c. The passages italicised mark apparently special coincidences with Tindale's rendering.

The translation of Luther extends from 'the Old Testament is a book—'shall never more die.' (pp. 8—10, ed. Parker Soc.).

The glosses exhibit the same powerful influence of Luther. Of the ninety-one glosses (as I count them) which appear in the quarto fragment forty-eight are taken in whole or in part from Luther's notes, and the remaining forty-three are original.

German original, and many parts are unequivocally derived from it. Thus the clauses 'thou understandest not...how 'that it [the law] cannot be fulfilled and satisfied but with an unfeigned love and affection, much less can it be fulfilled with outward deeds and works only'...; and again, 'if the Law were fleshly and but man's doctrine, it might be fulfilled...with outward deeds<sup>2</sup>'; and, once more, 'Such a new heart and lusty courage unto the law-ward canst thou never come by of thine own strength and enforcement, but by the operation and working of the Spirit<sup>3</sup>'; have nothing which directly corresponds with them in the German. Similar instances might be multiplied indefinitely, but the conclusion even from these seems to be inevitable that Tindale used the Latin by preference while he was able also to avail himself of the German.

The coincidences between Tindale's Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount and that of Luther, though fewer, are even more worthy of notice. Luther's Expository Sermons were delivered in 1530, and printed in 1532, but they were not translated into Latin till 1533. On the other hand Tindale's Exposition was printed in 1532. He must then have used the German edition of Luther, or perhaps even notes taken by some friend or by himself. The coincidences which are comparatively rare are still verbal and at the same time tacit. Two examples will be sufficient to indicate their character.

But it is in the shorter Prologues to the several books of the New Testament first published in 1534 that the character of the dependence of Tindale on Luther is best seen. Luther has no special Prologues to the Gospels; but Tindale at the close of his Prologue to St Matthew, which is an extensive essay, reproduces in a modified form Luther's famous judgment on the relative worth of the apostolic books in his Preface to the New Testament:

'...Paul's Epistles with the Gospel of John and his first Epistle, and the first Epistle of St Peter, are most pure Gospel and most plainly and richly describe the glory of the grace of Christ'.<sup>1</sup> Tindale on the other hand has no Preface to the Acts or to the Apocalypse, while Luther has to both. With these exceptions all Tindale's Prologues correspond generally in character and form with Luther's, and every one besides that to 1 Corinthians is framed out of or with reference to them. And further, as these short Prologues were not included in the Wittenberg Bible, nor, as far as it appears, separately translated, it follows that Tindale must have become thoroughly familiar with German during his long residence at Marburg, if he was not so before.

As the Prologues are interesting on every account it will be worth while to draw out a little more in detail the coincidences and differences thus generally described. The Prologues to 2 Corinthians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, 1, 2 Thessalonians, 1, 2 Timothy, Titus, Philemon, 1, 2 Peter, 1, 2, 3 John, are almost entirely taken from Luther, but in nearly all cases in a compressed form. That to the Galatians incorporates a large piece of Luther's, but is fuller. Those to St James and St Jude are independent in treatment and conclusion, but distinctly traceable to Luther's. That to the Hebrews is a sustained argument against Luther.

The changes are in all cases worthy of notice. One of the omissions at least is strikingly significant. In the Preface to Philemon Luther has a startling allegorical application of the circumstances to the history of the

Darumb ist Sanct Jacob Epistel eyn rechte stroern Epistel gegen sie, den sie doch keyn Euägelisch art an yhr hat. The wisdom with which Tindale avoids the bold negativism of Luther is most worthy of notice.

Redemption. Even as Christ has dealt for us with GOD, 'so St Paul deals for Onesimus with Philemon. For 'Christ emptied Himself of His right and overcame the 'Father with love and meekness, so that He must lay 'aside His wrath and right, and receive us to favour, 'for Christ's sake, who thus earnestly intercedes for us 'and takes us to Him so tenderly. For we are all His 'Onesimuses if we only believe it.' Of this characteristic passage there is no trace in Tindale. In other places Tindale omits the temporal applications with which Luther delighted to animate his teaching<sup>1</sup> and tempers the peremptoriness of his exposition by a fuller reference to the text itself. Two examples will be sufficient to make his general method clear.

*gar hart widder den ytzigen

Tindale's independence is however best seen in his treatment of the disputed books which Luther placed in a second rank. His Prologue to the Hebrews is a careful examination of the arguments which Luther urged against its apostolic authority, and while he leaves its authorship uncertain and will not 'think it to be an article of any 'man's faith,' yet he decides 'that this epistle ought no 'more to be refused for a holy godly and catholic than 'the other authentic scriptures.' He even uses Luther's image but to a different end:

Ob er (the author) wol nicht den grund legt des glawbens, wie er selbs zeuget...so bawet er doch feyn drauff, golt, sylber, edelsteyne Derhalben vns nicht hyndern sol, ob villeicht etwas holtz stro, oder hew, mit unter gemenget werde, sondern solche feyne lere mit allen ehren auffnemen, On das man sie den Apostolischen Episteln nicht aller dinge gleychen mag.

now therfore.. though this epistle...laye not the grounde of the fayth of Christ, yet it buyldeth conynglye theron pure golde, syluer, & precieuse stones...

And seinge the epistle agreeth to all the rest of the scripture, yf it be indifferētlye looked on, how shuld it not be of auctoryte and taken for holye scrypture?

The Epistles of St James and St Jude are dealt with in the same manner and with the same result. Of the former, Tindale writes: 'Though this Epistle were refused 'in the old time and denied of many to be the Epistle 'of a very Apostle, and though also it lay not the founda- 'tion of the faith of Christ...yet because it setteth up 'no man's doctrine...and hath also nothing that is not 'agreeable to the rest of the Scriptures, if it be looked 'indifferently on, methinketh it ought of right to be 'taken for Holy Scripture'.<sup>1</sup> Of the latter: 'As for the 'Epistle of Judas though men have and yet do doubt of 'the author, and though it seem also to be drawn out 'of the second epistle of S. Peter, and thereto allegeth 'Scripture that is nowhere found; yet seeing the matter 'is so godly and agreeing to other places of Holy Scrip- 'ture, I see not but that it ought to have the authority of 'Holy Scripture'.<sup>2</sup> [Doctr. Treat., Park. Soc. pp. 525, 531.]

The standard which Tindale sets up may be a precarious one, but yet it differs widely from the bold subjectivity of Luther, which practically leaves no basis for the Canon but the judgment of the individual reader.

No one who has followed thus far Tindale's mode of dealing with the New Testament can doubt that in the Old Testament he would look first to the Hebrew text, 'which,' he writes, 'is most of need to be known';<sup>3</sup> and a crucial test at once offers itself. An Appendix to his New Testament of 1534 contains, as we have seen [p. 47],

'The Epistles taken out of the Old Testament...after the 'use of Salisbury.' Among these are passages from books which he had not published at that time, even if he had translated them, and from others which he certainly never translated. In the service-books they were of course given in Latin, and it would be most obvious, therefore, to turn them from the Vulgate text. If however in this case Tindale took the Hebrew as his basis, and not the Latin, and still less Luther, we may be sure that he followed the like course in his continuous translations. And so it is: though he keeps the explanatory words which in some cases introduce or round off the lesson, yet the lesson itself is rendered from the original Hebrew. Two examples will be sufficient to make it plain that it is so. In a very simple passage, 1 Kings xvii. 17 ff., the following variations occur where Tindale strives to keep close to the Hebrew against the Vulgate:

18 my synne	iniquitates meæ.
19 he...	Elias... an hie chamber...	cenaculum
21 he measured the child	expandit se atque mensus est super puerum...

A single verse from Isaiah offers, as might be expected, a more conclusive proof of the independence of Tindale:

My ryghteousnes is nye, and	Prope est justus meus, egres-
my salvacyon shall go oute,	sus est salvator meus, et brachia
and myne armes shall iudge	mea populos judicabunt: me nacions, and ylondes shall loke	insulæ exspectabunt, et bra-
for me & shall tarye after myne	chium meum sustinebunt.
arme.

The variations from Luther are nearly as numerous, and still there are indications that Tindale was acquainted with Luther's translation as he was with the Vulgate.

One continuous passage may be added as a better sample of Tindale's work, taken from his published Pentateuch. The relation in which it stands to the Vulgate and Luther is, as will be seen, the same as before<sup>1</sup>:

In his version of the New Testament we have seen that Tindale willingly faced the labour of minute correction. The texts of 1525, 1534, and 1535 are specifically distinct, and each later edition offers a careful revision of that which preceded it. Though the evidence is less extensive in the case of the Old Testament, it is evident that he expended no less pains upon this. The texts of 'the Epistles from the Old Testament' appended to the New Testaments of 1534 and 1535 differ in small details from the published Pentateuch of 1531 (1530)<sup>1</sup>; and, what is still more interesting, from one another<sup>1</sup>. Thus in these, as in the New Testaments themselves, there is a double revision; and there is nothing to shew that Tindale bestowed less care upon the lessons from the Apocrypha than on those from the Canonical books<sup>2</sup>.

This patience of laborious emendation completes the picture of the great translator. In the conception and style of his renderings he had nothing to modify or amend. Throughout all his revisions he preserved intact the characteristics of his first work. Before he began he had prepared himself for a task of which he could apprehend the full difficulty. He had rightly measured the momentous issues of a vernacular version of the Holy Scriptures, and determined once for all the principles on which it must be made. His later efforts were directed simply to the nearer attainment of his ideal. To gain this end he availed himself of the best help which lay within his reach, but he used it as a master and not as

[In Notes and Queries for the 10th and 24th of February, 1883, Mr Fry printed a collation of the 1531 and 1534 editions of Tindale's Genesis. See also Dr Mombert's edition of Tindale's Pentateuch (1885), Prolegomena, pp. ciii.—cviii.]

The last Epistle (for St Catharine's day) is wrongly given in 1534, Ecclus. li. 9—12. The right lesson is substituted in 1535, Ecclus. li. 1—8. [See p. 145, n. 4.]

Two most surprising misprints of 1534 are also corrected in 1535: Gen. xxxvii. 20, a sand pitte (some pitte, 1535). Is. liii. 2, came vp as a sparow (as a spraye, 1535).

<sup>2</sup> For example, in Ecclus. xxiv. 17—22 the following corrections occur: 18, of greatnes and of holye hope (1534): of knowledge of holly hoepe (1535): 20, than honye or honye combe (1534): then honye, and myne inheritaunce passeth honye or honye combe (1535).

a disciple. In this work alone he felt that substantial independence was essential to success. In exposition or exhortation he might borrow freely the language or the thought which seemed suited to his purpose, but in rendering the sacred text he remained throughout faithful to the instincts of a scholar. From first to last his style and his interpretation are his own, and in the originality of Tindale is included in a large measure the originality of our English Version. For not only did Tindale contribute to it directly the substantial basis of half of the Old Testament (in all probability) and of the whole of the New, but he established a standard of Biblical translation which others followed. It is even of less moment that by far the greater part of his translation remains intact in our present Bibles<sup>1</sup>, than that his spirit animates the whole. He toiled faithfully himself, and where he failed he left to those who should come after the secret of success. The achievement was not for one but for many; but he fixed the type according to which the later labourers worked. His influence decided that our Bible should be popular and not literary, speaking in a simple dialect, and that so by its simplicity it should be endowed with permanence. He felt by a happy instinct the potential affinity between Hebrew and English idioms, and enriched our language and thought for ever with the characteristics of the Semitic mind<sup>2</sup>.

Thirteen Epistles of St Paul
(Romans—Philemon)

1, 2 Peter
1, 2, 3 John Hebrews
James
Jude
Revelation.

This order exactly coincides with that in Luther's translation, and the books are numbered i—xxiii. up to 3 John, while the remaining four are not numbered. So they stand also in Luther.

In connexion with this edition Mr F. Fry has made a very remarkable discovery. He has found substantially the same text in an edition dated 1534 with the letters G. H. in the border of the second title, no one of the four copies which he has examined having the first title. Out of 113 readings marked as characteristic of the edition 'finished 1535' he found 102 in this edition of 1534, while it agreed only in the 11 remaining places with Marten Emperour's edition of 1534. [In Fry's Bibliographical Description of the Editions of the New Testament, Tindale's Version, 1878, p. 2, the number of passages in which the edition of 1535 agrees with that printed by Marten Emperour, 1534, and the G. H. edition of 1535, 4, is said to be 164, while it agrees with the edition of 1534 alone in only three passages. These figures do not correspond to Fry's original estimate.]

It seems to follow certainly from this fact that the revision was printed in the spring of 1535, i.e. before March 25. Thus 'finished 1535' would be reconcileable with the existence of an edition dated 1534 in the other reckoning.

At present it must remain doubtful whether the edition of 1534 (G. H.) or that 'finished 1535' was the original. Happily this uncertainty does not affect the text which they present in common, which is the true standard of Tindale's completed work.

I learn from Mr Demaus that there is a mutilated copy of the edition of 1535 in the British Museum, and that he has ascertained with tolerable certainty that it was printed by Vorstermann of Antwerp: Demaus, Life of Tindale, p. 500.

§ 2. COVERDALE.

The contrast between Tindale and Coverdale has been already pointed out; and in spite of all that has been written to the contrary it is impossible to grant to Coverdale's Bible a place among independent translations. In fact Coverdale distinctly disavows the claim for himself.

I have, he writes to the king in his dedication, 'with a cleare conscience purely & faythfully translated this out of fyue sundry interpreters, hauyng onely the manyfest trueth of the scripture before myne eyes...' 'To helpe me herin,' he informs the Christian reader, 'I have had sondrye translacions, not onely in latyn, but also of the Douche [German] interpreters: whom (because of theyr synguler gyftes & speciall diligence in the Bible) I haue ben the more glad to folowe for the most parte, accordyng as I was requyred?' 'Lowly & faythfully,' he adds, 'haue I folowed myne interpreters, & that vnder correcyon<sup>3</sup>.' And so it was that the title-page of his Bible which was printed with it described it as 'faithfully and truly translated out of Douche and Latyn<sup>4</sup>.'

Nothing, it might be supposed, could be more explicit or intelligible or consistent with Coverdale's aims: but his critics have been importunately eager to exalt his scholarship at the cost of his honesty. If the title-page, said one who had not seen it, runs so, 'it contains a very great misrepresentation<sup>5</sup>.' To another the notice appears to be a piece of advertising tact. Expediency, a third supposes, led Coverdale to underrate his labours. And yet it may be readily shewn that the words are simply and literally true. Coverdale certainly had some knowledge

<sup>5</sup> Whittaker, Historical Inquiry, p. 59 n. In support of this bold statement Dr Whittaker quotes four passages from Coverdale (pp. 52 ff.), and compares them with all the versions which, as he affirms, he could have consulted. As Coverdale differs from these, he is pronounced to have translated 'from the Hebrew and from nothing else' (p. 50). Unhappily Dr Whittaker was not acquainted with the German-Swiss Version—a sufficiently famous book—from which they are all rendered: Ex. xxxiv. 30; Num. x. 31; Is. lvii. 5; Dan. iii. 25. Since this was written I find that Dr Ginsburg has already pointed out the falsity of Dr Whittaker's argument: Kitto's Cyclopædia, s.v. Coverdale. To him therefore belongs the credit of having first clearly proved the dependence of Coverdale on the Zurich Bible. It was indeed from the reference to Dr Ginsburg in the Dictionary of the Bible that I was led to examine in detail the Zurich Versions. Henceforth it may be hoped we shall hear no more of Dr Whittaker's mistake.

of Hebrew<sup>1</sup> by which he was guided at times in selecting his rendering; but in the main his version is based on the Swiss-German version of Zwingli and Leo Juda (Zurich, 1524-9, 1530, 1531, 1532, 1534), and on the Latin of Pagninus. He made use also of Luther and the Vulgate. His fifth version may have been the Worms German Bible of 1529, or the Latin Bible of Rudelius with marginal renderings from the Hebrew (1527, 1529)<sup>2</sup>, or (as is most likely), for he does not specify that his 'five interpreters' are all Latin or German, the published English translations of Tindale to which he elsewhere refers.

The examination of a few chapters will place the primary dependence of Coverdale in the Old Testament on the Zurich Bible beyond all doubt. Thus in the four short chapters of Malachi there are about five-and-twenty places where he follows the German against the Hebrew and Vulgate. Three sample instances may be quoted. In i. 4 it is said, 'they shall be called The border of wickedness,' in the Hebrew and Latin as in the Authorised Version, but in Coverdale 'A cursed londe,' a literal translation of the German. Again in i. 13, 'it is weariness to me,' a single word, but in Coverdale and the German we read 'It is but laboure and trauayle.' Once again in iii. 8, 'Will 'a man rob God?' is represented in Coverdale and the German by 'Shulde a man use falsede and disceate with 'God?' And such coincidences occur not in one book only but throughout the Old Testament<sup>3</sup>. But at the same time on rare occasions Coverdale prefers to follow some one of the other translations which he consulted. Thus in two passages, ii. 3, 14, 15, of which the latter is a very remarkable one, he adopts the renderings of Pagninus and Luther in preference to those of the Zurich Bible.

It is not therefore surprising that notwithstanding his acknowledged partiality for the German translators, Cover-

dale availed himself freely of the work of Tindale, as far as it was published, the Pentateuch, Jonah<sup>1</sup>, and the New Testament<sup>2</sup>. His Pentateuch may, indeed, unless a partial examination has misled me, be fairly described as the Zurich translation rendered into English by the help of Tindale, with constant reference to Luther, Pagninus, and the Vulgate. In the remaining books of the Old Testament the influence of the Zurich Bible greatly preponderates<sup>3</sup>. In the Apocrypha, Coverdale moves with comparative freedom, and his translation has far more originality.

The New Testament is a very favourable specimen of his labour. Its basis is Tindale's first edition, but this he very carefully revised by the help of the second edition<sup>4</sup> and yet more by the German. Thus on a rough calculation of changes, not simply of form or rhythm, more than three-fourths of the emendations introduced by Coverdale into Tindale's version of 1 John are derived from Luther, but the whole number of changes, and they are nearly all verbal, is, if I have counted rightly, only a hundred and twenty-three.

Thus the claims of Coverdale, as far as his Bible is concerned, must be reduced to the modest limits which

'pared† a wylde vyne which sprange
'vp ouer Ionas, that he might haue
'shadowe about‡ his heade, to delyuer
'him out of his payne. And Ionas
'was exceedinge glad of the wylde
'vyne.'

* om. Tindale. † add as it were. Tindale. ‡ ouer, Tindale.

One singular phrase in ii. 3 common to Coverdale and Tindale may be noted, 'all thy wawes and rowles of 'water went ouer me.'

<sup>4</sup> In 1 John he appears to follow the first and second editions where they differ in about an equal number of places. But it is evident that the first edition was his foundation, for he follows it in one clear mistake of reading iii. 11, that ye should love, and in one error of grammar, iv. 20, hateth, both of which were corrected by Tindale on revision, and would not have been reintroduced.

The changes are such as would easily have been made while the book was passing through the press.

he fixed himself. But though he is not original yet he was endowed with an instinct of discrimination which is scarcely less precious than originality, and a delicacy of ear which is no mean qualification for a popular translator. It would be an interesting work to note the subtle changes of order and turns of expression which we owe to him<sup>1</sup>. In the epistle from which most of our illustrations have been taken 'the pride of life' and 'the world passeth away,' are immeasurable improvements on Tindale's 'the pride of goods,' and 'the world vanisheth away'; and the rendering 'shutteth up his heart' (due to Luther) is as much more vigorous than Tindale's 'shutteth up his compassion' as it is more touching than the strange combination of the Authorised Version 'shutteth up his bowels of compassion.'

Coverdale has a tendency to diffuseness, which in some places (as Eccus. xlv.) leads him to long paraphrases of his text. The fault is one from which the Zurich Bible also suffers, and he may have fallen into it from imitating the style of his model too closely even when he abandoned its words. But his phrasing is nearly always rich and melodious. The general character of his version as compared with that of Tindale may be very fairly represented by that of the Prayer Book Version of the Psalms as compared with the Authorised Version in the Bible. In both cases Coverdale's work is smooth rather than literal. He resolves relatives and participles and inserts conjunctions, if in that way he may make the rendering easier<sup>2</sup>.

Just as Coverdale valued highly the existence of many translations<sup>3</sup>, so he claimed for himself the right to extend this characteristic of diversity to his own work. He thought that he could thus attain comprehensiveness by variety, and secure in some measure for one translation the advantages which he found in many. 'Where as the 'most famous interpreters of all geue sondrye iudgmentes

There may be some weakness in this, and Coverdale suffered for it; yet it may not be lightly condemned. In crises of great trial it is harder to sympathize with many views than with one. There is a singularity which is the element of progress; but there is a catholicity which is the condition of permanence, and this Coverdale felt. 'As y<sup>e</sup> holy goost then is one, workynge in y<sup>e</sup> and me

It was well that Tindale should for a time break the spell which was attached to words like charity, confess, church, grace, priest, and recall men to their literal meaning in love, [ac]knowledge, congregation, favour, elder; but it was no less well that the old words, and with them the historical teaching of many centuries, should not be wholly lost from our Bibles. That they were not lost was due to the labours of Coverdale; but his influence was felt not so much directly through his own first Bible, as through Matthew's Bible, in which a large portion of it was incorporated, and still more through the Great Bible, in which he revised more than once his own work and that of Tindale with which it had been joined<sup>1</sup>.

(1) [The Pentateuch.]

(2) The seconde parte of the olde Testament.

Josua—1 Esdr. 2 Esdr. Hester.

Job—Salomons Balettes (with no special heading).

(3) All the Prophetes in English.

Esay, Jeremy, Baruch, Ezechiel—Malachy.

(4) 'Apocripha. The bokes and treatises which amonge the fathers of 'olde are not rekened to be of like 'authorite with the other bokes of 'the byble, nether are they foude in 'the Canon of the Hebrue.

'3 Esdras, 4 Esdras...1 Mach. 2 Mach.

'Vnto these also belongeth Baruc, 'whom we haue set amōge the prophetes next vnto Jeremy, because he 'was his scribe, and in his tyme.'

(5) The new testament.

iv. Gospels. Acts.

The Epistles of S. Paul.

Romans—Philemon.

1. 2 S. Peter.

1. 2. 3 S. John.

Hebrews.

S. James.

S. Jude.

The Revelation of S. John.

In Nycolson's new edition of the Bible (1537) the books are arranged differently:

(1) The first part: Genesis—Ruth.

(2) The second part: 1 Samuel—Esther.

(3) The third part: Job—Salomons balletes.

(4) The Prophets: Esaias, Jeremias, Threni, Ezechiel—Malachias.

(5) The Apocrypha: 3 Esdr. 4 Esdr. ...Baruch...1 Mac. 2 Mac.

The books in the N.T. follow the same order as before.

The edition of 1550 follows the order of that of 1537.

The edition of 1537 is described as being 'newly overseen and corrected'; but as far as I have been able to compare the texts the differences which are not accidental are few and unimportant. In 1 John I have noted only the following:—

i. 1 of the lyfe (of life 1535).

7 is lyght (is in lighte).

ii. 14 the wycked (that wicked).

28 be ashamed (be made ashamed).

iii. 18 My children (My little children).

iv. 3 the sprete (that sprete).

v. 10 because...of his sonne. Omitted in 1535.

11 the recorde (that recorde).

§ 3. MATTHEW.

The Bible which bears Matthew's name consists of three distinct elements. The Pentateuch and the New Testament are reprinted from Tindale's published translations with very slight variations<sup>1</sup>. The books of the Old Testament from Ezra to Malachi, and the Apocrypha, are reprinted in like manner from Coverdale. The remaining books of the Old Testament from Joshua to 2 Chronicles are a new translation. Nothing in the book itself indicates the sources from which it was derived, and the direct external evidence is vague and inconclusive. If it proves <sup>1</sup> I have not collated any considerable passages of the Pentateuch with Matthew, though it would be interesting to compare a complete book in the Pentateuchs of 1531 and 1534 with Matthew (1537). [In Mombert's edition of Tindale's Pentateuch (1885) a collation of Tindale and Matthew is given, Proleg. pp. cxi—cxix.] The text of Matthew's New Testament is examined below, p. 178.

In Mr Ofor's MS. Collections for a history of the English Bible (Brit. Mus. 26,670-3) there is a collation of Tindale's Pentateuchs of 1530 (1531) and 1534 with one another, and also with Matthew and Coverdale. Matthew appears to follow the earlier edition almost without exception: Coverdale generally the later. I have not however verified the collations.

anything it proves too much. Thus Strype, following Bale, relates that Rogers 'translated the Bible [in this 'edition] into English from Genesis to the end of the 'Revelations, making use of the Hebrew, Greek, Latin, 'German and English (that is Tyndale's) copies.' He also it is said 'added prefaces and notes out of Luther, and 'dedicated the whole book to king Henry, under the name 'of Thomas Matthews (sic) by an epistle prefixed, minding 'to conceal his own name<sup>1</sup>. No description could well be more inaccurate. More than a third of the book is certainly Coverdale's. The Preface to the Apocrypha is translated from that in the French Bible of Olivetan<sup>2</sup>. The Prologue to the Romans is Tindale's. The dedication follows Olivetan, and in the translation of proper names. See, for instance, Ezra iii. 4, 12, iv. 12, x. 17, Neh. ii. 20; Job vi. 4, 6, 13, 14, xix. 22, xx. 16; Prov. ix. 2, &c. Passages omitted in Coverdale are added in Matthew from Olivetan. See Neh. vii. 6; Esther ii. 9. The changes in the later books are fewer, but the Prayer of Manasseh, as well as the Preface to the Apocrypha, are translated literally from Olivetan. Many of the marginal notes in Matthew are also from Olivetan, particularly those which refer to the Versions. See Judg. ix. 5, 6, 14, 16, xv. 8; 1 Sam. xii. 6, xxvi. 25; 2 Sam. xxi. 16, xxiii. 32, 33; 1 K. x. 11, &c.; Job i. 21, 22. In Job I have traced eighteen of the marginal notes to Ecolampadius, In Jobum Exegemata, 1532.

By an Act of Parliament, 34 Henry VIII., 1542-4, anyone who possessed a Bible or New Testament, with marginal notes or preambles, was obliged, under a penalty of 40s., to 'cutte or blotte the same,' so as to make them illegible. I have an imperfect copy of Matthew's Bible which has been so treated, and there is another in the Library of the Bible Society. W. A. W.]

is signed by Thomas Matthew. It is evident*that no dependence can be placed on the details of such evidence. The narrative of Foxe is not more satisfactory: 'In the translation of this Bible the greatest doer was indeed W. Tyndale, who with the help of Miles Coverdale had translated all the books thereof except only the Apocrypha, and certain notes in the margin which were added after. But because the said W. Tyndale in the meantime was apprehended before this Bible was fully perfected, it was thought good...to father it by a strange name of Thomas Matthewe. John Rogers at the same time being corrector to the print, who had then translated the residue of the Apocrypha and added also certain notes thereto in the margin: and thereof came it to be called "Thomas Matthewe's Bible<sup>1</sup>." It is unnecessary to dwell upon the errors in this account. Foxe has evidently wrought out into a story the simple fact that Tindale, Coverdale, and Rogers were all engaged upon the work.

But although these original statements are thus loose, and I have been unable to find any more trustworthy, it can scarcely be doubted that Rogers did superintend Matthew's Bible, and used in it the materials which Tindale had prepared, and that these constitute the new translation (Joshua—2 Chronicles). If he had purposed to complete the translation himself it is not likely that he would have paused at the end of 2 Chronicles. On the other hand, Tindale's engagements might have allowed him to complete thus much more of his work in the interval between the publication of his Pentateuch and his death. The version of Jonah was an exceptional work, and furnishes no ground for supposing that he did not intend to proceed regularly through the Old Testament. Perhaps, too, it was from the exceptional character of this translation, which was as it were a text for the Prologue, that Rogers was led to adopt Coverdale's version of Jonah as well as of the other Prophets, though he could not have been

We are not however left wholly to conjecture in determining the authorship of the original portion of Matthew's Bible. The 'Epistles of the Old Testament' added to Tindale's New Testament of 1534, contain several passages from the Historical Books as well as from the Pentateuch; and generally it may be said that these fragments bear about the same relation to the translation in Matthew as those from the Pentateuch do to Tindale's published text. There are from time to time considerable variations between them, but still it is evident that the renderings are not independent. It is of course possible that Rogers may have consulted the fragments in the execution of his work, but, as will appear directly, this supposition is practically inadmissible, because the corresponding sections from the Prophets and the Apocrypha are completely neglected.

[<sup>1</sup> In the year 1883 Dr Westcott received a communication from Mr Justice Bradley, a Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, calling his attention to a passage in Hall's Chronicle (1548), which has a direct bearing on Tindale's share in the translation of the Historical Books of the Old Testament, as incorporated by Rogers in Matthew's Bible. The passage occurs on fol. 227a under 'The xxvij yere of Kyng Henry the .viij.' and is as follows:

'This yere in the moneth of September Wylliam Tyndale otherwyse called Hichyns was by the crueltie of the clergie of Louayn condempned and burned in a toune besyde Bruxelles in Braband called Vylford. This man translated the New testament into Englishe and fyrst put it in Prynt, and likewise he translated the .v. bookes of Moses, Iosua, Iudicum, Ruth, the bookes of the Kynges and the bookes of Paralipomenon, Nehemias or the fyrst of

'Esdras, the Prophet Ionas, & nomore of y<sup>e</sup> holy scripture.'

Now bearing in mind that Richard Grafton not only printed and published Hall's Chronicle, but continued it from 1532 after Hall's death, and that in conjunction with Edward Whitchurch he had published Matthew's Bible in 1537, when he must have been in communication with Rogers; and moreover that Rogers returned to England in 1548, the year in which the Chronicle appeared, it is not unreasonable to conclude, with Mr Justice Bradley, that the paragraph in question contained information derived from Rogers, even if it were not written by Rogers himself. Tindale's completed work on the Historical Books probably ended with 2 Chronicles, the rest being left unfinished, so that Rogers preferred to give Coverdale's Version of Ezra and Nehemiah with slight changes instead of attempting to supplement an imperfect work.]

Two examples will illustrate the extent of the coincidence and variations between the versions, and serve to shew how much dependence can be placed on this indication of the identity of their authorship.

The second example is similar in character:

These versions may again be compared with Coverdale's: 'And he layed him downe & slepte vnder the 'Iuniper tre. And beholde, y<sup>e</sup> angell touched him, &

'sayde vnto him, Stonde vp, and eate. And he looked 'aboute him, & beholde at his heade there was a bred 'baken on the coles, & a cruse with water. And y<sup>e</sup> angell of the Lorde came agayne the 'seconde tyme, & touched him, & sayde: Stonde vp, and 'eate, for thou hast a greate waye to go<sup>1</sup>.'

It must be remembered in considering these fragments that they are taken from simple narratives, where there is comparatively little scope for striking variations<sup>2</sup>. But even so, as far as they go, they fall in with the traditional belief that the new translation in Matthew's Bible is really Tindale's and not a new work of Rogers<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> In a few verses of Genesis (xxxvii. 6-9) seven variations occur. See p. 157, n. The passage Ex. xxiv. 12-18, on the other hand, shews only one variation. Ex. xx. 12-24 and Num. xx. 2-13 are very similar in both, but with variations.

<sup>3</sup> I am unable to speak of the style of the two groups of books—the Pentateuch and Joshua—2 Chron. A careful comparison of the versions in this respect could not fail to be fruitful; but to be of any value it must be minute. I can find nothing but vague generalities in the authors to whom I have referred. [Dr Moulton, in his History of the English Bible (pp. 128-9), pointed out three characteristic renderings which are found in Tindale's Pentateuch and also in the Historical Books (Joshua—2 Chron.) in Matthew's Bible. The Hebrew ālōn (A.V. plain) is represented by 'okegrove' in Tindale's Genesis, and by 'oak' in Judges and 1 Samuel in Matthew. Toph is uniformly rendered 'timbrel' by Tindale in the Pentateuch, and in the Historical Books in Matthew, while Coverdale, except in Ex. xv. 20, has 'tabret.' The expression 'shut up and left' (A.V.), which occurs in Deut. xxxii. 36, is rendered by Tindale (after Luther) 'presoned' and 'forsaken,' and in the four passages in which it is found in the Historical Books in Matthew (1 Kings xiv. 10, xxi. 21; 2 Kings ix. 8, xiv. 26) it is represented by 'in preson or forsaken,' 'presoned or forsaken,' 'the presoned or that is forsaken,' and 'the presoned and the forsaken.' Dr Eadie (The English Bible, I. 321) calls attention to the uniform rendering 'ephod' in Tindale's Pentateuch and in the Historical Books in Matthew, while Coverdale has 'overbody cote.' Tindale and Matthew have 'Libanōn,' while Coverdale has 'Libanus.' 'Tribulation' is found as the rendering of the same word in Tindale, Deut. iv. 30, and in Matthew, 2 Sam. xxii. 7 and 2 Chron. xv. 4, while in Coverdale it is different. Coverdale always has 'the ark of the covenant,' while Tindale in the Pentateuch has 'ark of the testament' and once 'ark of the appointment,' and both these renderings are found in the Historical Books in Matthew.

In addition to these instances of correspondence between the renderings of Tindale in the Pentateuch

But while Rogers thus incorporated into his Bible, as we believe, all the complete translations of Tindale, except Jonah, he took no account of the fragments which Tindale had appended to the revised edition of his New Testament as 'Epistles taken out of the Old Testament after the use 'of Salisburie.' This collection includes (if I have counted rightly) twenty-three lessons from the Prophets and six from the Apocrypha, besides others from the Pentateuch and Hagiographa. In those which I have examined Matthew's Bible coincides verbally with Coverdale, and Tindale's version is wholly different from both. Two examples will be sufficient to shew the extent of the variation, and they are the more worthy of consideration as the relation of Rogers to the two earlier translations has been commonly misrepresented. There is nothing which proves that he allowed himself more liberty in dealing with Coverdale's work than in dealing with Tindale's.

and those in the Historical Books in Matthew's Bible, I have noted the expressions 'pluck up your hearts' in Deut. xxxi. 6; Josh. x. 25, and 1 Chr. xxii. 13; 'franchised city,' Num. xxxv. 25, 'franchised cities,' Josh. xxi. 13 (Coverdale always has 'fre'); 'observe 'dismal days,' Lev. xix. 26; 2 Kings xxi. 6; 2 Chron. xxxiii. 6 (A.V. 'observe times'). For what in the A.V. is Ashdod-Pisgah (Deut. iii. 17; Josh. xii. 3, xiii. 20), and once 'springs of Pisgah' (Deut. iv. 49),

Tindale has in Deuteronomy 'sprynges 'off Pisgah,' or 'springes of Pisga,' and Rogers in Joshua 'sprynges (or springs) of Phasgah,' this curious transliteration, which he also substituted in Deuteronomy, being taken from Olivetan. The Hebrew word, which when used in a friendly sense is rendered 'to meet,' is in Tindale (Gen. xiv. 17, xviii. 2, xix. 1, xlv. 29, &c.) and in Matthew (Josh. ix. 11 Judg. iv. 18, 22, &c.) 'against.']

It is then evident that Rogers did not undertake an elaborate revision of the texts of Tindale and Coverdale which he adopted. Still there are some changes in the version which are unquestionably intentional (e.g. Prov. i. 1<sup>2</sup>, Is. i. 1), and numerous various readings in the margin (e.g. Ps. xlvii. f.)<sup>3</sup>. The numbering of the Psalms is accommodated to the Hebrew division. The interpolated verses in Ps. xiv., which Coverdale had specially marked as 'wanting in the Hebrew,' are omitted. The 'Hallelujah' in the last Psalms is nobly rendered 'Praise the Ever-lasting'. The characters in 'Salomons Ballet' (Canticles) are distinguished by rubricated headings<sup>5</sup>. But the distinguishing feature of the edition is the marginal commentary on which the chief labour of the editor was bestowed. This however belongs rather to the history of doctrine than to the history of the English Bible<sup>6</sup>. And when this is set aside the textual peculiarities of the edition are unimportant. In itself Matthew's Bible has had no original and independent influence upon the authorised text. Its great work was to present the earlier texts in a combined form which might furnish the common basis of later revisions. But in this respect it is most unjust to call it Tindale's Bible. If regard be had to the books taken from each it is in its primitive form hardly less Coverdale's than Tindale's, though (if we except the Psalms) much more of Tindale's than of Coverdale's work has been preserved unchanged in common use.

There is still one point in the history of Matthew's Bible which is of considerable interest. The text of the New Testament differs considerably in details from Tindale's revised edition of 1534. This fact has lent colour to the belief that Rogers revised the text of the Bible throughout, for it has been assumed that Tindale did not again revise his own work. The assumption and conclusion were equally wrong. It has been seen already that the remarkable New Testament of 1535 was again, as the title-page affirms, 'diligently corrected and compared with the Greek,' and this last revision, and not that of 1534, was adopted by Rogers. The differences which exist between Matthew and this last Testament of Tindale are very slight and can be explained in most cases by the supposition of accidental errors: their agreement on the other hand extends to the adoption of some certain mistakes. A complete collation remains yet to be made, but on an examination of a large number of passages I have found scarcely any characteristic readings of the edition of 1535 which do not also appear in Matthew's Bible of 1537<sup>1</sup>. From internal evidence it seems likely that both these texts were taken from the same corrected copy of Tindale. Such a hypothesis would account equally for the discrepancies between them, since the New Testament at least is most carelessly printed, and for their agreement in errors which can only have been derived from the original copy<sup>1</sup>.

§ 4. THE GREAT BIBLE.

Matthew's Bible was essentially a transitional work. It had hardly passed into circulation when a careful revision of it was undertaken. This, as all evidence external and internal goes to prove, was entrusted to Coverdale. It was thoroughly characteristic of the man that he should be ready to devote himself to the perfecting of another's

Prof. Moulton informs me that there are eight differences between the editions of Matthew of 1537 and 1551 in these passages. [If the edition of 1551 is that printed by Daye, the number of differences is eleven: Mark xvi. 11 (two), 19; Rom. i. 5, vii. 8, 30, xii. 13, xvi. 5; Gal. ii. 1, 2, iii. 4. The edition printed by Hyll in the same year differs from Matthew in five passages: Mark xvi. 11 (two); Rom. xii. 13, xvi. 19; Gal. iii. 4.]

Compare also App. III. and note, p. 158.

labours; and he has left us an account of his method of procedure. 'We folowe,' he writes, 'not only a standynge 'text of the Hebrue, with the interpretacion of the 'Caldee, and the Greke<sup>1</sup>, but we set, also, in a pryvate 'table, the dyversite of redinges of all textes...<sup>2</sup>' And again when the work had made some progress he enters into greater details: 'As touchynge the maner and order, 'that we kepe in the same worke, pleaseth your good 'Lordship to be advertised, that the merke  in the text, 'signifieth, that upon the same (in the later ende of the 'booke) there is some notable annotacion; which we have 'written without any pryvate opinion, onely after the best 'interpreters of the Hebrues, for the more clearnesse of 'the texte. It is obvious that a man who thus describes his plan is not the mere press-corrector of another's revision, but himself the editor of the entire work<sup>4</sup>. If there were any

tion of this view that Fulke speaks of the Bible of 1562 'most used in the 'Church Service in King Edward's 'time' as 'Doctor Coverdale's translation' (Defence of Eng. Trans. p. 68). This was an edition of the Great Bible. This passage also explains the anecdote which he gives of the criticism and revision of 'Coverdale's Bible.' See p. 192, n. 2.

doubt remaining it would be removed by the character of the revision. About the time when Coverdale's own Version was passing through the press a new Latin Version of the Old Testament with the Hebrew text and a commentary chiefly from Hebrew sources was published by Sebastian Münster (1534-5). It does not appear that at that time Coverdale was able to avail himself of it. The Zurich Version was sufficient. But a very slight comparison of Münster with the Zurich Bible could not fail to bring out the superior clearness of the former. Even a poor Hebrew scholar must feel its general faithfulness. Thus Coverdale found an obvious method to follow. He revised the text of Matthew, which was laid down as the basis, by the help of Münster. The result was the Great Bible.

One difficult passage given in full will be sufficient to shew the certainty of this explanation of the origin of the text of the Great Bible, and for the interest of the comparison the Zurich original of Coverdale's translation is added<sup>1</sup>.

In all the passages which have been hitherto quoted the text of the three typical editions of the Great Bible—Crumwell's, April 1539, Cranmer's, April 1540, Tunstall's and Heath's, Nov. 1540—is with one exception (or at most two) exactly identical<sup>2</sup>. But this is not the case in all the parts of the Bible.

In the Prophets the revision was less complete in the first (Crumwell's) edition, and Coverdale appears to have gone again carefully through this part of his work at probably a printer's blunder.

In all the references to the Great Bibles I have availed myself of Mr F. Fry's exhaustive identification of every sheet of the different editions in his Description of the Great Bible of 1539 &c. London, 1865.

least before the publication of the second (Cranmer's) edition. It is possible that the unsettled prospect of affairs in Paris may have induced him to hurry the printing of the book; or, which is not less likely, the greater difficulty of the Prophets may have hindered him from dealing satisfactorily with them on the first collation. However this may be, the text of Cranmer's Bible presents a second revision of the original Coverdale (Matthew), and that again made by a more thorough use of Münster. A single chapter of Isaiah will shew the relation of the two revisions to one another, to the original rendering (Coverdale) and to Münster. The German (Zurich) quotations determine the source of the first translation<sup>1</sup>.

COVERDALE (MATTHEW).

1 But who geueth credence vnto oure preachyng? Or to whō is the arme of the Lorde knowne? 2 He shall growe before the Lorde like as a braūch, & as a rote in a drye ground, he shall haue nether bewtye nor faouere. Whē we loke vpon him, there shalbe no fayrnesse: we shall haue no lust vnto him. 3 He shalbe the most symple, and despyed of all, which yet hath good experience of sorowes and infirmities. We shall reken him so symple & so vile, that we shall hyde oure faces frō him. 4 How be it (of a treuth) he only taketh awaye our infirmite, and beareth oure payne: Yet we shall iudge him, as though he were plaged & cast downe of God: 5 where as he (not-withstādyng) shall be wounded for oure offences, & smytten for oure wickednes. For the payne of oure punishment shalbe layde vpon him, and with his strypes shall we be healed. 6 As for vs, we go all astraye (lyke shepe), euery one turneth hys awne waye. But thorowe him, the Lorde

<sup>1</sup> I have added also for comparison the renderings of Pagninus, that it may be clear that the translation is from Münster and not independently from the Hebrew.

The italics mark the words which were altered. The second English rendering is that of the Great Bible of 1539.

pardoneth all oure synnes. 7 He shalbe payned & troubled, & shal not open his mouth. He shalbe led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall he be as styll as a lābe before the shearer, and not open his mouth. 8 He shall be had awaye, his cause not herde, & without eny iudgmēt: Whose generacyon yet no mā maye nombre, when he shalbe cut of from the grounde of the lyuyng: Whych punishmēt shall go vpon him, for the transgression of my people. 9 His graue shalbe geuen him with the condempned, & his crucyfyenge with the theues, Where as he dyd neuer violence ner vnryght, nether hath there bene any disceatfulnesse in his mouth. 10 Yet hath it pleased y<sup>e</sup> Lorde to smyte him with infirmyte, that when he had made hys soule an offering for synne, he might se lōgelastyng sede. And thys deuyce of the Lorde shall prospere in his hande. 11 With trauayle & laboure of his soule, shall he obtayne great ryches. My ryghtuous seruaunt shall wyth his wysdome iustifye & delyuer the multitude, for he shall beare awaye their synnes. 12 Therfore wyll I geue him the multitude for his parte, & he shall deuyde the strōge spoyle because he shal geue ouer his soule to death, & shalbe rekened amonge y<sup>e</sup> trāsgressours, which neuertheles shall take awaye the synnes of the multitude, and make intercessyon for the mysdoers.

From these collations the general character of the versions of the Old Testament in the first two editions of the Great Bible will be sufficiently clear, though a fuller examination would probably bring out some details of the method of revision into more distinct prominence. The variations from the first edition (Crumwell's 1539) in the second (Cranmer's, April 1540) are far greater in the Hagiographa and the Prophets—the part of Matthew's Bible which was Coverdale's own work—than those in the earlier books: and the variations of the text of 1539 from that of Matthew (1537) are more important throughout than the changes introduced afterwards<sup>1</sup>. In other words the edition of April 1540 exhibits a text formed on the same principles as that of the edition of 1539, but after a fuller and more thorough revision<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> By some incredible inadvertence Mr Anderson describes Crumwell's Bible as having Matthew's text. The edition of April 1539 and the London reprint of April 1540 (Petyt and Redman) are both carefully revised texts, as has been shewn already. The latter presents some variations from Crumwell's Bible, but they appear to be due rather to the printers than to any special revision: e.g. Ps. li. 14: O God, O God of my health: sing thy righteousness. 15 shew forth.

<sup>2</sup> This revision, as well as the partial one to be mentioned afterwards, was due to Coverdale, as appears from his Sermon quoted by Fulke (p. 98). 'M. Coverdale defended his translation, confessing that he did now 'himself espy some faults, which, if he 'might review it once over again, as 'he had done twice before, he doubted 'not but to amend.' This statement

After April 1540 the text of the Great Bible does not appear to have been systematically revised throughout, but still it is a remarkable and unobserved fact that in parts the edition of Nov. 1540 goes back from the text of April 1540 to that of 1539, so that the edition of April 1540 exhibits the greatest approximation to Münster. It is impossible to tell without a wide collation on what principle this reaction was carried out: a few examples will exhibit its reality<sup>1</sup>.

can only apply to Crumwell's and Cranmer's Bibles. The changes in the one revision of Coverdale's original Bible are not of sufficient importance to be thus described. Another passage of Fulke is itself decisive: 'the Bible 'of 1562,' he writes, 'I take to be 'that which was of Dr Coverdale's 'translation, most used in the church 'service in king Edward's time' (p. 68). This edition is a reprint of the Great Bible.

The rendering in Is. lviii. 5, 'ye 'take your pleasure under the oaks, 'under all green trees, and ye offer

'children in the valleys and dens of 'stone,' quoted in the Hist. Account, p. 103, to shew the existence of an independent revision in Tunstall's and Heath's edition of 1541, is found in Cranmer's (April 1540), and is of course based on Münster: 'calefacitis 'vos apud quercus sub omni ligno 'frondoso et immolatis pueros...'

<sup>1</sup> At first I was inclined to think that mixed sheets had been used for printer's copy in the later editions, but this hypothesis will not cover all the facts of the case.

The revision of the New Testament was, like Coverdale's original revision of Tindale, more independent; and based upon a careful use of the Vulgate and of Erasmus'

<sup>1</sup> In the first three chapters of Isaiah I have noted twenty other passages in which the same groups respectively agree in supporting different readings; and only five in which the November editions differ from 1539. In other parts of the book, as has been seen, the edition of Nov. 1540 follows closely that of April 1540. See pp. 187 ff.

Latin Version. An analysis of the variations in the First Epistle of St John may furnish a type of its general character. As nearly as I can reckon there are seventy-one differences between Tindale's text (1534) and that of the Great Bible<sup>1</sup>: of these forty-three come directly from Coverdale's earlier revision (and in a great measure indirectly from the Latin): seventeen from the Vulgate where Coverdale before had not followed it: the remaining eleven variations are from other sources. Some of the new readings from the Vulgate are important, as for example the additions in i. 4, 'that ye may rejoice and that your joy may be full.' ii. 23, 'he that knowledgeth the Son hath the Father also.' iii. 1, 'that we should be called and be indeed the sons of God.' v. 9, 'this is the witness of God that is greater.' All these additions (like v. 7) are marked distinctly as Latin readings<sup>2</sup>: of the renderings adopted from Coverdale one is very important and holds its place in our present version. 'Hereby we know that he abideth in us, even by the Spirit which he hath given us,' for which Tindale reads: 'thereby we know that there abideth in us of the Spirit which he gave us.' One strange blunder also is corrected; 'that old commandment which ye heard' (as it was in the earlier texts) is replaced by the true reading: 'that old commandment which ye have had' (ii. 7). No one of the new renderings is of any moment (ii. 8, 18, 19, 20, 22, &c.).

As an illustration of the influence of Erasmus we may recur to the collation of his differences from Tindale in Col. ii.<sup>3</sup> In the following readings, nearly half of those noted, the text of the Great Bible is altered from that of Tindale (Matthew) to conformity with Erasmus (1519):

<sup>2</sup> One false rendering introduced into this version from the Latin has most unfortunately retained its place in our present Bible; 'there shall be 'one fold and one shepherd' (John x. 16), for 'one flock' of the earlier translators. The old Latin rightly distinguished between grex and ovile, but the distinction was lost in the later texts. [Corrected in the Revised Version.]

'1 for I would: how great care: 2 when they are knit together: 6 walk...so that ye be rooted and built in him: '11 forasmuch as ye have put off: 13 through sin and through...16 or of the new moon: 17 which are shadows: '23 by superstition and humbleness and by hurting of the body...' Some of these renderings might have been derived independently from the Greek or from the Vulgate; others could not, as we must believe, have occurred to two original interpreters; and when they are taken as a whole there can be no doubt as to their immediate source<sup>1</sup>.

The New Testament in the Great Bible of 1539 was subject to a revision before the edition of 1540 no less than the Old, and the revision was conducted on similar principles. What Münster was for the Old Testament Erasmus was in a great measure for the New. How powerful his influence was in the original recension has been just seen, and the review shews additional traces of the sway which his judgment exercised over Coverdale. One or two examples may be quoted<sup>2</sup>:

APRIL 1539.

Rom. v. 15, which was geuen
by one man...

— i. 25, which is blessed for euer.

APRIL, NOV. 1540.

whych was of one man (quæ fuit unius hominis, Er.) which is to be prayesd for euer (qui est laudandus in secula, Er.)

<sup>1</sup> One or two other passages may be added in which the Great Bible certainly follows Erasmus:

Luke xix. 42...even in this thy day, thou wouldest take heed (Eras. 1519, curares).

1 Pet. i. 14...lusts by which ye were led when as yet ye were ignorant of Christ (Eras. quibus dum adhuc ignoraretis Christum agebamini).

Col. i. 10...that in all things ye may please (Eras. ut per omnia placetis).

Col. iii. 9...seeing that ye have put off (Eras. posteaquam exuistis). The Latin New Testament of Erasmus was printed with the English of Matthew in 1538. The English Testament of 1540, said to be from the Latin of Erasmus, I have not seen. [A copy is in the Lambeth Library, and another in the Bodleian. There is no date, but the Calendar begins with 1540.]

APRIL 1539.

Phil. i. 23, is moch better.

(neque egerunt scelerum pœnitentiam, Er. 1527).the Lorde God of y<sup>e</sup> holy Prophetes (Dominus Deus sanctorum prophetarum Er.)

No change perhaps is more remarkable than that in the difficult and famous passage of St James<sup>1</sup>:

APRIL 1539.

James i. 13. For God cannot tempte vnto euyll, because he tempteth no man.

APRIL, NOV. 1540.

for as God can not be tempted with euill, so nether he hymselfe tempt the [tempteth] eny man. (Nam Deus ut malis tentari non potest, ita nec ipse quemquam tentat. Er.)

In other cases the revision follows the Vulgate (with Erasmus) where the original text had deserted it, as for example:

APRIL 1539.

Rom. iv. 25, for to iustifie vs.

Gal. i. 10, Do I now speake vnto men or vnto God?

Other go I about to please...

Eph. ii. 12, and had no hope,
& were with out...

APRIL, NOV. 1540.

for oure iustificacyon.

Do I now perswade men, or God? Other do I seke to please...hauynge no hope, and beynge

Sometimes the turn given to the rendering appears to be original, as

Rom. i. 6, that are called of...

Phil. i. 10, as hurte no mannes conscience.

the electe of...

as offende no m̃a.

But next to Erasmus the Complutensian edition contributed most largely to the changes in the revision. Thus

In one respect the Great Bible has an important and lasting interest for us: the Psalter which is incorporated in the Prayer Book is taken from it. In the first Prayer Book of Edward VI reference is made 'to the Great English Bible' for the numbers of the Psalms as appointed to be read in the daily services which were necessarily taken from it, and from that time the Psalter used in churches has continued unchanged. No attempt seems to have been made to substitute the Psalter of the Bishops' Bible for that of the Great Bible; and when, upon the last revision of the Prayer Book (1662), it was directed that the other lessons from Scripture should be taken from the <sup>1</sup> This list includes only a few very obvious differences, and makes no pretensions to completeness even in the chapters quoted. It is remarkable that all the readings are marked as Latin readings [being printed in smaller type], though 1, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8 are in the Greek text.

Mr Offor has collected all the 'interpolations' (Latin readings) found in the Great Bibles in his MS. collections for the history of the Bible (Brit. Mus. Add. 26,670, pp. 209 ff.).

For a fuller comparison of renderings of the New Testament in the different editions of the Great Bible, see Note A at the end of the Section.

royal Version, a special exception was made in favour of the Psalter. The choirs and congregations had grown familiar with it, and it was felt to be 'smoother and more 'easy to sing'¹.

A very slight comparison of the Psalter in the Prayer Book with that in the Authorised Version of the Bible will shew from what this acknowledged smoothness springs. Apart from the partial correction of errors in translation, the later version will be seen to be distinguished from the earlier by a scrupulous fidelity to the Hebrew text. Coverdale, like Luther and the Zurich translators on whose model his style was formed, allowed himself considerable freedom in dealing with the shape of the original sentences. At one time a word is repeated to bring out the balance of two clauses: at another time the number is changed: at another time a fuller phrase is supplied for the simple copula, now a word is resolved, and again a particle or an adverb or a pronoun or even an epithet is introduced for the sake of definiteness: there is in every part an endeavour to transfuse the spirit as well as the letter into the English rendering. The execution of the version undoubtedly falls far below the conception of it: the Authorised Version is almost in every case more correct: but still in idea and tone Coverdale's is as a whole superior, and furnishes a noble type for any future revision.

One or two examples will illustrate these general remarks. The materials for extending the comparison are accessible to all, and nothing throws more light on the actual history of our Bible².

in the Prayer Book or the revision 'made by the Bishop of St Asaph 'and Dr Kidder' (id. 432).

² I have not ascertained from what text of the Great Bible the Psalter was taken. It contains the latest changes which I have noticed. See pp. 183 ff. For a collation of passages from the Prayer-Book Psalter with the editions of the Great Bible,

AUTHORISED VERSION.

The heavens declare the glory of God: and the firmament sheweth his handywork.

Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge.

There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard.

Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world.

In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun; which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.

His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it:
and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul:

the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple:

The statutes of the Lord are

The following variations taken from ten Psalms collated in Crumwell (C), the Great Bible of April 1540 (Cr<sub>1</sub>), of November 1541 (TH<sub>2</sub>) and the Sealed Prayer Book of 1662, will illustrate the relation of the Prayer Book Psalter to the earlier copies. The Prayer Book never preserves the 'italics' of the Bibles. For the collations on which this table is founded I am again indebted to the kindness of Mr F. Fry.

 — 8 O Lord, let not his mischievous imagination prosper (so Psalter 1552), lest they be too proud Cr<sub>1</sub> TH<sub>2</sub> (so Psalter 1552) : O Lord let him not have his purpose, lest they be too proud C.
 — 11 evil shall hunt the wicked person to overthrow him Cr<sub>1</sub> TH<sub>2</sub> : a malicious and wicked person shall be hunted away and destroyed C.

In no one of these examples is a rendering taken from Crumwell's Bible (C). In one case (Ps. i. 1) an archaism seems to have been removed in 1662. In ten places (xxviii. 1 (bis), 9; xlv. 2, 4, 8; lvii. 9; lxx. 5; xci. 1, 6) changes have been introduced (apparently) without any authority. In xvi. 11 a rendering has been adopted from the Genevan Bible [or from ver. 7]. In the American Prayer Book Psalter two other changes made (apparently) from the Genevan version have fallen under my notice: v. 6 lies for leasing; lvi. 8 wanderings (for flittings).

One of the most remarkable variations in the Psalter was due to a blunder and has been (unauthoritatively) corrected. In Ps. lxxviii. 4 the Great Bible of April 1540 reads in his name Ja and with a  in the margin to indicate a proposed note upon the sacred name. But in Nov. 1541 the curious misreading in his name yea and is found, and this corruption passed into the later editions of the Great Bible. (e.g. 1553), from which the first Psalters were taken. The error was continued throughout the 17th century even in the Prayer-Book of 1662. I do not know when the true reading was first restored<sup>1</sup>. The earliest Prayer Book in which I have noticed it is one printed at Oxford in 1703, while the error is found in an Oxford edition of 1698. In London editions the blunder was continued several years later (1709).

§ 5. TAVERNER.

The work of Taverner is very different from that of any of the revisers noticed before, and stamped with a very distinct individuality. Its character might be anticipated from the description of the man himself which has been already quoted<sup>2</sup>. Throughout he appears to aim at vigorous and idiomatic language, and his New Testament at least deserves more attention than has yet been paid to it. Probably he undertook this part of the work, for which his scholarship fitted him, first, and only afterwards extended his labours to the Old Testament, for which he had no special aptitude. As far as I have observed he used no help but the Vulgate in the Old Testament, and this only partially<sup>1</sup>. But scarcely a page perhaps will fail to shew changes which are made for the sake of clearness and force. Thus 'the child of death' becomes 'worthye of deathe' (2 Sam. xii. 5): 'of mine own mind' is altered to 'of myne owne hed' (Num. xvi. 28): 'but and if' is made simply 'but if': 'like as a branch' simply 'like a branch,' and so on. But in a passage like Is. liii. 1—5, where Coverdale is greatly at fault, he introduces no real change in the text before him<sup>2</sup>.

In the New Testament Taverner aims equally at compression and vividness, but he was familiar with the original, and therefore could deal more happily with the translation of Tindale, which still, like Coverdale, he followed very closely. A few verses will shew the method which he followed. Thus in the beginning of St John's Gospel for 'the same' he reads 'this' (i. 2, 7), for to 'bear witness' simply 'witness' (7, 15); for Tindale's 'verity' he writes 'truth' (14); for Tindale's 'confessed and denied not, and said plainly' he repeats the first word as in the Greek 'confessed and denied not and confessed' (20). Sometimes in his anxiety to keep to the Greek text he becomes even obscure or inaccurate, as 'all were made by it' (3), 'to be made the sonnes of God, by leuyng on his name' (12), 'in to his owne' (11), 'he was fyrst er I was' (15). But he introduced substantial improvements into the translation by his regard for the article: 'that was the true lyght (a tr. l. Tind.) which...commynge in to...' (9): 'Arte thou the Prophet?' (21, 25): 'I am a voyce of one cryinge...' (23). Two consecutive verses of the First Epistle of St John furnish good examples of his endeavour to find English equivalents for the terms before him. All the other versions adopt the Latin 'advocate' in 1 John ii. 1, for which Taverner substitutes the Saxon 'spokesman.'

Mus. 26,670-3) there is a collation of Tindale's Pentateuch (1537, 1549) with Taverner (1539, 1551), Vol. II. pp. 153-158.

Tindale, followed by Coverdale, the Great Bible, &c. strives after an adequate rendering of ἱλασμός (1 John ii. 2), in the awkward periphrasis 'he it is that obtaineth 'grace for our sins': Taverner boldly coins a word which if insufficient is yet worthy of notice: 'he is a mercystocke for 'our synnes'.

fourteen chapters of St Matthew, most kindly placed at my disposal by Professor Moulton.

It would be tempting to dwell longer on this version, but it appears to have exercised no influence whatever on the later revisions. It remains simply as a monument of one man's critical power, and in the very sharp personality of its characteristics is alien from the general history of the English Bible<sup>1</sup>.

§ 6. THE GENEVAN BIBLE.

The foundations of the English Bible were laid by exiles in a strange country; and exiles contributed the most important revision which it underwent before the final settlement of the received text. Under the influence of Calvin, Geneva had become the seat of a society of devoted Biblical students, and the results of their labours were made available for the review of the English version by the Marian persecution. The more conservative party among the refugees might have scrupled to use them without reserve, but no such feeling could hold back the seceders from Frankfurt. For the first time the task of emendation was undertaken by men who were ready to press it to the uttermost. They spoke of their position as providential, and in looking back upon the later results of their Bible we can thankfully acknowledge that it was so. They enjoyed, as they say in their preface, many advantages over earlier labourers whose renderings 'required greatly 'to be perused and reformed.' 'Not,' they add, 'that we 'vendicat any thing to our selues aboue the least of our 'brethren, (for God knoweth with what feare and trembling 'we haue bene now [April 1560], for the space of two 'yeres and more day and night occupied herein) but 'being earnestly desired.....and seing the great oportunitie and occasions, which God presented vnto vs in 'this Church, by reason of so many godly and learned 'men; and suche diuersities of translations in diuers 'tongues, we vndertoke this great and wonderful worke,.. 'which now God according to his diuine prouidence and 'mercie hath directed to a moste prosperous end.'

Some important versions indeed had been published in addition to those which have been noticed already as accessible to the first translators. Léo Juda, who had contributed greatly to the German Bible of Zurich, laboured for many years at a new Latin Version of the Old Testament. This was left unfinished at his death (1542), but the work was completed by T Bibliander and C. Pellican,

P. Cholin added a translation of the Apocrypha: R. Gualther revised Erasmus' Latin New Testament; and the whole Bible, thus finished, was printed in 1544. The version is vigorous, aiming rather at an intelligible sense, than at a literal rendering of the words of the original. Castalio (Chateillon) carried this freedom to a far greater length, and in his singularly elegant version (1551) endeavoured to make the Hebrew writers speak in purely classical Latin. In spite of Beza's vehement assaults Castalio exercised some effect on later Protestant versions; but the New Testament of his great adversary (1556) exercised a far more powerful influence than either of these complete Bibles. Beza made some use of the various readings of Greek Manuscripts which had been collected in a convenient form by Stephens in his Greek Testament of 1550 (ed. regia); but as yet, in spite of the great advances which had been made in scholarship, the true principles of Greek criticism were wholly unknown, and the text which served as the basis of translation was as faulty as before.

These Latin versions, especially Beza's New Testament, contributed important help to the English revisers, but it was of still greater moment that they were associated at Geneva with a group of scholars who were already engaged in the work of correcting the French Version of Olivetan. As early as 1545 Calvin cursorily revised this Bible, chiefly, as it is said, in points of style and expression. In 1551 he went over the work again more thoroughly; and again in 1558. The edition of 1551 contained a new version of the Psalter by Louis Budé and of the Apocrypha by Beza. But these successive revisions were confessedly provisional, and it was not till 1588 that the version appeared which, bearing the name of the venerable company of pastors at Geneva, remained for a long time the standard Bible of the French protestants<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> For these details I am indebted to Le Long, as I have been unable to obtain access to the editions of 1545 and 1551. [See Pétavel, La Bible en France, p. 171. A full account of Olivetan's version will be found in a

Thus the English exiles found themselves surrounded by those who were engaged in a task similar to their own<sup>1</sup>. They started indeed with a far better foundation than the French revisers, and their labours shew no impatient desire for change. In the historical books they preserved in the main the old rendering, altering here and there an antiquated word or a long periphrasis<sup>2</sup>. In the Hagiographa, the Prophets, and the poetic books of the Apocrypha, the changes were necessarily far more numerous. An analysis of the new readings in a few representative passages will place the general character of the revision in a clear light<sup>3</sup>.

Rebekah, Joshúa, Zebulún, Abimélech, &c. Mr Aldis Wright called my attention to this significant peculiarity.

Of these thirteen changes one seems to come from the French (7), two are different readings adopted from Pagninus (1, 3), seven are renderings closer to the Hebrew, chiefly from Pagninus (2, 4, 5, 8, 9, 11, 12), and three are simply linguistic changes (6, 10, 13).

In a passage from Job there is on the other hand considerable originality.

Throughout these verses the French rendering is widely different; and of the ten changes introduced into the text of the Great Bible three of considerable importance are apparently original (7, 8, 10). Of the remainder one perhaps comes from the version of Leo Juda (2), four from Pagninus (1, 3, 5, 6), one from Münster (4), and one is linguistic (9).

The revision of the Prophets is similar in kind to that of the historical books though the changes are far more numerous:

P. M. (31)

Of these thirty-one alterations by far the largest part is due to the desire of greater literality: no less than fifteen can be traced to Pagninus (1—6, 9, 10, 12, 13, 16, 21, 23, 27, 31), five to Münster (17, 18, 20, 24, 28), three perhaps to Leo Juda (14, 15, 25), two are original (19, 22), and six changes are linguistic (7, 8, 11, 25, 28, 29).

In the Apocryphal books the influence of the French translation, which was due as we have seen to Beza, is unmistakeable. One example may suffice:

The examples which have been given exhibit very fairly the method of revision which was adopted by the Genevan translators in the Old Testament. In all parts they took the Great Bible as their basis and corrected its text, without ever substituting for it a new translation. Even where the changes are greatest the original foundation can still be traced, and the new work fairly harmonizes with the old. One chief aim of the revisers seems to have been to make the translation as nearly verbal as possible, and consequently in a great number of passages they replace the renderings of the Zurich scholars (Coverdale) or Münster by those of Pagninus. At the same time there is abundant evidence to shew that they were perfectly competent to deal independently with points of Hebrew scholarship; and minute changes in expression shew that they were not indifferent to style.

The history of the Genevan New Testament is simpler than that of the Old. It is little more than the record of the application of Beza's translation<sup>1</sup> and commentary to Tindale's Testament in three successive stages, first in the separate New Testament of 1557 (Gt)<sup>2</sup>, next in the Bible of 1560 (G), and lastly in the New Testament of

L. Tomson in 1576<sup>1</sup> (T). The revisers undoubtedly exercised an independent judgment in following his renderings. They did not adopt all the alterations which he suggested; and at times they introduced original phrases; but by far the greater part of the changes which were made in the text of Tindale were simply due to Beza<sup>2</sup>.

An analysis of the changes in one short Epistle will render this plain. Thus, according to as accurate a calculation as I can make, more than two-thirds of the new renderings in 1 John introduced into the revision of 1560 are derived from Beza, and two-thirds of these then for the first time. The rest are due mainly to the revisers themselves<sup>3</sup>, and of these only two are found in the revision of 1557. Tomson adds barely five or six closer approximations to Beza, of which one is important (v. 4 'hath overcome'); and once he definitely goes against him (iv. 9 'Herein was that love of God made manifest 'amongst us'').

The general conclusion thus indicated will be made still clearer by an examination of two short continuous passages. The differences between the first New Testament and the New Testament in the Bible (1560) will thus appear, and it will be seen that the revision in the latter extended to points of language as well as to points of interpretation<sup>4</sup>:

<sup>1</sup> Tomson's New Testament presents the fullest form of Beza's influence. One peculiarity is characteristic of Tomson alone. In his anxiety to express the emphatic force of the Greek article he constantly renders it by 'that' or 'this,' and in many cases the effect is almost grotesque. One example will suffice: 'He that hath 'that Son hath that life: and he that 'hath not that Son of God hath not that life' (1 John v. 12).

Bible. See for instance Gal. i. 10, 14, 15, 19, 21: ii. 1, 2, 5, 6, 9, 10, 11, &c. The corresponding coincidences of the Genevan Testament with the Great Bible against Tindale are very few: Gal. i. 9, 12: ii. 4.

<sup>3</sup> The most striking are: ii. 18, 19, 20, 29: iv. 5: v. 6.

<sup>4</sup> It is very greatly to be regretted that the New Testament of 1557 and not the New Testament of the Bible has been reprinted in Bagster's Hexapla as the Genevan version. The confusion which has resulted from this error of judgment has led to endless mistakes in discussions on the Authorized Version. The Testament of 1557 has had no independent influence on the A.V. as far as I can see. Compare Mr F. Fry on The English New Testament of the Geneva Version in the Journal of Sacred Literature, July, 1864.

The rendering of Beza is marked B. G gives the following words in italics: Eph. ii. 2 I say, were 1<sup>o</sup>; 15 that is, which standeth, so; 16 his. Thus it will be seen that the Testament (Gt 1557) differs from the Bible (1560) in nine places, half of the whole number (1, 2, 4, 7, 8, 12, 13, 17, 18), and of these variations two are of considerable importance (2, 17). In one case the Bible deserts Beza where the Testament followed him (13), one change is simply linguistic (7), but in the other seven cases the Bible is supported by Beza. Of the remaining nine changes common to the Testament and Bible five are in accordance with Beza (3, 9, 11, 14, 15), one is perhaps independent of him (6), and the remaining three are changes of expression (5, 10, 16). In this passage Tomson agrees with the Bible.

(TINDALE, 1534.) 8 And unto the angell of the con-gregacion of Smyrna wryte: These thynges sayth he that is fyrste, and the laste, which was deed and is alive.

- 9 I knowe thy workes and tribulacion and poverté, but thou art ryche: And I knowe the blaspemy of them whiche call them selves Iewes, and are not: but are the congregaciō of sathan.
- 10 Feare none of thoo thynges which thou shalt soffre. Beholde, the devyll shall caste of you into preson, to tempte you, and ye shall have tribulacion .x. dayes. Be faythfull vnto the deeth and I will geve thee a crown of lyfe.

11 ears: an eare Gt. G. T. (aurem B.) (10)

— congregacions: Churches Gt. G. T. (ecclesiis B.) (11)

In this passage again Tomson's text agrees with that of the Bible<sup>1</sup>. The Testament differs from it twice (3, 8), and in both cases the Bible agrees with Beza. The remaining nine changes are all, as far as the Latin can express them, in accordance with Beza, and one is evidently due to him (5).

It is of more importance to place in a clear light the real origin of the changes in the English Genevan New Testament, because very many of them have passed from that into our own Bible, and it has been forgotten to whom the renderings are due. Thus Archbp Trench quotes five passages to shew<sup>1</sup> 'the very good and careful scholarship 'brought to bear upon this [the Genevan] revision,' in which 'it is the first to seize the exact meaning...which 'all the preceding versions had missed.' They are all derived from Beza. In one case the English translator has adopted his alternative rendering; in the four others he simply takes Beza's translation :

Luke xi. 17 one housse shall (doth Great Bible) fall upon another (Tindale G.B.).

domus super domum cadit (Erasmus).

domus adversus se partita cadit (Beza 1556, 1559).

a house deuided against it self (an house G. T.) falleth (Gt).

Acts xxiii. 27 cam I...and rescued him, and perceaved that he was a Romaine (Tind. G.B.).

superveniens...exemi, cognito quod Romanus esset (Beza 1556, 1559).

I came...& rescued him, perceauing that he was a Romaine (Gt).

Acts xxvii. 9 because also that we (they G.B.) had overlonge fasted (Tind. G.B.).

quod jam etiam jejunium [tempus designat Lucas ex more Judaici populi] præterisset (Beza).

because also y<sup>e</sup> tyme of (om. the time of G. T.) the Fast was now passed (Gt).

James i. 13 God tempteth not (cannot tempt G.B.) unto evil (Tind. G.B.).

Deus tentari malis non potest (Beza).

Mark xiv. 72 [he] began to weep (Tind. G.B.). animus adiiciens flevit (Beza 1556, 1559 not.).
 waying that with himselfe, he wept (Gt.).

The credit of recognizing the right turning remains, but the Genevan translator can have no claim to original sagacity on this evidence.

To place the relation of the Genevan translator to Beza in a still clearer light it will be worth while, though it is an ungracious task, to quote an equal number of cases where under the same influence the Genevan version first goes wrong.

Matt. i. 11 Iosias begate Iacim And Iacim begate Iechonias.

Luke ii. 22 When the tyme of Maries purification...was come.

Luke iii. 36 (Sala) which was the sonne of Arphaxad...

Rev. xi. 1 Then was geven me a rede, lyke vn to a rodde,
and the Angel stode by, saing...

Hebr. x. 38 But if any withdraw him selfe.

Mark xvi. 2 When the sunne was yet rysing.

Of these, which include four arbitrary corrections of the text, the second and fourth and fifth have been incorporated in our present version: the first was abandoned by Beza in his third edition: the sixth is suggested in a note<sup>1</sup> and has modified the received rendering.

A comparison of the two groups of passages will shew at once the strength and the weakness of Beza, and so of the revisions which were moulded after him. In the interpretation of the text he was singularly clear-sighted: in the criticism of the text he was more rash than his contemporaries in proportion as his self-reliance was greater. But though it is a far more grievous matter to corrupt the text than to misinterpret it, the cases in which Beza has corrected the renderings of former translators θανόντες in Rom. vii. 6 (He being dead in whom we were holden, T.).

are incomparably more numerous than those in which he has introduced false readings; and on the whole his version is far superior to those which had been made before, and so consequently the Genevan revisions which follow it<sup>1</sup>.

The notes of the Genevan Version contributed so greatly to its influence that some examples of them may be added which will be sufficient to shew the general character and scope of the commentary.

‘Thogh we prouoke God iustly to angre, yet he wil ‘neuer reiect his.

§ 7. THE BISHOPS' BIBLE.

The correspondence on the subject of the Bishops' Bible which has been already quoted explains the general design of the revisers<sup>2</sup>. It was their object to remove from the Great Bible all errors which seemed to impair the sense, and at the same time to produce a popular and not a literary version. In both respects—in the alteration of the renderings and in the alteration of the but chiefly by additions made in the Bible.

language—they proposed at least in the first instance to confine themselves to necessary changes, for the revision was essentially conservative in its conception. But in the execution of the plan some of the revisers certainly made use of far wider liberty than the original scheme permitted.

The execution of the work is indeed, if a very partial examination may be trusted, extremely unequal; and the Greek scholarship of the revisers is superior to their Hebrew scholarship. How far the separate sections are marked by the special characteristics of the men engaged upon them I cannot say, and the inquiry is not one which would reward the labour which it would cost. Still the revision has received far less attention than it deserves, and in the New Testament it shews considerable vigour and freshness.

The historical books of the Old Testament follow the text of the Great Bible very closely<sup>1</sup>. The Hagiographa, as far as I have examined them, are corrected with considerable freedom. The Prophets are altered very frequently, but in these the new renderings can generally be traced to some other source. The influence of the Genevan revision is perceptible throughout, but it is more obvious in the Prophets than elsewhere. Castalio was certainly consulted and had some influence with the revisers, but with the exception of the Genevan version itself no fresh sources were open to them in addition to those which the Genevan exiles had used<sup>2</sup>.

One or two passages will illustrate what has been said<sup>3</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> [This is not strictly accurate. The changes may not be important, but they are numerous. In Gen. i. out of 31 verses 22 are altered. In Gen. ii. out of 25 verses 17 are altered. In Gen. xiv. out of 24 verses 17 are altered. In Gen. xxii. out of 22 verses 12 are altered. In Gen. xxiv. out of the first 14 verses 8 are altered. In Ruth iii. out of 18 verses 8 are altered. These instances are taken from the narrative portions of the historical books. In the poetical parts, such as Gen. xlix., Ex. xv., Num. xxiii., xxiv., Deut. xxxii., xxxiii., Judg. v., 1 Sam. ii., 2 Sam. i., xxii., xxiii., 1 Chr. xvi., the changes are equally numerous.]

GREAT BIBLE, 1550<sup>1</sup>. 1 But who hath geuen credence vnto the thing we haue heard? Or to whom is the arme of the Lorde knowne?

2 For he dyd grow before the Lord lyke as a braunch and as a rote in a drye groūd. He hath nether bewtye nor fauour. When we shall loke vpon him, there shalbe no fayrnesse: we shal haue no lust vnto him.

3 He is despysed and abhorred of men, he is suche a mā as is full of sorowe and as hath good experience of infirmyties. We haue rekened him so vyle, that we hyd oure faces from him, yee he was dispysed & therfore we regarded him not.

4 Howebeit he only hath taken on him our infirmities & borne our paynes. Yet we dyd iudge him, as though he were plaged & cast downe of God: & punished

5 where as he (not with standinge) was wouDED for our offences, & smyttē for our wickenes. For the chastisemēt of our peace was layde vpon him, and with his stripes are we healed.

6 As for vs, we haue gone all astray (lyke shepe) euery one hath turned his owne waye. But the lorde hath heaped together vpon him the iniquitie of us all.

7 He suffered violence and was euel intreated: and dyd not yet opē his mouth. He shall be led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shal he be as styl as a lambe before the shearer, and not open his mouth.

8 He was had awaye frō prison: his cause not hearde and without any iudgement. Whose generation yet who may numbre? he was cut of from the grounde of the lyuinge: whiche punishment dyd go vpon him for the transgression of my people, which in dede had deserved that punishment.

9 His graue was geuen him with the condempned, and with the ryche man at his death, Where as he did neuer violence: nor vnright, neyther hath there bene any disceatfulnesse in his mouth.

- 10 Yet hath it pleased the Lorde thus, to bruste him with plages, and to smite him with infirmitie, that when he had made his soule an offeringe for sinne, he might see longe lastinge sede. And this deuyce of the Lorde shall prosper in his hande.

Thus of the twenty-one corrections five are due to the Genevan version (7, 12, 18, 20, 21): five more agree with Pagninus (11, 13, 14, 15, 19): three with Leo Juda (1, 2, 8): three with Castalio (3, 10, 16); and one with Münster (17). One change is simply linguistic (9), and three are apparently original (4, 5, 6).

In a passage from the Psalms the reviser shews far greater originality and the influence of the Genevan revision is considerably less<sup>1</sup>:

<sup>1</sup> [The original version of the Psalms in the Bishops' Bible of 1568 was reprinted in the quarto edition of 1569 and in the folio of 1572, where it was accompanied by the Great Bible version printed side by side with it. It only appeared once more, in the Bible of 1585. One peculiarity of this ver-

Of these changes one-fifth appear to be original (1, 5, 13, 20, 25): seven more are linguistic (3, 8, 9, 14, 15, 17, 19): three are coincidences with Pagninus (6, 12, 22): five with Leo Juda (2, 7, 16, 18, 23); four with the Genevan version (4, 10, 21, 24): and one with Münster (11).

There is but little to recommend the original renderings of the Bishops' Bible in the Old Testament. As a general rule they appear to be arbitrary and at variance with the exact sense of the Hebrew text<sup>1</sup>. The revision of the New Testament however will repay careful study.

Among the revisers was Lawrence, 'a man in those times of great fame for his knowledge in the Greek<sup>2</sup>,' of whose labours Strype has preserved a singularly interesting memorial in a series of 'notes of errors in the translation of the N. T.'<sup>3</sup> Some of these are worthy of quotation.

Matt. xxi. 33. 'There was a certain man, an householder, which made a vineyard. ὁστις ἐφύτευσεν ἀμπελῶνα (that is) which planted a vineyard. The word '(made)' is too general...I allow not such generalities in translation when our tongue hath as apt words as the Greek, ib. he putteth (made) for ὥρυξεν (that is) he digged. 'The first error is amended in the Geneva Bible; the second is noted in the margin.'

Matt. xxv. 20. 'I have gained with them five talents more: ἄλλα πέντε τάλαντα ἐκέρδησα ἐπ' αὐτῇ, signifieth over and besides them...'

<sup>1</sup> It is possible that I have been unfortunate in the parts which I have examined; for what I saw did not encourage me to compare very much of the Bishops' text with the other versions.

<sup>2</sup> Strype's Parker, II. 223. [There is no reason to suppose that Lawrence was a reviser. He seems to have criticised certain passages in the translation of the New Testament of 1568, and his notes were at one time in the possession of Strype. It has been conjectured that he was Thomas Lawrence, who was headmaster of Shrewsbury School, but this is impossible. Strype says the writer of the notes was an eminent Greek scholar who had taught Greek to Lady Burghley, once Mildred Cooke. Now Mildred Cooke was married in 1545, when Thomas Lawrence, who took his degree in 1566, must have been an infant. It was no doubt Giles Lawrence, Professor of Greek at Oxford, to whom Strype referred.]

Matt. xxviii. 14. '*We will save you harmless: ἀμερίμνους (that is,) careless: ἀβλαβής or ἀζήμιος is harmless:
ἀμέριμνος, careless. I may be harmless in body and goods, and yet not careless. This is not considered in the Geneva Bible.*'

Luke i. 3, 4. 'I determined also, as soon as I had searched out diligently all things from the beginning that then I would write unto thee...that thou...hast been informed.'
This Lawrence translates: 'It seemed good to me having perfect understanding [as they that follow foot by foot] of all things from the beginning to write to thee in order... that thou...hast been taught by mouth.'

Mark xv. 3. 'These words αὐτὸς δὲ οὐδὲν ἀπεκρίνατο
'be omitted both here and in the Geneva translation. Yet
'the Greek printed by Stephanus hath it.'

Mark xiii. 16. 'Let him that is in the field not turn back again unto the things which he left behind him. For all these words there be no more in the Greek but, ὁ εἰς τὸν ἄγρον ὢν, μὴ ἐπιστρεφάτω εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω (that is) he that is in the field let him not turn back. εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω signifieth no more but back: John vi. 66...This superfluity is in the Geneva translation.'

It is not known how far Lawrence's labours extended, but an examination of a difficult passage of an Epistle will prove that the reviser who corrected it was not deficient in originality and vigorous scholarship<sup>1</sup>:

Of these twenty-six variations no less than sixteen are new, while only ten are due to the Genevan version; and the character of the original corrections marks a very close and thoughtful revision based faithfully upon the Greek. The anxiously literal rendering of the particles (2) and prepositions (9, 11, 12, 15, 16) is specially worthy of notice: so too the observance of the order (19), and of the original form of the sentences (17, 18, 20, 23, 24), even where some obscurity follows from it. In five places the Authorised Version follows the Bishops' renderings (3, 4, 10, 25, 26); and only one change appears to be certainly for the worse in which the rendering of the Genevan Testament has been followed (8 Beza ad coagmentationem). The singular independence of the revision as compared with those which have been noticed before is shewn by the fact that only four (3, 10, 11, 18) of the new changes agree with Beza and at least nine are definitely against him (4, 12, 15, 16, 17, 20, 23, 24, 25)<sup>1</sup>.

from a revision of Sir J. Cheke's (?) New Testament published by Jugge in 1561. The collations which he

In 1572 a new edition of the Bishops' Bible was published. In this the translation of the Old Testament, as far as I have been able to examine it, is unchanged, but that of the New Testament is carefully revised. The later editions follow this revision with very few intentional variations; and I am not aware that the text of 1568 was ever reprinted. As was natural this second edition was taken as the basis of the Authorised Version, though there are numerous cases in which the rendering of the edition of 1568 is restored there<sup>1</sup>. The collation of a single epistle will shew the extent of the differences, and the proportion in which the respective readings were preferred by King James' revisers<sup>2</sup>.

Of the changes introduced in 1572, 1, 6, 7, 21, 26, 30, 34, 38, 39, 40, 41, 44 appear to be due to the Genevan version; but the revision generally bears the same mark of independent judgement as that of 1568.

The notes in the Bishops' Bible differ generally in their character from those in the Genevan. They are shorter and more epigrammatic, and deal more frequently with the interpretation than with the application of the text. Yet there are in them, as will be seen even in the following examples, many dogmatic statements which are of importance in estimating the standard theology of the age. The chief part of the commentary on a single chapter will shew the general range of the notes: a few detached specimens will illustrate their doctrinal nature.

'Naturall sorowe yf it be in measure, is not to be reprehended.

§ 8. THE RHEMES AND DOWAY BIBLE. *

The Rhemish Bible, like Wycliffe's, lies properly outside the line of English Bibles, because it is a secondary translation based upon the Vulgate. But it is nevertheless of considerable importance in the internal history of the authorised text, for it furnished a large proportion of the Latin words which King James' revisers adopted; and it is to this rather than to Coverdale's Testaments that we owe the final and most powerful action of the Vulgate upon our present Version.

The Rhemish translators give a very interesting and ingenious defence of their method, but they express no obligation to the earlier English translations which still formed the groundwork of their version<sup>1</sup>. They take the current Latin Vulgate for their guide, and expressly disclaim the intention of acting as interpreters where that is obscure. What they say upon each point is well worth quoting, and may serve as a commentary on Romish views of Scripture at the end of the 16th century.

'We translate the old vulgar Latin text, not the 'common Greeke text, for these causes.

'1. It is so auncient, that it was vsed in the Church 'of God above 1300 years agoe.

'2. It is that (...by al probabilitie) which S. Hierom 'afterward corrected according to the Greeke, by the 'appointment of Damasus then Pope...

Revelation.

The coincidences with the Genevan revision alone (1560) in a single chapter are striking. Rom. i. 6 the called of Jesus Christ; 10 haue a prosperous journey; 12 be comforted together in you; 17 revealed; 23 corruptible; 28 a reprobate sense; id. are not convenient. Some of these words may have come independently from the Vulgate, but a comparison with Wycliffe shews that it is unlikely that all did. Cf. ii. 5, 17; iv. 14; vii. 6, &c.

'3. Consequently it is the same which S. Augustine
'so commendeth...

'4. It is that, which for the most part euer since hath 'been vsed in the Churches service.,.

'5. The holy Council of Trent, for these and many 'other important considerations, hath declared and de'fined this onely of al other latin translations, to be 'authenticall...

'6. It is the grauest, sincerest, of greatest maiestie,
'least partialitie, as being without all respect of contro-
'uersies and contentions, specially these of our time...

'7. It is so exact and precise according to the Greeke,
'both the phrase and the word, that delicate Heretikes
'therefore reprehend it of rudenes...

'8. The Aduersaries them selues, namely Beza, pre-
'ferre it before al the rest...

'9. In the rest, there is such diuersitie and dissension
'and no end of reprehending one an other, and translating
'euery man according to his fantasie, that Luther said,
'If the world should stand any long time, we must receiue
'again (which he thought absurd) the Decrees of Councils,
'for preseruing the vnitie of faith, because of so diuerse
'interpretations of the Scripture...

'10. It is not onely better than al other Latin trāsla-
'tions, but then the Greeke text it self, in those places
'where they disagree...

This last statement is supported by the argument that as the first heretics were Greeks, the Greek Scriptures suffered much at their hands. Further, it is shewn that many Latin readings are supported by ancient Greek authority; but it is also allowed that some errors had crept into the current text by the fault of scribes as in fide for in fine (1 Pet. iii. 8), præscientiam for præsentiam (2 Pet. i. 16), placuerunt for latuerunt (Hebr. xiii. 2)<sup>1</sup>.

In the Preface to the translation of the Old Testament the same arguments are repeated briefly. The Hebrew text is said to have been 'fouly corrupted by Iewes,' as the Greek by heretics. But in the interval between the publication of the New and Old Testaments an authoritative text of the Vulgate had been printed (by Clement VIII. 1592), and the English version of the Old Testament was made to agree with this. 'Only one thing we haue donne,' the editors say, 'touching the text...We haue againe conferred this English translation, and conformed it to the 'most perfect Latin Edition<sup>1</sup>.'

Their choice of a text being thus defended<sup>2</sup>, the translators explain also the principles on which they rendered it. They claim for themselves absolute impartiality. Their utmost desire was to reproduce the Vulgate in English without removing its technicalities or its obscurity. 'We 'haue vsed no partialitie for the disaduantage of our 'aduersaries, nor no more licence then is sufferable in 'translating of holy Scriptures: continually keeping our 'selues as neere as is possible, to our text & to the very 'wordes and phrases which by long vse are made venerable, 'though to some prophane or delicate eares they may 'seeme more hard or barbarous, as the whole style of 'Scripture doth lightly to such at the begīning: ac- 'knowledging with S. Hierom, that in other writings it is 'ynough to giue in trāslation sense for sense, but that in 'Scriptures, lest we misse the sense, we must keepe the 'very wordes.' They add, 'but to the discrete Reader 'that deeply weigheth and considereth the importance 'of sacred wordes and speaches, and how easily the 'voluntarie Translatour may misse the true sense of the 'Holy Ghost, we doubt not but our consideration and 'doing therein, shal seeme reasonable and necessarie: yea 'and that al sortes of Catholike Readers wil in short

<sup>1</sup> The delay in the appearance of the Old Testament is set down by the editors to 'one general cause, our 'poore estate in banishment.' When they published the New Testament (1582) the Old Testament was lying by them, 'long since translated.'

I do not know what edition of the Vulgate they followed in the New Testament. It was probably one by Hentenius. The text differs from the Complutensian (Apoc. xvi. 7) and the Clementine (Apoc. xxii. 9).

<sup>2</sup> It may be noticed that the translators retain without comment the interpolations in 1 Samuel; e.g. iv. 1; v. 6; x. 1; xiv. 22; xv. 12; xvii. 36.

'time thinke that familiar, which at the first may seeme 'strange, & wil esteeme it more, when they shal otherwise 'be taught to vnderstand it, then if it were the common 'known English.'

Thus they retain Amen, Amen and Alleluia 'for the 'more holy and sacred authoritie thereof.' In the same way they keep Corbana, Parasceue, Pasche, Azymes, the bread of Proposition, just as we retain Pentecost. Neophyte (1 Tim. iii. 6) they defend by Proselyte; Didragmes, Prepuce and Paraclete by Phylacteries. 'How is it possible,' they ask, 'to expresse Euangelizo, but as we do, Evan-gelize?...Therefore [also] we say Depositum (1 Tim. vi. 20) 'and, He exinanited him self, (Phil. ii. 7), and, You haue 'reflorished (Phil. iv. 10) and, to exhaust, (Heb. ix. 28), 'because we can not possibly attaine to expresse these 'wordes fully in English, and we thinke much better, that 'the reader staying at the difficultie of them, should take 'an occasion to looke in the table following<sup>1</sup>, or otherwise 'to aske the ful meaning of them, then by putting some 'vsual English wordes that expresse them not, so to de- 'ceiue the reader...The aduent of our Lord, and, Imposing 'of handes ..come out of the very Latin text of the 'Scripture. So did Penance, doing penance, Chalice, Priest, 'Deacon, Traditions, aultar, host, and the like...'

From these principles it followed consistently that the translators did not scruple to leave the version unintelligible or ambiguous where the Latin text itself was so. This they distinctly profess:

acquisition, getting, purchasing Eph. i. 14.

advent, The coming Matt. xxiv. 28.

adulterating, corrupting 2 Cor. ii. 17.

allegory, a mystical speech Gal. iv. 23.

cooperate, signifieth working with others Rom. viii. 28.

holocaust, a kind of sacrifice...Hebr. x. 6.

paraclete, John xiv. 16.

prescience, foreknowledge Acts ii. 23.

resuscitate, raise, quicken, renew 2 Tim. i. 6.

victims, sacrifices Acts vii. 42.

The list is a singular commentary on the large infusion of classical words into common language since the beginning of the xviii century. Comp.

‘Moreouer, we presume not in hard places to mollifie the speaches or phrases, but religiously keepe them word for word, and point for point, for feare of missing, or restraining the sense of the holy Ghost to our phantasie. as Eph. 6 [12], Against the spirituals of wickednes in the celestials... James 4, 6, And giueth greater grace, leauing it indifferent to the Scripture, or to the holy Ghost, both ‘going before...’

In itself then the Version has no independent merit as a version of the original texts. It is said indeed to have been compared with the Hebrew and Greek, but the collation must have been limited in scope or ineffectual, for the Psalter (to take one signal example) is translated, not from Jerome’s version of the Hebrew, but from his revision of the very faulty translation from the Septuagint, which commonly displaced it in Latin Bibles. As it stands, the Doway Bible is simply the ordinary, and not the pure, Latin text of Jerome in an English dress. Its merits, and they are considerable, lie in its vocabulary. The style, so far as it has a style, is unnatural, the phrasing [as a rule] is most unrhythmical, but the language is enriched by the bold reduction of innumerable Latin words to English service<sup>1</sup>.

One or two examples will be sufficient to indicate its merits and defects:

The correspondence with the Latin text is thus absolutely verbal, and it is only through the Latin that the English in some places becomes intelligible. But on the other hand Jerome's own greatness as a translator is generally seen through the second version. A very familiar passage will shew how closely the rendering can approach our own even in the Prophets :

6 For a little childe is borne to vs, and a sonne is geuen to vs, and principalitie is made vpon his shoulder : and his name shal be called, Meruelous, Counselor, God, Strong, Father of the world to come, the Prince of peace.

7 His empire shal be multiplied, and there shal be no end of peace ; he shal sit vpon the throne of Dauid, and vpon his kingdom : that he may confirme it, and strengthen it in iudgement and iustice, from this time & for ever : the zeale of the Lord of hostes shal doe this.

The Psalter is the most unsatisfactory part of the whole book. Even where the sense is sufficiently clear to remain distinct through three translations, from Hebrew to Greek, from Greek to Latin, from Latin to English, the stiff, foreign style sounds strangely unsuited to words of devotion ; and where the Latin itself has already lost the sense, the English baffles understanding. One specimen of each kind may be added :

8 The Law of our Lord is immaculate conuerting soules : the testimonie of our Lord is faithful, geuing wisdom to litle ones.

9 The iustices of our Lord be right, making hartes ioyful : the precept of our Lord lightsome ; illuminating the eies.

10 The feare of our Lord is holie, permanent for euer and euer ; the iudgmentes of our Lord be true. iustified in themselves.

11 To be desired aboue gold and much precious stone : and more sweete aboue honie and the honie combe.

12 For thy seruant keepeth them, in keeping them is much reward.

13 Sinnes who vnderstandeth ? from my secrete sinnes cleanse me : and from other mens spare thy seruant.

This is not what a translation of the Psalms should be, but the following passage is positively painful from the ostentatious disregard of meaning in the words<sup>1</sup>:

- 9 As waxe that melteth, shal they be taken away:
 fyre hath falne on them, and they haue not seene
 the sunne.
- 10 Before your thornes did vnderstand the old bryar: as liuing so in wrath he swalloweth them.
- 11 The iust shal reioice when he shal see reuenge: he shal wash his handes in the bloud of a sinner.
- 12 And man shal say: If certes there be fruite to the iust: there is a God certes iudging them on the earth.

The translation of the New Testament is exactly similar to that of the Old; and next to the Psalter the Epistles are most inadequately rendered. Neither the Psalter, indeed, as translated by the Rhemists, nor the Epistles had the benefit of Jerome's independent labour. He revised the Latin texts of both hastily and imperfectly, but in both he left much which he would not himself have written. A few isolated quotations will be enough to shew the character of the Rhemish Version:

- Rom. v. 18 Therefore as by the offence of one, vnto al men to condemnation: so also by the iustice of one, vnto al men to iustification of life.
- vi. 13 Exhibite your selues to God as of dead men, aliue.
- vii. 23 I see another law in my members, repugning to the law of my minde, and captiuing me in the law of sinne that is in my members.
- viii. 18 I thinke that the passions of this time are not condigne to the glorie to come.
- ix. 28 For, consummating a word, and abbridging it in equitie: because a word abbridged shal our Lord make vpon the earth.

 lican Psalter verbally. Jerome's own

Eph. vi. 12 Our wrestling is...against Princes and Potestats, against the rectors of the world of this darke-nes, against the spirituals of wickednes in the celestials.

Heb. xiii. 16 Beneficence and communication do not forget: for with such hostes God is promerited<sup>1</sup>.

Such translations as these have no claim to be considered vernacular renderings of the text: except through the Latin they are unintelligible. But still they only represent what there was in the Vulgate incapable of assimilation to an English version. And on the other hand a single Epistle furnishes the following list of Latin words which King James' translators have taken from the Rhemish Testament: separated (Rom. i. 1), consent (mg.) (i. 32), impenitent (ii. 5), approvest (ii. 18), propitiation (iii. 25), remission (id.), grace (iv. 4), glory in tribulations (v. 3), commendeth (v. 8), concupiscence (vii. 8), revealed (viii. 18), expectation (viii. 19), conformable (viii. 29), confession is made to salvation (x. 10), emulation (xi. 14), concluded (xi. 32), conformed (xii. 2), instant (xii. 12), contribution (xv. 26)<sup>2</sup>.

But at the same time it must be added that the scrupulous or even servile adherence of the Rhemists to the text of the Vulgate was not always without advantage. They frequently reproduced with force the original order of the Greek which is preserved in the Latin; and even while many unpleasant roughnesses occur, there can be little doubt that their version gained on the whole by the faithfulness with which they endeavoured to keep the original form of the sacred writings. Examples of this simple faithfulness occur constantly, as for instance: Matt. xviii. 9, having one eye to enter into life; id. 27, the dette

<sup>1</sup> All the quotations are made from the first editions. In the later (Chaloner's and Troy's) editions of the Rhemes and Doway Bible and New Testament there are considerable alterations, and the text is far nearer to that in the A. V. Examples are given by Dr Cotton, Rhemes and Doway...Oxford, 1853, pp. 183 ff.

he forgaue him; xx. 12, the burden of the day and the heates; id. 23, My cuppe in deede you shal drinke of; xxi. 41, The naughtie men he wil bring to naught; xxiii. 13, those that are going in, you suffer not to enter; xxvi. 11, the poore you haue.

The same spirit of anxious fidelity to the letter of their text often led the Rhemists to keep the phrase of the original where other translators had unnecessarily abandoned it: e.g. Matt. xviii. 1, houre; id. 6, it is expedient; id. 9, the hel of fire; xx. 20, the sonnes of Z.; xxii. 2, likened; id. 44, the foote stole of thy feete; xxvi. 25, Is it I Rabbi? (contrasted with v. 22) and so v. 49.

When the Latin was capable of guiding them the Rhemists seem to have followed out their principles honestly; but wherever it was inadequate or ambiguous they had the niceties of Greek at their command. Their treatment of the article offers a good illustration of the care and skill with which they performed this part of their task. The Greek article cannot, as a general rule, be expressed in Latin. Here then the translators were free to follow the Greek text, and the result is that this critical point of scholarship is dealt with more satisfactorily by them than by any earlier translators. And it must be said also that in this respect the revisers of King James were less accurate than the Rhemists, though they had their work before them. For example the Rhemish version omits the definite article in the following passages where it is wrongly inserted by A.V. and all earlier versions: Matt. ii. 13 (an angel); Luke ii. 9 (an angel); John vi. 26 (signes, not the miracles). Much more frequently it rightly inserts the article where other versions (including A.V.) omit it: e.g. Matt. iv. 5 (the pinnacle); vi. 25 (the meate, the rayment); xiv. 22 (the boate); xxv. 30 (the vtter darknesse); xxviii. 16 (the mount); John v. 35 (the lampe); 1 Cor. x. 5 (the more part); Gal. iii. 25 (the faith); Apoc. vii. 13 (the white robes)<sup>1</sup>.

sion, I am indebted to the kindness of Prof. Moulton, who placed at my

There are also rarer cases in which the Rhemists furnish a true English phrase which has been adopted since, as felow seruant (Matt. xviii. 28), kingdom against kingdom (Matt. xxiv. 7), faile (Luke xvi. 9), darkened (Rom. i. 21), foreknewe (Rom. xi. 2). Elsewhere they stand alone in bold or idiomatic turns of expression: thratled him (Matt. xviii. 28), workemen (Matt. xx. 1), stagger not (Matt. xxi. 21), vipers broodes (Matt. xxiii. 33), bankers (Matt. xxv. 27), ouergoe (1 Thess. iv. 6).

§ 9. THE AUTHORISED VERSION.

The Rhemish Version of the New Testament, supported by Martin's attack on the English Bible, had once again called attention to the importance of the Latin Vulgate before the revision of King James was undertaken. During the sixteenth century this had been in a great degree thrust out of sight by the modern translations of Erasmus and Beza, which had influenced respectively the Great and the Genevan Bibles. At the same time the study of Hebrew and Greek had been pursued with continued zeal in the interval which had elapsed since the publication of the Bishops' Bible; and two important contributions had been made to the interpretation of the Old Testament.

In 1572 Arias Montanus, a Spanish scholar not unworthy to carry on the work of Ximenes, added to the Antwerp Polyglott, which he edited by the command of Philip II., an interlinear Latin translation of the Hebrew text, based on that of Pagninus, whose readings he added to his own. The translation is rigidly verbal, but none the less it helped to familiarize ordinary scholars with the exact forms of Hebrew idioms which were more or less hidden in the earlier versions. Seven years afterwards Tremellius, by birth a Jew, published an original Latin translation of the Old Testament (1579), with a commentary, which rapidly obtained a very extensive currency.

His son-in-law Junius added a translation of the Apocrypha. The whole Bible was completed by a translation of the New Testament by Tremellius from the Syriac; but for this the New Testament of Beza was frequently substituted<sup>1</sup>.

Besides these works, which were designed for scholars, three important vernacular versions also had been published. In 1587-8 an authoritative revision of the French Bible was put forth by the venerable company of Pastors at Geneva, which was based upon a careful examination of the original texts. The chief part of the work is said to have been executed by C. B. Bertram, a Hebraist of distinguished attainments, and he was assisted by Beza, Goulart and others. An Italian translation was printed in the same city in 1607 by J. Diodati, who was a professor of Hebrew there. This translation has maintained its place to the present day, and though it is free, it is of very great excellence. In the mean time two Spanish versions had appeared, the first at Basle in 1569 by Cassiodoro de Reyna, and the second, which was based on Reyna's, at Amsterdam in 1602 by Cipriano de Valera. All these versions have an independent value, and when King James' revisers speak of their pains in consulting 'the Spanish, French and Italian translators,' there can be no doubt that it is to these they refer<sup>2</sup>.

Thus King James' revisers were well furnished with external helps for the interpretation of the Bible, and we have already seen that they were competent to deal independently with questions of Hebrew and Greek scholarship. Like the earlier translators they suffered most from the corrupt form in which the Greek text of the New Testament was presented to them. But as a whole their work was done most carefully and honestly. It is possible to point out inconsistencies of rendering and other traces of compromise, but even in the minutest details the translation is that of a Church and not of a party. It differs from the Rhemish Version in seeking to fix an intelligible sense on the words rendered: it differs from the Genevan Version in leaving the literal rendering uncoloured by any expository notes<sup>1</sup>. And yet it is most worthy of notice that these two Versions, representing as they do the opposite extremes of opinion, contributed most largely of all to the changes which the revisers introduced.

The important use which was made of the Rhemish and Genevan Versions shews that the revisers did not hold themselves to be closely bound by the instructions which were given them. The Rhemish Version was not contained in the list which they were directed to consult<sup>2</sup>; and on the other hand the cases are comparatively rare in which they go back from the text of the Bishops' Bible to an earlier English rendering. If indeed they had not interpreted liberally the license of judgment which was given them, they could not have accomplished their task. As it is, their work is itself a monument of the catholicity of their design.

An examination of the chapter of Isaiah which has <sup>1</sup> The most extreme form in which Calvinistic opinion appears in the translation of the Bible is in the French translation of 1588, which has been severely criticized by P. Coton in his Genève plagiaire in connexion with the other Genevan versions. One or two examples may be quoted:

Rom. v. 6 desnués de toute force...du tout meschans.

— x. 15 Sinon qu'il y en ait qui soyent enuoyés.

Acts x. 35 qui s'addonne à justice (cf. Coton, p. 209).

Phil. ii. 12 employez vous à... (Coton, p. 1746).

John vi. 50 qui est descendu (Coton, p. 158).

— 51 vinifiant (Coton, p. 174).

In all these places the English

Genevan version is unobjectionable; but in other places an unfair bias appears:

Acts iii. 21 contain (cf. Coton, p. 255).

1 Cor. ix. 27 reproved (Coton, p. 1718).

1 Cor. iv. 6 that no man presume above that which is written (Coton, p. 1486).

And to this must be attributed the avoidance of the word 'tradition' in 1 Cor. xi. 2; 2 Thes. ii. 15; iii. 6.

One notable phrase at least has passed from the French through the Genevan Bible into our own: Jerem. xvii. 9 Le cœur est cauteleux, & des-espérémēt malin par dessus toutes choses (cf. Coton, 1926).

been traced through the earlier versions will exhibit more clearly than a general description the method by which the revision was guided and the extent to which it was modified by the different authorities which the revisers consulted. The text of the Bishops' Bible is of course taken as the basis.

Thus as far as the variations admit of being reduced to a numerical form about seven-eighths are due to the Genevan Version, either alone or in agreement with one or both of the Latin Versions. Two renderings appear to be due to Tremellius (4, 30): the same number to Pagninus (10, 32), including the noble rendering 'a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.' Three times the Genevan translation is abandoned (30, 32, 33); and once the rendering appears to be independent (33). But throughout the most delicate care is given to the choice of words, and there is scarcely a verse which does not bear witness to the wisdom and instinctive sense of fitness by which it was guided, e.g. 2 no beauty... (3 a man of sorrows...) 4 our griefs...stricken... 5 bruised... 7 as a lamb... 16 put him to grief... 12 transgressors. Even subtleties of rhythm are not to be disregarded, as 7 he opened not... 8 from prison... 12 numbered...; nor yet the endeavour after a more exact representation of the original, as 10 he shall... 12 divide...

The example which has been taken is undoubtedly an extreme one, but it only represents on an exaggerated scale the general relation in which the Authorised Version stands to the Genevan and Bishops' Bibles in the Prophetical books. In the Historical, and even in the Poetical books, it is far less divergent from the Bishops' Bible. In the Apocrypha it is, as far as I can judge, nearer to the Bishops' Bible than to the Genevan, but marked by many original changes. A passage from Wisdom, which has been already examined<sup>1</sup>, will be sufficient to shew the character of the revision in this part of the Bible, and the independent freedom with which the reviser performed his work.

Of these changes three seem to be due to Junius (10, 11, 25), and perhaps four others (1, 6, 7, 23): two to the Genevan Version (4, 18), and perhaps two others (16, 17): the remainder are either linguistic (3, 5, 8, 12, 19) or closer renderings of the Greek (2, 9, 13—15, 20—22, 24).

The marginal renderings offer a certain clue to the authorities on which the revisers chiefly relied; and an analysis of those given in Malachi fully confirms the conclusions which have been already obtained.

Thus of the sixteen alternative renderings four are found in Tremellius (2, 3, 8, 9), four in Münster with Leo Juda or Tremellius or both (5, 7, 10, 16), two in Pagninus (11, 14), one in Castalio (15), one in the Genevan (13), the Douay (6) and Leo Juda's Version (4) respectively; while two alone cannot be certainly referred to any one of these authorities (1, 12)<sup>1</sup>.

The revision of the New Testament was a simpler work than that of the Old, and may be generally described as a careful examination of the Bishops' Version (1572) with the Greek text, and with Beza's, the Genevan, and the Rhemish Versions<sup>2</sup>. Examples of words derived from the Rhemish Version have been given already, but the use of this version is so remarkable that it may be well to add more unequivocal proofs of its reality. Thus in the Epistle to the Romans the following phrases are found which are common, I believe, to the Rhemish and Authorised Versions alone; and it is impossible that the coincidences can have been accidental<sup>3</sup>.

i. 10 if by any means

— 13 I would not have you ignorant

<sup>3</sup> Some of the phrases, it may be noticed, are found also in Wycliffe, and these may be taken to represent the amount of natural coincidences in two versions made independently from the Latin.

A still more certain proof of the influence of the Rhemish Version (Vulgate) on A.V. is found in changes of words and phrases in the earlier version which had been objected to by Romish controversialists. Thus, among renderings identical with, if not adopted from, those of the Rhemish Version in passages objected to by Martin, the following may be mentioned:

Matt. ii. 6 rule.

— xxvi. 26 blessed.

John ix. 22 put out of the synagogue.

Acts i. 26 numbered with.

— iii. 21 heaven must receive (so Bishops').

— xiv. 23 ordained (for ordained by election).

James v. 16 confess.

2 Cor. ii. 10 person.

— iv. 17 worketh.

2 Thess. ii. 15 traditions.

Tit. iii. 5 regeneration (so Bishops').

Hebr. xii. 23 Church.

Other passages objected to, as Eph. v. 5, Col. iii. 5, Tit. iii. 10, were altered already in the Genevan Version: others, as 2 Thess. ii. 15, were altered independently in the Authorised Version.

- i. 23 changed the glory (so 25)
- 28 did not like (liked not Rh.)
- ii. 5 revelation of the
- 10 glory, honour and peace to every man that worketh good
- 13 for not the hearers of the law are just
- 15 the work of the law
- iii. 7 why yet am I also judged as a sinner
- v. 3 and not only so
- 15 but not as the offence so also
- xi. 14 provoke to emulation
- xii. 16 be not wise in your own conceits
- xiii. 4 minister unto thee for good
- 8 owe no man anything

The relation in which the different authorities stand to one another in the execution of the revision will appear from an analysis of the changes in a passage of moderate difficulty.

— sacrifice 1569: sacrifices 1568 G. (22)

Thus about seven changes are due to Beza (12, 14, 20), or the Genevan version (1, 7, 13, 16); nearly an equal number to the Rhemish (2, 4, 10, 11, 15, 21); two were perhaps suggested by Tremellius' version of the Syriac (5, 19); and six are original, reckoning three linguistic variations (3, 6, 17).

The chief influence of the Rhemish Version was on the vocabulary of the revisers, that of Beza and the Genevan Version on the interpretation. But still our revisers exercise an independent judgment both in points of language and construction. Thus in the latter respect they often follow Beza, rightly and wrongly, when the Genevan Versions do not; and again they fail to follow him where these had rightly adopted his rendering. In the former class such passages as these occur:

Mark xi. 17 called of all nations.

ab omnibus gentibus (Beza 1565).

Rom. vii. 6 that being dead wherein...

mortuo eo in quo... (Beza).

Hebr. xi. 13 and embraced them.

postquam...et ea amplexi fuissent (Beza).

1 John ii. 19 they went out that...

egressi sunt ex nobis ut... (Beza 1585).

On the other hand the Authorised Version retains (by no means unfrequently) the old rendering of the Great Bible when it had been rightly corrected from Beza in the Genevan revisions:

Matt. xxviii. 14 if this come to the governor's ears.

come before the Gouvernour (Gt.), if ye gouvernour
heare of this (G.).

Quod si hoc auditum fuerit apud præsidem (Beza 1585).

periculum erat ne hoc nomine milites apud
Pilatum deferrentur (Beza note).

Acts xxviii. 4 suffereth not to live.

hath not suffered (Gen.) non sivit (Beza): servanda præteriti temporis significatio. Comp.
I John v. 4 vicit.

Eph. iv. 18 blindness.

hardness (Gen.).

obduratione (Beza, 1556, 1559).

I Pet. i. 17 If ye call on the Father...

If ye call him Father .. (Gen.).

Si patrem cognominatus eum qui... (Beza).

And still further, some right renderings of Beza are neglected both by the Genevan revisers and by our own:

Mark vii. 4 tables.

lectorum (Beza: so Vulg.: beds Wycl. Rh. and A.V. marg.).

I Tim. vi. 5 that gain is godliness.

If we apply the same test as before and examine the sources of the various renderings given in St Mark, the same authorities, as we have already noticed, reappear, and not disproportionately distributed.

very instructive instances of improve-

Acts i. 4 (Beza); and striking phrases

confounds the Genevan Testament of 1557 with the New Testament of the Genevan Bible.

Thus of the thirty-seven alternative renderings nearly one-half agree with the Genevan Version (2, 7, 10, 11, 24, 26, 33, 34, 37) or Beza's (4, 16—18, 20, 21, 27, 32); seven agree with the Rhemish Version (1, 6, 14, 22, 23, 25, 29); three more or less with the French (3, 5, 13); seven with the earlier English versions (8, 19, 28, 30, 31, 35, 36); one with Castalio (12); and one with the Vulgate (9).

Once again: the examination of the first Epistle of St John will shew very fairly how far K. James' revisers generally availed themselves in the New Testament of earlier labours, and how far they impressed a special character upon the Version. In six (four) places, if I reckon rightly, they have altered the construction of the text:

- I John i. 3 'and truly our fellowship is with... for 'that our fellowship may be with...'
(ii. 19 'they went out that they might be...' so Beza 1585)
(ii. 29 'ye know that...' B.)
for 'know ye that...' G. so A.V. marg. 'ye haue knowen' (Gt.)
iii. 16 'Hereby perceive we the love of God, because...' (B.)
for 'hereby perceive we (haue we perceiued G.) love, that' (because Great Bible)...
iv. 17 'Herein is our love (love with us marg. so B.
1598) made perfect, that...'
for 'Herein is the love perfect in us, that...'

- v. 6 'This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ...' (so B.)
for 'This Iesus Christ is he that cam...' (Tindale, G. B.)
or 'This is that Iesus Christ that came...' (G.)

The changes of words are far more frequent, and of these a large number introduce phrases identical with those used in the Rhemish Version. Examples occur i. 9 'confess' for '[ac]knowledge': ii. 2 (iv. 10) 'he is the propitiation for...' for 'he it is that obtaineth grace for...': iv. 10 'to make agreement for...' (propitiatio Vulg.): ii. 17 'he that doeth...' for 'he that fulfilleth...': ii. 20 'an unction' for 'an ointment': ii. 26 'seduce' for 'deceive' (seducunt Vulg.): ii. 28 (iii. 21, v. 14) 'have confidence' for 'be bold' (habeamus fiduciam Vulg.): iii. 15 'murderer' for 'manslayer': v. 20 'an understanding that...' for 'a mind to...' (sensum ut cognoscamus Vulg.)<sup>1</sup>.

In other cases the revisers aimed at a more literal exactness, as in iii. 14 'have passed' for 'are translated': iv. 18 'is made perfect' for 'is perfect': iii. 1 'bestowed' for 'shewed': iii. 9 'doth not commit sin' (committeth not sinne Rh.) for 'sinneth not': ii. 22 (article): v. 9, 10 (tense); or at consistency of rendering, as ii. 27 'abideth' for 'dwelleth': iii. 10 'manifest' for 'known'<sup>2</sup>; or at clearness, as ii. 24, iii. 8 'that he might destroy the works of the devil' for 'to loose...'; or at emphasis, as ii. 3 'do know...' Once an unhappy combination of renderings is attempted, iii. 17 'Bowels of compassion...' (Bowels Rh. compassion Tind. &c.): once a neater word is introduced, iii. 3 'purifieth' for 'purgeth'<sup>3</sup>.

for 'painfulness' in iv. 18 is less completely successful: neither word renders κδλασις.

The scrupulous and watchful care with which the revisers worked is nowhere seen more remarkably than in their use of italics to mark the introduction of words not directly

This analysis, in which I have endeavoured to include all the variations introduced into the Authorised Version, will shew better than any description the watchful and far-reaching care with which the revisers fulfilled their work. No kind of emendation appears to have been neglected, and almost every change which they introduced was an improvement. They did not in every case carry out the principles by which they were generally directed; they left many things which might have been wisely modified, they paid no more attention than was commonly paid in their time to questions of reading<sup>1</sup>; but when every deduction is made for inconsistency of practice and inadequacy of method, the conclusion yet remains absolutely indisputable that their work issued in a version of the Bible better—because more faithful to the original—than any which had been given in English before<sup>2</sup>.

represented in the original. The detail may seem at first sight trivial, and Luther neglected it entirely; but in reality it involves much that is of moment. It is of importance as marking distinctly that the work is a translation; and yet more the use distinguishes in many cases an interpretation from a rendering: e.g. Hebr. x. 38. This question has been exhaustively treated by Dr Turton in his pamphlet on The Text of the English Bible (1833), who shews conclusively that the Cambridge text of 1638 bears clear marks of representing very exactly the true form of the Authorised Revision. In the use of italics it is far more consistent than the editions of 1611, which seem to have been hastily printed.

<sup>1</sup> I have given an account of the Greek text followed by the revisers in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, II. 524 u. But the question is of no real importance, as they do not appear to have been influenced by any consistent critical views, and the variations are too superficial to admit a general classification or discussion.

An examination of the headings of the chapters, the running headings, and the marginal references does not fall within my scope, though in itself interesting. Some remarks on these points will be found in a paper by Mr Kegan Paul in the Theological Review for 1869, pp. 99 ff.

<sup>2</sup> It is impossible to enter here upon the question of the language of the Authorised Version. Linguistic changes were common in each successive revision, as has been already noticed; but it does not at once follow that no archaisms were retained. The following examples of old words contained in the Genevan Bible and altered in A.V. are interesting. I am indebted for them to an anonymous [by the Rev. J. Gurnhill] Essay called English retraced (Cambridge, 1862), which contains many excellent criticisms on the English of the Genevan Version. The readings of A. V. are given in ( ). The other notation is as before.

The valuable Bible Word-Book (1866) of Mr Eastwood and Mr Aldis Wright [second edition, 1884] furnishes an admirable foundation for a study of the English of A. V. There can hardly be a more instructive lesson in English than to trace to their first appearance a number of the archaisms there noticed. It will appear that not a few of them are due to K. James' revisers themselves and not to the earlier texts. The charges brought by the Rhemists against the language of the earlier English Versions are all summed up by Martin and met by Fulke, Defence of the English translations, pp. 218, 569 (ed. P. S.). The argument of Martin, it will be seen, loses all its point, when applied to the Authorised Version.

Note to p. 266.

The following selection of variations in some chapters of St Matthew will give a fair idea of the relation of A.V. to the Bishops' Bible.

CONCLUSION.

THUS step by step and in slow degrees, under every variety of influence, the English Bible assumed its present shape; and the record of its progress is still partially shewn in our public services. Among its other manifold memorials of the past, the Book of Common Prayer preserves clear traces of this eventful history. Some of the Scriptural translations which it contains are original, some are from the Great Bible, some from the Authorised Version. The Offertory sentences and the 'comfortable words' are not taken from any version, but are a rendering of the Latin, made probably by Cranmer. The same independence is found in the Evangelic Hymns, the Benedictus, the Magnificat and the Nunc dimittis, which differ more or less from the Great Bible and the Authorised Version. But even here the labour of correction was not neglected; for after their introduction into the first Prayer-Book of 1548 these Hymns were elaborately revised in 1549 and again in 1552. So also the Benedicite was revised in 1549, and the burden of the Hymn was altered throughout in 1552.

The Psalms Venite, Jubilate, Cantate, Deus misereatur, agree almost literally with the Great Bible (April, 1540), though even in these there are traces of a minute and careful revision; and the same remark holds true also of the Psalms and the Occasional Services<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Two changes of tense are worthy of notice. In the Cantate (Ps. xcvi. 9) 'he cometh' is read for 'he is come'; and in Ps. cxvi. 4 (The Churching of Women) 'I found,' 'I called' for 'I shall find,' and 'I will call.'

But the great and enduring monument of the earlier Version of Coverdale and Cranmer<sup>1</sup> is the Psalter itself, which had, as we have seen, become so completely identified with the expression of religious feeling that it was felt to be impossible to displace it<sup>2</sup>. When the last changes in the Prayer-Book were made it was found, it is said, smoother to sing; but this is not a full account of the matter, and it cannot be mere familiarity which gives to the Prayer-Book Psalter, with all its errors and imperfections, an incomparable tenderness and sweetness. Rather we may believe that in it we can yet find the spirit of him whose work it mainly is, full of humility and love, not heroic or creative, but patient to accomplish by God's help the task which had been set him to do, and therefore best in harmony with the tenour of our own daily lives.

But when the Psalter and the Hymns were left unaltered in 1662, the Introductory Sentences and the Epistles and Gospels were at last taken from the Authorised Version. Up to that time the Epistles and Gospels had been printed from the Great Bible with a few, perhaps unintentional, discrepancies, and the Introductory Sentences, like those at present in the Communion Service, had been an original translation. Thus the cycle was completed, and each great stage in the history of our Bible represented in the Prayer-Book.

Whatever else may be thought of the story which has been thus imperfectly told, enough has been said to shew that the history of the English Scriptures is, as was remarked by anticipation, unique. The other great vernacular <sup>1</sup> [It may be confidently stated that the Prayer-Book Version of the Psalms is due to Coverdale alone. If all the words which are taken from Coverdale (1535) be underlined with red, those from the Great Bible of 1539 with blue, and those from the edition of April 1540 (Whitchurch) with black, it will be found that there remain only slight verbal changes, with some errors, which have been made in later editions. There is no reason to suppose that Cranmer had anything to do with the translation of the Psalter, though he wrote the Prologue to the Bible of April 1540.]

versions of Europe are the works of single men, definitely stamped with their impress and bearing their names. A German writer somewhat contemptuously remarks that it took nearly a century to accomplish in England the work which Luther achieved in the fraction of a single lifetime. The reproach is exactly our glory. Our version is the work of a Church and not of a man. Or rather it is a growth and not a work. Countless external influences, independent of the actual translators, contributed to mould it; and when it was fashioned the Christian instinct of the nation, touched, as we believe, by the Spirit of God, decided on its authority. But at the same time, as if to save us from that worship of the letter, which is the counterfeit of true and implicit devotion to the sacred text, the same original words are offered to us in other forms in our Prayer-Book, and thus the sanction of use is distinguished from the claim to finality. Our Bible in virtue of its past is capable of admitting revision, if need be, without violating its history. As it gathered into itself, during the hundred years in which it was forming, the treasures of manifold labours, so it still has the same assimilative power of life.

One Version only in old times, the Latin Vulgate, can in this respect be compared with it. This also was formed by private efforts silently and slowly till it was acknowledged by the acceptance of the Western Church. One supremely great man, Jerome, partly revised and partly renewed it, and by a strange coincidence even he could not displace the old Psalter which had been adopted for public use. But the English Bible has what the Latin Bible, as far as we know, had not. It has not only the prerogative of vitality while the other has been definitely fixed in one shape, but it has also the seal of martyrdom upon it. In this too it differs from the other great modern versions. Luther defied his enemies to the last. Lefevre in extreme old age mourned that when the opportunity was given him he had not been found worthy to give up his life for Christ. Calvin died sovereign at Geneva. But Tindale, who gave us our first New Testament from the Greek, was strangled for his work at Vilvorde: Coverdale, who gave us our first printed Bible, narrowly escaped the stake by exile: Rogers, to whom we owe the multiform basis of our present Version, was the first victim of the Marian persecution: Cranmer, who has left us our Psalter<sup>1</sup>, was at last blessed with a death of triumphant agony.

The work was crowned by martyrdom and the workmen laboured at it in the faith and with the love of martyrs. The solemn words in which they commend the Bible to their readers, the prayers which they offer for the spiritual enlightenment of their countrymen, the confessions which they make of their own insufficiency, have even now lost nothing of their eloquence. These are the moral of the story.

'I haue here translated,' writes Tindale, and these were his first words, '(brethern and susters moost dere and tenderly beloued in Christ) the newe Testament for youre spirituall edyfyng, consolacion, and solas: Exhortynge instantly and besechyng those that are better sene in the tonge then y, and that have hyer gyfte of grace to interpret the sence of the scripture, and meanyng of the spyrite, then y, to consydre and pondre my laboure, and that with the spyrite of mekenes. And yf they perceyve in eny places that y have not attayned the very sence of the tonge, or meanyng of the scripture, or haue not geuen the right englysshe worde, that they put to there hande to amende it, remembryng that so is there duetie to doo. For we have not receyved the gyfte of god for oure selues only, or forto hyde them: but forto bestowe them vnto the honouringe of god and christ, and edyfyng of the congregacion, which is the body of christ.'

'As for the commendacyon of Gods holy scripture,' writes Coverdale, 'I wolde fayne magnifye it as it is worthy, but I am farre vnsufficiēt thereto. & therefore

'I thoughte it better for me to holde my tonge, then
 'with few wordes to prayse or commēde it: exhortynge
 'y<sup>e</sup> (most deare reader) so to loue it, so to cleue vnto it,
 '& so to folowe it in thy daylye conuersacyon, y<sup>e</sup> other 'men seyng thy good workes & the frutes of y<sup>e</sup> holy 'goost in the, maye prayse the father of heauen, & geue
 'his worde a good reporte for to lyue after the lawe of 'God, and to leade a vertuous conuersacyon, is the greatest

'Euery man,' writes Cranmer, 'that commeth to the 'readyng of thys holy booke ought to brynge wyth him
 'fyrst and formoste thys feare of almyghtye God, and
 'then nexte a fyrme and stable purpose to reforme hys
 'awne selfe accordyng ther vnto, and so to continue,
 'procede, and prospere frō tyme to tyme, shewynge hym
 'selfe to be a sober and frutefull hearer ād learner, whych
 'yf he do, he shall proue at the length well able to 'teache, though not wyth his mouth, yet with his liuynge
 'and good example, whych is suer the moost lyuely, and 'effecteouse forme and maner of teachyng.'

'It remaineth, that we commend thee to God, and to 'the Spirit of his grace, which is able to build further 'than we can aske or thinke. Hee remoueth the scales 'from our eyes, the vaile from our hearts, opening our 'wits that we may vnderstand his word, enlarging our 'hearts, yea correcting our affections, that we may loue
 'it aboue gold and siluer, yea that we may loue it 'to the end. Ye are brought vnto fountaines of liuing
 'water which yee digged not: doe not cast earth into them 'with the Philistines, neither preferre broken pits before 'them with the wicked Iewes. Others haue laboured, and 'you may enter into their labours; O receiue not so great 'things in vaine, O despise not so great saluation!.....
 'It is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing
 'God; but a blessed thing it is, and will bring vs to 'euerlasting blessednes in the end, when God speaketh
 'vnto us, to hearken; when he setteth his word before vs,

‘to reade it ; when he stretcheth out his hand and calleth,
‘to answere, Here am I ; here we are to doe thy will,
‘O God. The Lord worke a care and conscience in vs to ‘know him and serue him, that we may be acknowledged ‘of him at the appearing of our Lord Iesus Christ, to ‘whom with the holy Ghost, be all prayse and thanks‘giuing. Amen.’

WYCLIFFE.

Lord oure Lord ;
hou myche merueilous is thi name in al
the earthe.

For rerid vp is thi
grete doing, ouer
heuenes.

Of the mouth of vnspekende childer
and soukende thou performedist preising, for thin enemys ;
that thou destroye the enemy and the veniere.

For I shal see thin heuenes, the werkis of thi fingris ; the
mone and the sterris, that thou hast found-id.

What is a man,
that myndeful thou

APPENDIX II.

Chronological List of Editions of Bibles and of parts of the Bible of critical importance in the History of the Authorised Version.

In the following list I have only included those editions which have a direct literary bearing on the history of the Authorised Version. It has no bibliographical object whatever. In foreign versions it has generally seemed sufficient to mark the first edition of each work. In the case of rare books I have indicated the copies which I have been allowed to use. The principal sources of the several English versions are added in brackets.

Foreign Translations.

- 1516 Erasmus' first Edition of the Greek Testament with a new Latin Translation.
- 1519 Erasmus' second Edition.

APPENDIX III.

Collation of 1 John in the editions of Tindale's New Testament, 1525, 1534, 1535.

The reading of Tindale's revision of 1534 (T<sub>2</sub>) is given first: that for which it is substituted is the reading of the original translation (T<sub>1</sub>, 1525). Where the reading of the revision of 1535 (T<sub>3</sub>) is not specified it agrees with T<sub>2</sub>. When the reading of T<sub>3</sub> alone is given T<sub>1</sub> and T<sub>2</sub> agree against it.

- i. 1 om. 'declare we unto you' after 'beginning' (1)
T<sub>1</sub>T<sub>3</sub> om. 'concerning' before 'which' (33). So Matthew.
- 4 'oure ioye' for 'youre ioye' (2). Not Matthew.
- 7 'Iesus Christ' for 'Christ' (3)
- 8 'yf we saye' for 'yf we shall saye' (4)
- ii. 1 'synne not' for 'shulde not sinne' (5)
— 'yf...yet' for 'and yf...yet' (6)
- 2 T<sub>3</sub> 'youre synnes' for 'oure synnes' (34). Not Matthew.
- 3 'we are sure' for 'we knowe' (7)
— 'knowe him' for 'have knowen him' (8)
- 5 'therby' for 'therin' (9)
- 9 'the light' for 'the true light' (10)
- 11 T<sub>3</sub> 'the darkness' for 'thatt darknes' (35). Not Matthew.
- 13 T<sub>3</sub> 'ye know' twice for 'ye have knowen,' and so ver. 14 (36). So Matthew.
- 17 T<sub>3</sub> 'abideth euer' for 'abydeth for ever' (37). So Matthew<sup>1</sup>.
- 21 T<sub>3</sub> 'know not' for 'knewe not' (Matthew) (38)
- 22 'the same is the Antichrist' for 'he is Antichrist' (11)

[<sup>1</sup> But T<sub>1</sub> T<sub>2</sub> T<sub>3</sub> all read 'abideth ever.' The error is in Bagster's Hexapla.]

- iii. 1 T<sub>3</sub> 'on to us' for 'on us' (Matthew) (39)
 — 'knoweth not him' for 'hath not knowen him' (12)
 2 'dothe not appere' for 'hath not apered' (13)
 4 'for synne is' for 'and synne is' (14)
 11 'that we shuld' for 'that ye shulde', which is also in T<sub>3</sub> (15)
 15 T<sub>3</sub> 'hate' for 'hateth' (Matthew) (40)
 16 'and therefore' for 'and' (16)
 — 'ought we' for 'we ought' (17)
 17 'have neade' for 'in necessitie' (18)
 18 T<sub>3</sub> 'with the dede' for 'with dede' (41). So Matthew.
 19 'for therby' for 'and hereby' (19)
 — 'can before him quiet our hertes' for 'will before hym put oure hertes out of dout' (20) 20 'But' for 'For' (21)
 21 'Beloved' for 'Tenderly beloved': comp. iv. 1, 7, 11 (22)
 24 'therby' for 'herby' (23)
- iv. 1 'Ye beloved' for 'Derely beloved' (24)
 — T<sub>3</sub> 'or not' for 'or no' (42). So Matthew.
 3 T<sub>3</sub> 'that confesseth' for 'which confesseth' (Matthew) (43)
 5 'and therefore' for 'therfore' (25)
 — T<sub>3</sub> 'and that world' for 'and the worlde' (Matthew) (44)
 7 'Beloved' for 'Derely beloved,' so iv. 11 (26)
 8 'knoweth not' for 'hath nott knowen' (27)
 20 'hate' for 'hateth' (28)
 — 'For how' for 'Howe' (29)
- v. 1 T<sub>3</sub> 'that Jesus Christ' for 'Iesus is Christ' (Matthew) (45) 7 'for there '...are one.' In smaller type and in brackets.
 In T<sub>3</sub> the words are in ( ). In the first edition no difference is marked (30)
 8 'For' for 'And' (31)
 15 'desire' for 'desired' (32)

In this list 1, 4, 5, 10, 11, 18, 22, 24, 26, 29 are closer renderings of the Greek text.

On the other hand 6, 9, 14, 16, 19, 21, 25, 31 are instances of the abandonment of the more literal renderings in order (as it seems) to bring out the argument with greater distinctness.

The aorist which was first rendered by a perfect form is rendered by an indefinite present in 8, 12, 13, 27: a mode of rendering adopted for the perfect in 32. The change in 7 seems to be a consequence of the change in 8 to avoid repetition.

An error of grammar is corrected in 28, and an improvement of rhythm is introduced in 17.

Two false readings are corrected in 3, 15; and a new reading adopted in 2. The spurious passage in v. 7 is marked (30).

The changes are more frequently away from Luther than to Luther; but it is impossible not to think that Luther suggested the longest change of rendering (20), for which he has (1534) 'dass wir. können vnser Hertz fur ihm stillen<sup>1</sup>.'

Of the renderings first introduced in 1535 three are improved translations (33, 35, 38): two are worse renderings for emphasis (41, 44): one is a false reading [? a misprint] (34): one is a substitution (as before) of an indefinite present for a perfect (36): two appear to be indifferent (42, 43): three are probably misprints (39, 40, 45).

In the Epistle to the Ephesians the changes generally are of the same character. Two of these very worthy of notice have influenced our present text, of which one is the singularly beautiful 'making melody in your hearts' (v. 19) for 'playing': and the other the strange substitution of 'which before believed in Christ' (i. 12) for 'before hoped in Christ', which is altered into 'trusted' in A.V

[The edition of 1534-5, printed by G. H., agrees with that of 1535 except in 1 John ii. 9, 11, 21, iii. 1, 15, iv. 5, v. 1.]

Thus of the whole number (54) of alternative renderings twelve (3, 4, 5, 10, 29, 42, 43, 47, 49, 50, 54, 55) agree with Luther nineteen (1, 2, 8, 11, 12, 13, 16, 24—6, 28, 32, 33, 34, 35, 38, 39, 46, 48) with the Zurich Version: ten with Pagninus (15, 18, 21—3, 30—1, 36, 40—1): nine with the Vulgate (6, 7, 14, 17, 19, 20, 37, 52, 53); and four with Tindale (9, 44—5, 51). Of these the most remarkable coincidences with Luther are 3, 4, 10, 42, 47, 54, 55, with the Zurich Version 8, with Pagninus 15, 31, with Tindale 9, 52, 53. Of the readings adopted the most singular are 17, 19 (Luther) and 10, 20 (Zurich); 24 is apparently adapted from the Vulgate.

Nothing could sum up the internal history of Coverdale's Bible more accurately than this analysis.

APPENDIX VII.

Collation of Passages from the Pentateuch and Historical Books in Tindale, Coverdale, Matthew, the Great Bible, the Genevan Bible, and the Bishops' Bible.

COVERDALE. I will synge vnto y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, for he hath done gloriously: horse & charet hath he ouer throwne in the see.

The LORDE is my strength, and my songe, and is become my saluacion.

This is my God, I wil magnifie him: He is my fathers God, I wil exalte him.

TINDALE (1530). Let vs synge vnto the Lorde, for he is become glorious, the horse and him that rode vpon him hath he ouerthrowne in the see.

The Lorde is my strength ād my songe, ād is become my saluation.

He is my God and I will gloryfie him, he is my fathers God and I will lifte him vp an hie<sup>2</sup>.

MATTHEW agrees verbally with TINDALE.

TAVERNER agrees verbally with TINDALE.

<sup>1</sup> Luther's Version (1534), with the Latin Version of the Wittenberg Bible (1829), may be added for comparison:

Ich wil dem Herrn singen, denn er hat eine herliche that gethan, Ros vnd wagen hat er ins meer gestortzet.

Der Herr ist mein sterck vnd lobsang, vnd ist mein Heil. Das ist mein Gott, ich wil jn preisen, Er ist meines vaters Gott, ich wil jn erheben.

In the Wittenberg Bible the passage runs:

ZURICH VERSION. Ich wil dem Herren singē, dañ er hat herrlich gehandelt, rossz vnd wagen hat er gestürtzt ins Meer.

Der Herr ist mein stercke, vñ lobgesang, vnd ist mein helffer worden.

Das ist mein Gott, ich wil jn beherbergen. Er ist meines vaters Gott, ich wil jn erheben<sup>1</sup>.

Cantemus Domino, gloriose enim egit, equum et ascensorem deiecit in mare.

Fortitudo mea et carmen meum Dominus, qui factus est mihi in salutem.

Iste est Deus meus, et ornabo eum, Deus patris mei, et exaltabo eum.

This is nearer to the Vulgate than to Luther, and differs from it only in the italicized words.

GREAT BIBLE (1539, 1540, 1541). I wyll...hath triūphed gloriously: the horse & hym that rode vpon him :...my strength and *prays*e, and he is...He is...glorifye him: my fathers God, and I wyll exalte hym.

[MÜNSTER. ...triumphando magnifice egit...Fortitudo mea et laus dominus, factusque est... Iste Deus meus et decorabo eum: deus patris mei, et exaltabo eum.]

GENEVA. I will...hathe triūphed·gloriously: y<sup>e</sup> horse and him that rode vpon him....

The Lord is (ital.)...praise, and he is...He is...prepare him a tabernacle: he is (ital.)...exalt him.

BISHOPS' agrees verbally with GREAT BIBLE.

COVERDALE. And Moses sayde: Hereby shal ye knowe that the LORDE hath sent me, to do all these workes, and that I haue not done them of myne awne hert. Yf these men dye the comon death of all men, or be vysited as all men are vysited, then hath not the LORDE sent me. But yf the LORDE make a new thinge, and the earth open hir mouth, and swalowe them with all that they haue, so that they go downe quicke in to hell, thē shal ye knowe, that these men haue blasphemed the LORDE.

LUTHER (1534). Vnd Mose sprach, Dabey solt jr mercken, das mich der Herr gesand hat, das ich alle diese werck thet, vnd nicht aus meinem hertzen. Werden sie sterben, wie alle menschen sterben, oder heimgesucht wie alle menschen heimgesucht werden, so hat mich der Herr nicht gesand. Wird aber der Herr etwas newes schaffen, das die erde jren mund auff thut, vnd verschlinget sie mit allem das sie haben, das sie lebendig hinunter jnn die Helle faren, so werdet jr erkennen, dass diese leute den Herrn gelestert haben<sup>1</sup>.

TINDALE. And Moses sayed: Hereby ye shall knowe that the Lorde hath sent me to doo all these workes, and that I haue not done them of myne awne mynde: Yf these men dye the comon deth of all men or yf they be visyted after the visitacion of all men, then the Lorde hath not sent me. But and yf the Lorde make a new thinge, and the erth open hir mouthe and swalowe them and all that portayne vnto them, so that they goo doune quicke in to hell: then ye shall understōd, that these mē haue rayled vpon the Lorde.

non ex proprio ex corde protulerim, and by adding viri isti after blasphemaverint. The Zurich Bible simply differs by dialectic peculiarities.

MATTHEW agrees verbally with TINDALE.

TAVERNER agrees verbally with TINDALE except in reading: of myne own hed: But yf (om. and).

GREAT BIBLE (1539, 1540, 1541) agrees with Tindale except: swalowe them vp with all that they haue, and they go...prouoked.

A note is indicated (in 1539, 1540) by  to 'visited.'

[MÜNSTER. devoraverit eos una cum omnibus quæ habent et descenderint...: irritarint...dominum.]

GENEVA. for I haue (ital.) not done them (ital.)...: the Lord (om. then): but if: swalowe...go downe quicke into y<sup>e</sup> pit.

BISHOPS' agrees with GREAT BIBLE except in reading: for I have not done them (Gen.): into the pit (Gen.).

COVERDALE. And Iosua wrote this acte in the boke of the lawe of GOD, and toke a greate stone, and set it vp there vnder an oke, which was in y<sup>e</sup> Sanctuary of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, and sayde vnto all the people: Beholde, this stone shall be witnessse ouer you; For it hath herde all the wordes of the LORDE, which he hath spoken vnto us, and shall be a witnessse ouer you, that ye denye not youre GOD. So Iosua let the people go every one to his inheritaunce.

LUTHER. Vnd Josua schreib dis alles jns Gesetzbuch Gottes, vnd nam einen grossen stein, vnd richtet jn auff daselbs vnter einer Eiche, die bey dem Heilighum des Herrn war, vnd sprach zum gantzen volck. Sihe, dieser Stein sol zeuge sein zwisschen vns, denn er hat gehöret alle rede des Herrn, die er mit vns geredt hat, vnd sol ein zeuge vber euch sein, das jr ewrn Gott nicht verleuck[n]et. Also lies Josua das volck, einen jglichen inn sein ertheil<sup>1</sup>.

MATTHEW. [TINDALE.] And Iosua wrotte these wordes in the boke of the lawe of God, and toke a great stonne & pitched it on ende in y<sup>e</sup> sayde place even vnder an ocke that stode in the sanctuary of the Lorde. And Iosua sayde vnto all the people: beholde, thys stone shalbe a witnessse vnto vs, for it hath hearde all the wordes of the Lorde whych he spake wyth vs. It shalbe therefore a wytnesse vnto you, lest ye lye vnto youre God. And so Iosua let the people departe every man vnto hys enherytaunce.

The Zurich Bible has the following significant variations:— ...schreyb disen handel... die inn dem Heyligthumb... zeüg über euch sein...

TAVERNER agrees verbally with [TINDALE] MATTHEW except in reading: spake with you: leest y<sup>t</sup> after this tyme ye wyll denye and lye vnto your God (Vulg. see below).

GREAT BIBLE (1539, 1540, 1541) agrees with TINDALE except by reading: (1) that was: and (2) lest ye *denye** (and dissemble with).

[MÜNSTER. (1) quæ erat (2) ne forte abnegare velitis deum vestrum (Vulg. ne forte postea negare velitis et mentiri Domino Deo vestro).]

GENEVA agrees with TINDALE except by reading: pitched it there: that was: a witnes against you: lest ye deny your God: Thē Joshua....

BISHOPS' agrees with GREAT BIBLE exactly, only omitting the added clause 'and dissemble with.'

COVERDALE. There were two men in one cite, the one riche, the other poore. The riche man had very many shepe and oxen: but the poore man had nothinge saue one litle shepe which he had boughte and norished it, so that it grewe vp with him and his children together. It ate of his bred, and dranke of his cuppe and slepte in his lappe, and he helde it as a doughter. But whan there came a straunger vnto the riche man, he spared to take of his awne shepe & oxen (to prepare oughte for the straunger that was come vnto him) and toke the poore mans shepe, and prepared it for the man that was come vnto him. Thē was David wroth with greate displeasure agaynst that man, and sayde unto Nathan: As truly as the LORDE liueth, the man that hath done this, is the childe of death.

MATTHEW [TINDALE]. There were two men in one citie, a (1) ryche and a (1) poore. And the ryche (2) had excedyng great aboundaunce of (3) shepe and oxē. But the poore had nothyng saue one lytle lambe (4) whych he bought (5) & norysshed vp. And it grew vp with hym and hys children (6), and did eate of his awne meate and drancke of his awne cuppe, & slept in his bosome, & was as dere vnto hym as his daughter (7). And there cam a straüger vnto the ryche man. And he coulede not fynde in his heart to take of his awne shepe nor of hys beestes (8) to dresse for y<sup>e</sup> straunger y<sup>i</sup> was come vnto him. But toke the poore mānes lambe (4) & dressed it for the mā that was come to him. And David was excedyng wroth w<sup>t</sup> the man, and sayd to Nathan: as surely as y<sup>e</sup> Lorde lyueth y<sup>e</sup> felow (9) y<sup>i</sup> hathe done this thyng, is y<sup>e</sup> chylde of deeth....

TAVERNER agrees verbally with Matthew except by reading: to make of his own (error): to prepare for the s.: is worthye of deathe.

GREAT BIBLE (1539, 1540, 1541) agrees with TINDALE except (1) the one—the other (Cov.): (2) The ryche man (C): (3) excedyng many: (4) shepe (C): (5) had b. (C): (6) wyth his ch. also: (7) was unto him as his d.: (8) and of his own oxen: (9) man. Before 'the child of death' stands (in 1539, 1540) a ¶ to indicate an intended note, such as is given in Matthew. [That is, is worthye to dye.]

GENEVA agrees with the GREAT BIBLE except in reading: had none at all: his own morsels: Now there came: who refused to take: As the Lord liueth: shall surely dye.

BISHOPS' agrees with the GREAT BIBLE except in reading: he spared to take: as the Lord liveth (Gen.).

APPENDIX VIII.

The Relation of the Wycliffite to the later Versions.

The History of our English Bible begins with the work of Tindale and not with that of Wycliffe. Every step in the descent of our present Authorised Version, from Tindale's first New Testament and Matthew's composite Old Testament and Apocrypha, is clearly made out; but neither Tindale's nor Coverdale's translation has any direct filiation on Wycliffe's. As far as Tindale is concerned, his own explicit statement leaves no room even for raising the question: 'Them that are learned Christenly, 'I beseeche: for as moche as I am sure, ād my conscience beareth 'me recorde, that of a pure entent, singilly and faythfully I have 'interpreted itt [the New Testament] as farre forth as god gave me 'the gyfte of knowledge ād vnderstondynge: that the rudnes off 'the worke nowe at the fyrst tyme, offende them not: but thatt 'they consyder howe that I had no man to counterfet, nether was 'holpe with englysshe of eny that had interpreted the same, or soche 'lyke thiȝe ī the scripture beforetyme.' And on the other hand Coverdale is equally explicit (see p. 162) as to the sources from which he himself derived help for his first great work. At the same time the words of Tindale imply that he knew of the Wycliffite versions (nor could it have been otherwise), and admit the supposition that he had used them, though he deliberately decided that he could not (1) 'counterfeit' them, that is follow their general plan, as being a secondary translation only, or (2) adopt their language. It is possible however that some of the earlier renderings may have obtained a traditional currency, and in this way have affected Tindale's or Coverdale's own work. But coincidences which can be referred to this origin are very rare in Tindale, and the fact that they are much more frequent in Coverdale's Latin-English Testaments appears to shew that they were really due to the immediate influence of the Vulgate and not to the Wycliffite translation of it.

A few specimens will place the relations between the earlier and later works in a clear light.

PURVEY.

3 Blessid ben pore men in spirit, for the kyngdom of heuenes is herne.

5 Blessid ben mylde men, for thei shulen welde the erthe.

4 Blessid ben thei that mornen, for thei schulen be coumfortid.

6 Blessid ben thei that hungren and thristen rihtwisnesse, for thei schulen be fulfillid.

7 Blessid ben merciful men, for thei schulen gete merci.

8 Blessid ben thei that ben of clene herte, for thei schulen se God.

9 Blessid ben pesible men, for thei schulen be clepid Goddis children.

9 Oure fadir that art in heuenes, halewid be thi name;

10 Thy kyngdome come to; be thi wille don in erthe as in heuene;

11 Ȝyue to vs this dai oure breed ouer othir substaunce;

12 And forȝyue to vs oure dettis, as we forȝyuen to oure dettouris;

13 And lede vs not in to temptacioun, but delyuere vs fro yuel. Amen.

24 Therfor ech man that herith these my wordis, and doith hem, schal be mazed lyk to a wise man that hath bildid his hous on a stoon.

25 And reyn felde down, and flodis camen, and wyndis blewen, and russchiden in to that hous;

TINDALE (1534).

3 Blessed are the povre in sprete: for theirs is the kyngdome of heven.

4 Blessed are they that morne: for they shalbe confortid.

5 Blessed are the meke: for they shall inheret the erth.

6 Blessed are they which honger and thirst for rightewesnes: for they shalbe filled.

7 Blessed are y<sup>e</sup> mercifull: for they shall obteyne mercy.

8 Blessed are the pure in herte: for they shall se God.

9 Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shalbe called the chyl-dren of God.

9 O oure father which arte in hevē, halowed be thy name.

10 Let thy kyngdome come. Thy wyll be fulfilled, as well in erth, as it ys in heven.

11 Geve vs this daye oure dayly breede.

13 And leade vs not into tēptacion: but delyver vs frō evell. For thyne is y<sup>e</sup> kyngedome and y<sup>e</sup> power, & y<sup>e</sup> glorye for ever. Amen.

24 Whosoever heareth of me these sayinges and doethe the same, I wyll lyken hym vnto a wyse man which bylt hys housse on a rocke:

and it felde not down, for it was foundun on a stoon.

26 And euery man that herith these my wordis, and doith hem not, is lijk to a fool, that hath bildid his hous on grauel.

27 And reyn cam down, and floodis camen, and wyndis blewen, and thei hurliden aȝen that house; and it felde down, and the fallyng doun therof was greet.

In the whole of the Sermon on the Mount I have only noted the following coincidences in which the Wycliffite rendering may have suggested that of Tindale:

vii. 3 litil mote W. ( festucam )	moote T.
— 6 al to tere ȝou W.	all to rent you T.
— 16 breris W. ( tribulis )	bryres T.
— 23 knouleche to W.	knowlege vnto T.

In the whole of the first Epistle of St John I have observed only one coincidence in any way remarkable: iii. 15 mansleere W., T., a common rendering which recurs in 1 Tim. i. 9 (so also A.V.), while elsewhere Tindale uses murderers, and Purvey sometimes mansleere and sometimes manquillere. The differences on the other hand are very striking:

PURVEY.

The world schal passe, and the couetise of it; but he that doith the wille of God, dwellith with outen ende.

Ech man that dwellith in hym, synneth not; and ech that synneth, seeth not hym, nether knew hym.

He that woot that his brother synneth a synne not to deth, axe he, and lijf schal be ȝouun to hym that synneth not to deth. Ther is a synne to deth; not for it Y seie, that ony man preie.

TINDALE.

vpon that same housse, and it fell not, because it was grounded on the rocke.

26 And whosoever heareth of me these sayinges & doth them not, shalbe lykened vnto a folysh man which bilt hys housse apō the sonde:

27 & abundaūce of rayne descended, & the fluddes came, and y<sup>e</sup> wyndes blewe and beet vpon that housse, and it fell and great was the fall of it.

TINDALE.

The worlde vannyssheth awaye, and the lust therof: but he that fulfilleth the will of god abydeth ever.

As many as byde in him synne not: whosoever synneth hath not sene him, nether hath knowen him.

Yf eny man se his brother synne a synne that is not vnto deeth, let him axe, and he shall geve him lyfe for them that synne not vnto deeth. Ther is a synne vnto deeth, for which saye I not that a man shuld praye.

In the Epistles of St Paul the differences between Purvey and Tindale are even greater. Thus the only two striking phrases common to them in Romans viii., trauelith with peyne (ver. 22 W., travayleth in payne T.) and tribulacioun, or anguysch (ver. 35), seem to be due to the Latin parturit (συνωδίζει) and tribulatio an angustia.

A comparison of the Wycliffite versions of Ps. viii. given in App. I. with the same Psalm in the Prayer-Book Psalter will shew the wide difference between the Old Versions and Coverdale's work.

APPENDIX IX.

The Revision of the Authorised Version.

The question of the revision of the 'Authorised Version' of the Bible was discussed more or less seriously at various times after the abortive attempt under the Commonwealth (see p. 120), but did not take any practical shape till the present generation. It is unnecessary to notice here the different private attempts at revision, which at least kept the way open for a more complete solution of the problem and furnished materials for the work. The question assumed a new character when at length in the year 1870 it was brought before the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury. On Feb. 10th the Bishop of Winchester (S. Wilberforce) submitted the following motion to the Upper House: 'That a Committee of both Houses be appointed, with power to confer with any Committee that may be appointed by the Convocation of the Northern Province, to report upon the desirableness of a revision of the Authorized Version of the New Testament, whether by marginal notes or otherwise, in all those passages where plain and clear errors, whether in the Hebrew (sic) or Greek text originally adopted by the translators, or in the translation made from the same, shall, on due investigation, be found to exist<sup>1</sup>.'

In the course of the discussion which followed, the Bishop of Llandaff (A. Ollivant) proposed to include the Old Testament in the scope of the inquiry; and the motion was agreed to with the addition of the words 'Old and' before 'New Testaments.' Upon this the Bishops of Winchester, Bath and Wells (Lord motion of a wider scope, or an anticipation of the motion as afterwards amended.

A. C. Hervey), St David's (C. Thirlwall), Llandaff, Gloucester and Bristol (C. J. Ellicott), Ely (E. H. Browne), Lincoln (Chr. Wordsworth) and Salisbury (G. Moberly) were appointed members of the Committee to represent the Upper House. The resolution was at once communicated to the Lower House; and the following members of that House were nominated to serve upon the joint Committee. The Prolocutor (E. Bickersteth), the Deans of Canterbury (H. Alford), Lincoln (J. A. Jeremie) and Westminster (A. P. Stanley), the Archdeacons of Bedford (H. J. Rose), Exeter (P. Freeman) and Rochester (A. Grant), Chancellor Massingberd, Canons Blakesley, How, Selwyn, Swainson, Woodgate, Drs Kay and Jebb and Mr De Winton.

The Convocation of York, however, declined to meet the advances of the Southern Province. A resolution was adopted by that body in which they stated that 'although blemishes existed 'in [the text of the Authorized Version] such as had from time 'to time been pointed out, yet they would deplore any recasting 'of the text. [They did not] accordingly think it necessary to 'appoint a Committee to co-operate with the Committee appointed 'by the Convocation of Canterbury, though favourable to the 'errors being corrected'.

In spite of this disappointment the Committee of the Convocation of Canterbury proceeded with their work.

On May 3rd, 1870, a report which 'was unanimously agreed 'to by all the members of the Committee who were present' was laid before the Upper House by the Bishop of Winchester and before the Lower House by the Prolocutor<sup>2</sup>. This report was embodied in the following resolutions:

1. 'That it is desirable that a revision of the Authorized 'Version of the Holy Scriptures be undertaken.

2. 'That the revision be so conducted as to comprise both 'marginal renderings and such emendations as it may be found 'necessary to insert in the text of the Authorized Version.

3. 'That in the above resolutions we do not contemplate 'any new translation of the Bible, or any alteration of the lan- 'guage, except when in the judgment of the most competent 'scholars such change is necessary.

4. 'That in such necessary changes, the style of the language employed in the existing version be closely followed.

5. 'That it is desirable that Convocation should nominate 'a body of its own members to undertake the work of revision, 'who shall be at liberty to invite the cooperation of any eminent 'for scholarship, to whatever nation or religious body they may 'belong.

This report was adopted in the Upper House without any amendment having been proposed; and it was at once resolved, without any opposition, 'That a committee be now appointed to 'consider and report to Convocation a scheme of revision on the 'principles laid down in the report now adopted.

'That the Bishops of Winchester, St David's, Llandaff, Gloucester and Bristol, Salisbury, Ely, Lincoln, and Bath and Wells 'be members of the Committee.

'That the Lower House be directed to appoint an equal 'number from their own body as members of the Committee<sup>1</sup>.

'That the Committee be empowered to invite the cooperation 'of those whom they may judge fit from their Biblical Scholarship 'to aid them in their work.'

These resolutions were communicated to the Lower House on the same day; and the report and resolutions were discussed in that House on May 5th. Various amendments were proposed to the different sections of the report, but met with little support, and the report was adopted without change. There was, however, considerable opposition to the direction which fixed the representatives of the Lower House at the same number as those of the Upper House. It was urged that the usual practice of Convocation with respect to joint Committees, according to which the Lower House is represented in the proportion of two of its members to one of the Upper House, ought to be observed in this case. A resolution embodying this opinion was communicated to the Upper House, which however again affirmed its judgment, still leaving to the Lower House the power of asking for a larger number of representatives, if after this second expression of opinion they thought it well to do so. The subject was again debated in the Lower House, but it was finally decided, by 27 voices to 25, to accept the number suggested by the Upper cation in the published records of Convocation as to its introduction into the resolution agreed to by the Upper House.

House. On this the Prolocutor, in virtue of his office, nominated the following members of the House to act on the joint Committee: the Prolocutor [apart from all other considerations 'it was judged necessary for the Prolocutor to be on the Committee'], the Dean of Canterbury, the Dean of Westminster, the Archdeacon of Bedford, Canon Selwyn, Canon Blakesley, Dr Jebb (Canon of Hereford), and Dr Kay.

In the course of the debates some doubt was expressed as to the exact duty of the joint Committee which was described by the phrase 'considering and reporting a scheme of revision.' The phrase was interpreted by some as if it were equivalent to drawing up a plan for making a revision; but this interpretation was overruled. It was laid down that 'the scheme of revision' necessarily included those changes by the adoption of which it was proposed that the revision should be carried out<sup>1</sup>.

At this point then the action of Convocation as to the work of revision was for a time ended. Thenceforward the joint Committee had to carry out on their own responsibility the instructions which they had received, and whenever 'the scheme of revision' is completed they will present it with their report to Convocation according to the laws of that body. It will then rest with Convocation to adopt or reject or modify 'the scheme of revision' offered to them.

The Committee lost no time in carrying out the work with which they were entrusted. At the first meeting [May 25th, 1870] 'the following Resolutions and Rules were agreed to, as the 'fundamental principles on which the Revision is to be conducted:

'RESOLVED,—

'I. That the Committee, appointed by the Convocation of Canterbury at its last Session, separate itself into two Companies, the one for the revision of the Authorized Version of the Old Testament, the other for the revision of the Authorized Version of the New Testament.

'II. That the Company for the revision of the Authorized Version of the Old Testament consist of the Bishops of St David's, Llandaff, Ely, Lincoln, and Bath and Wells, and of the following Members from the Lower House, Archdeacon Rose, Canon Selwyn, Dr Jebb, and Dr Kay.

'III. That the Company for the revision of the Authorized Version of the New Testament consist of the Bishops of Winchester, Gloucester and Bristol, and Salisbury, and of the following Members from the Lower House, the Prolocutor, the Deans of Canterbury and Westminster, and Canon Blakesley.

'IV. That the first portion of the work to be undertaken by the Old Testament Company, be the revision of the Authorized Version of the Pentateuch.

'V. That the first portion of the work to be undertaken by the New Testament Company, be the revision of the Authorized Version of the Synoptical Gospels.

'VI. That the following Scholars and Divines be invited to join the Old Testament Company:—

Alexander, Dr W. L.<sup>1</sup>

‘VIII. That the General Principles to be followed by both Companies be as follows:—

1. To introduce as few alterations as possible into the Text of the Authorized Version consistently with faithfulness.

2. To limit, as far as possible, the expression of such alterations to the language of the Authorized and earlier English versions.

3. Each Company to go twice over the portion to be revised, once provisionally, the second time finally, and on principles of voting as hereinafter is provided.

4. That the Text to be adopted be that for which the evidence is decidedly preponderating; and that when the Text so adopted differs from that from which the Authorized Version was made, the alteration be indicated in the margin.

5. To make or retain no change in the Text on the second final revision by each Company, except two-thirds of those present approve of the same, but on the first revision to decide by simple majorities.

6. In every case of proposed alteration that may have given rise to discussion, to defer the voting thereupon till the next Meeting, whensoever the same shall be required by one-third of those present at the Meeting, such intended vote to be announced in the notice for the next Meeting.

7. To revise the headings of chapters, pages, paragraphs, italics, and punctuation.

8. To refer, on the part of each Company, when considered desirable, to Divines, Scholars, and Literary Men, whether at home or abroad, for their opinions.

'IX. That the work of each Company be communicated to the other as it is completed, in order that there may be as little deviation from uniformity in language as possible.

'X. That the Special or Bye-rules for each Company be as follows:—

1. To make all corrections in writing previous to the Meeting.

2. To place all the corrections due to textual considerations on the left-hand margin, and all other corrections on the right-hand margin.

3. To transmit to the Chairman, in case of being unable to attend, the corrections proposed in the portion agreed upon for consideration.

Of the scholars who were invited to take part in the work, in accordance with this resolution, Canon Cook, Dr Newman, Dr Pusey, and Dr W. Wright declined the invitation; and Dr Tregelles was unable from ill health to take his seat among the revisers. Dr Alford and Professor M<sup>c</sup>Gill were removed by death in 1871 from a work to which they had already rendered important services. The Bishop of Lincoln and Dr Jebb resigned their places on the original Committee of Convocation, shortly after their labours had commenced<sup>1</sup>. On the other hand the following new members were appointed:—

(1) For the Old Testament Company:

Mr R. L. Bensly, Assistant University Librarian, Cambridge.

Dr Douglas, Professor of Hebrew, Free Church College, Glasgow.

Rev. J. D. Geden, Professor of Hebrew, Wesleyan College, Didsbury.

Dr Weir, Professor of Oriental Languages in the University of Glasgow [d. 1876].

(2) On the New Testament Company:

Dr Charles Wordsworth, Bishop of St Andrews.

Dr David Brown, Professor of Divinity in the Free Church College, Aberdeen.

Dr C. Merivale, Dean of Ely. [Resigned 1871.]<sup>2</sup>

The Companies entered upon the work as soon as they were organized. The New Testament Company met for the first time on June 22nd (1870), in the Jerusalem Chamber, Westminster Abbey: the Old Testament Company on June 30th.

The Rev. C. J. Elliott, Vicar of Winkfield,

The Rev. J. R. Lumby, afterwards Norrisian Professor and Lady Margaret's Reader in Divinity, Cambridge,

The Rev. J. Birrell, Professor of Oriental Languages, St Andrew's,

The Rev. A. H. Sayce, Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford; now Professor of Assyriology,

The Rev Professor W. Robertson Smith, Free Church College, Aberdeen:

and in 1875:

The Rev. T. K. Cheyne, Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford; now Professor of Exegesis and Canon of Rochester,

Dr William Wright, Professor of Arabic, Cambridge,

Mr S. R. Driver, Fellow of New College, Oxford; now Regius Professor of Hebrew and Canon of Christ Church, F. Chance, M.B., of Trinity College, Cambridge.

To the New Testament Company was added in 1873, in place of the Bishop of Winchester,

The Rev. Edwin Palmer, Professor of Latin, Oxford, and afterwards Archdeacon of Oxford.]

Before the first Session (June 22nd) a large number of the revisers joined in the Holy Communion, which was celebrated by the Dean of Westminster in Henry VIIIth's Chapel. From that time the Companies have continued their work regularly, except during the summer vacation, the Old Testament Company in bi-monthly sittings of ten days, and the New Testament Company in monthly sittings of four days each.

Shortly after the work was commenced negotiations were opened by the Committee of Convocation with the two Universities of Oxford and Cambridge on the subject of the copyright of the revised Version [i.e. the Authorised Version amended according to the scheme of revision prepared by the Companies]. These negotiations led to an arrangement in 1872, by which the Presses of the two Universities undertook to provide a sum probably sufficient to pay the bare expenses of the production of the work (travelling expenses, printing, &c.) in return for the copyright. The revisers, it need scarcely be added, offer their time and labour as a free contribution to the great work in which they have been allowed to join. In the course of these negotiations it was for the first time laid down that the Apocrypha should be included in the scheme of revision, the two Companies combining to produce this part of the work.

When the revision was fairly in progress in England, the Committee of Convocation, according to the tenor of their instructions, and a more specific resolution of July 7th<sup>1</sup>, opened communications with Biblical scholars in America. Dr Angus arrived in New York in August 1870 and conferred with Dr Ph. Schaff (a pupil of Neander, who stands in the foremost rank among American theologians), and after the negotiations thus commenced were brought to an end, the following groups of scholars were organized to assist the English Companies by their criticisms and suggestions.

'In the delicate task of selection, reference was had (so Dr Schaff writes), first of all, to ability, experience, and reputation in Biblical learning and criticism; next, to denominational connection and standing, so as to have a fair representation of the leading churches and theological institutions; and last, to local convenience, in order to secure regular attendance. Some distinguished scholars were necessarily omitted; but may be added hereafter by the committee itself.

'So far as I know, the selection has given general satisfaction. A few gentlemen (not included in the above list) declined the invitation for personal reasons, but not from any hostility to the pending revision. One of these, a learned bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, wrote to me: "Let me assure you, it is from no feeling that a revision is not needed, nor yet from any unwillingness to invoke aid in making it from others than members of the Church of England, that I have been led to this view of my duty." Another wrote: "Respecting the success of the enterprise I have little doubt. The result of the best scholarship of the Church in England and America will command assent, and the opposition will speedily subside." And a third one, likewise a bishop, who is esteemed by all denominations, expresses himself in this way: "I am glad that, as the revision in England was set on foot by a Convocation of the Church of England, and is proceeding mainly under such guidance and control, in constituting an American Committee, to co-operate, the work of formation has been given by the British Committee to a non-Episcopalian and to you". This will greatly help not only the all-sidedness of the work, but, in case it shall be desirable to introduce it into substitution for the present revision, will very materially prepare the way for such result."

Meanwhile Dr Schaff visited England in 1871, and was present by a special vote at one of the Sessions of the New Testament Company. Having thus become familiar with the method of procedure, he was able to make provision for the efficient co-operation of the American Companies. The result was that in December 1871 the following constitution was adopted for their guidance:

'I. The American Committee, invited by the British Committee engaged in the revision of the Authorized English Version of the Holy Scriptures to co-operate with them, shall be composed of Biblical scholars and divines in the United States.

'II. This Committee shall have the power to elect its officers, to add to its number, and to fill its own vacancies.

'III. The officers shall consist of a President, a Corresponding Secretary, and a Treasurer. The President shall conduct the official correspondence with the British revisers. The Secretary shall conduct the home correspondence.

'IV. New members of the Committee, and corresponding members, must be nominated at a previous meeting, and elected unanimously by ballot.

'V. The American Committee shall co-operate with the British Companies on the basis of the principles and rules of revision adopted by the British Committee.

'VI. The American Committee shall consist of two Companies, the one for the revision of the Authorized Version of the Old Testament, the other for the revision of the Authorized Version of the New Testament.

'VII. Each Company shall elect its own Chairman and Recording Secretary.

'VIII. The British Companies will submit to the American Companies, from time to time, such portions of their work as have passed the first revision, and the American Companies will transmit their criticisms and suggestions to the British Companies before the second revision.

'IX. A joint meeting of the American and British Companies shall be held, if possible, in London, before final action.

'X. The American Committee to pay their own expenses.'

In the summer of 1872 Dr Schaff again visited England and had further conference with members of the Revision Companies. In July of that year all the details of co-operation between the English and American Companies were arranged, the copies of the 'first and provisional revision,' so far as it was then completed, were forwarded to the American revisers for their private and confidential use.

[The Revised New Testament was published in May, 1881, and the Old Testament in May, 1885. The Revision of the Apocrypha was undertaken by four Committees, three formed by members of the New Testament Company and one by members of the Old Testament Company. Of the former, one, called the London Committee, consisted of the Bishops of Gloucester and Bristol, Salisbury, and St Andrew's, the Deans of Rochester and Lichfield, the Master of the Temple, Dr Angus and Prebendary Humphry. The Bishops of Salisbury and St Andrew's were unable to attend. This Committee undertook the revision of Ecclesiasticus. To the second, called the Westminster Committee, were nominated the Archbishop of Dublin, the Dean of Westminster, the Archdeacons of Dublin and Oxford, Dr Scrivener, Dr Brown, Principal Newth, and Dr Vance Smith. Dr Brown declined to serve. They revised the books of Tobit, Judith, and 1 Maccabees.

The third Committee, which met at Cambridge, consisted originally of the Bishop of Durham (Lightfoot), the Dean of Lincoln (Blakesley), Professors Hort, Kennedy, and Westcott, Dr Milligan, Dr Moulton, and Dr Roberts. The Bishop of Durham, the Dean of Lincoln and Professor Kennedy were unable to attend, and Dr Roberts was a corresponding member. They revised the books of Wisdom and 2 Maccabees. It does not appear from the minutes of the Committee that Dr Milligan took any part in the revision.

The fourth Committee, consisting of members of the Old Testament Company, also met at Cambridge. The following were appointed to serve. The Dean of Peterborough (Perowne), Professors Lumby and Robertson Smith, Mr (afterwards Professor) Bensly, Mr Cheyne, and Mr W. A. Wright. Dr Field was invited to assist in the formation of the text. The Dean of Peterborough and Mr Cheyne were unable to take part in the work, and the death of Dr Field in 1885 deprived the Committee of his assistance. They revised the following books: 1 and 2 Esdras, Esther, Baruch, Song of the Three Children, Susanna, Bel and the Dragon, and the Prayer of Manasses.

The Revised Version of the Apocrypha was published in 1896. In 1898 the Revised Version of the Old and New Testaments and Apocrypha was issued with marginal references. After the publication of the English edition of the Revised Version the American Revision Committee continued their organization in order to prepare an American recension of the English Revision. The result of their labours appeared in 1901.]

APPENDIX X.

Phrases in the Psalms marked in the Psalter of the Great Bible in smaller type as additions from the Vulgate.

Some of the additions made to the text of the Psalter from the Vulgate Latin are of interest: and, as copies of the Great Bible are not always accessible, it will be worth while to give a list of them. The fact that these additions form an integral part of the text in the Prayer-Book Psalter has frequently led to error; and even a writer who proposes to discuss the relation of the Bible and Prayer-Book Psalters as a scholar (Sir L. C. Lee Brenton), appears to be wholly ignorant of the original notation, which ought not indeed to have been abandoned in the reprint.

To sweare by the Lorde & to the Lord are ij. thiuges as it is sayd. ij. Paralip. xv. c.

By these sauers are vnderstāded Rulars or iudges: which in Luke xxij. are called graciouse Lordꝝ ij. Esdr. ix. e.

The Gates in the scripture do oft tymes signifie the places where the people dyd cōmenlye assemble, and where Iudgements were geuē and causes determyned: for in olde time were soche thynges done in the Gates. ij. Re. xvi. a.

The Repentaunce of God, is onely the chaungynge of the deade. And as the affection of mercy & of fatherly loue is attribute to God: euen so dothe the scripture attribute to God after his maner of speache the affeccyon of Anger and of furye & of repētaunce also: for men can not other wise speake of God. Gene. vi. a.

The rentynge of his clothes was a signe of great sadnesse, & also of great anger for the zele of the Lorde, as in Mat. xxvi. g And beneth iij. f. and xiiij. f.

Here it apereth that to be sett vpon the seate, sygnifyeth to bere rule and to haue dominyon or iurisdiccion, as in many places here after and Matth. xix. d.

The scripture of custome nameth the Goddes of the gentyles by infamouse names as in the Psal. cv. e. Beelzebub sygnifyeth y<sup>e</sup> God of

By the right hand is vnderstande the false & wycked confidence in worckes, & by y<sup>e</sup> left, desperacyō. To turne asyde or adde to y<sup>e</sup> right hand is, to adde that to the worde of god, which God neuer cōmaunded. To turne a syde or bowe to the left hande is, to take awaye frō the worde of God, or to do that which is forbiddē. As it is written in Deuter. xxviii. b. & Iosue. xxij. b.

Some reade: For he is readier to heare (vnderstād, thy worde) thā to reseaue the sacrifices that foles geue.

The headings of the chapters are taken almost literally from Lefèvre.

To vyset doth often synifye for to take vengeance, as in Exodi. xxxij. g.

APPENDIX XII. (p. 117.)

Gibson Papers, Vol. 5, No. 41 (Lambeth Palace Library).

ABOUT THE TRANSLATORS JULY 22. 1604

1. Dn. Westminster was Lancelot Andrews, borne in London, brought up in Ratcliffe Schole under Mr. Mulcaster; sent to Pembroke Hall, was y<sup>e</sup> first who had exhibitō of Dr. Watts schollerships. He was M<sup>r</sup> of Pembroke, D.D. 1590 (I thinke) Exceedingly commended by Dr. Whitaker. He wrote divers things. Was

Died 1626, Septemb. 21, aged 71.

2. John Overall Dn. of Paul<sup>r</sup>, was borne at Hadleigh, Suffolke: of Trinity Colledge. M<sup>r</sup> of Catherine Hall. Regius Professor of Divinity, when Dr. Whitaker died about 1596. Bishop of  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Coventry} \\ \text{Norwich} \end{array} \right.$  Died 1618. I have not seen anything of his in print. Both these at Hamptō Court Conference. Neither of thē appeared against Barret 1595, when all the Heads (but these 2 and the M<sup>r</sup> of Clarehall whyther Dr.  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Bing or} \\ \text{Smith} \end{array} \right.$ ) did.

3. Dr. Adrian Saravia was a French man borne (as I have heard): Prebend in Westminster.

Since his works new printed in Latin ad annum 1611, as Jus Divinū page 17 tells us. He was a married mā, but never had child. His wife was remaried to Dr. Robt. Hill. Francis Dee Bp. of Peterboroug was his foster-son (as I haue heard), i.e. the Dr. put him to Westm. Schole. Jno. Theme (?) procured him chosen into your Trinity Colledge.

4. Dr. Clarke Cant. His workes I have seene in a thin folio. I take it his name was Richard, but—quaere.

5. Dr. John Layfeild was D.D. 1603 (I take it), {preacher parson
at Clement Danes.

6. Who is not in yours is Dr. Teigh. I have a catechism made by Williã Tye dedicated to Prince Henry 1612, wherein he mentiōs that Christōpher Tye his grandfather was Tutour to Edw. 6. Christopher Tye was Dr. Musick 1545. This is all of him. I suppose Will Tye might be chapleyn to y<sup>e</sup> Prince, quaere tom... (illegible.)

7. Mr. Francis Burleigh. There was a B.D. 1594 of this name; after D.D. 1607, but whyther the same or not I know not.

8. Mr. Jeffery King, Sussex Coll. Regall. There was one Mr. King a Cambridge-mā, parson of Warbleton, 4 miles from Battell Abbey to y<sup>e</sup> west. Mr. Joseph Bennet of my yeare, whē he came to cōmence told me that he married Mr. King's D<sup>ter</sup>, and that he was at Harlettō for his father in law. Mr. King was Yorkshire borne as he told me also.

9. Mr Richard Tomsō, Clare hall. There was a B.D. 1593. Noe more doe I know.

10. Mr. Bedwell. I never heard of him in any place but in this besines.

1. Dr. Richardson was Dr. John Richardsō borne at Lintō 7 miles from Cambridge, to which he gaue y<sup>e</sup> old pulpit at S<sup>te</sup>. Maryes whē that which now stands was set up in August 1618. Of him see Catalog. Mss. Peterhouse and Trinity. He died Aprile 21, 1625. Dr. Walford preached his funerall sermō, buried in your Chappell. Gave part of his Library to Emā Colledg.

My copy places this mā in y<sup>e</sup> second place after Mr. Lively, and calls him Mr. and not Dr. Richardson. If myne be him, thē there might be some other Mr. Richardson, and thē why not Mr. Alexander Richardsō? quaere.

2. Mr. Edward Lively, Coll. Trin. fellow, profess<sup>r</sup> Hebrew.

3. Mr. Laurance Chadertō, Cheshire borne, came to Cambridge aged 20 years, 7th of the queen of Xth Colledg, fellow there. Made Master of Emā by the Founder himselfe (who (as Mr. Acknell told vs in his sermō 2 Oct. 1622, the day they chose Dr. Prestō M<sup>r</sup> Emā) the founder told him, that if he would not be M<sup>r</sup> and take that charge, He would desist frō his purpose of Founding the Colledge. He was lecturer a long time at Clements, till he was D.D. 1613. Then succeeded by Mr. Bentley. He was one of the 4 at Hampton Court Conference for y<sup>e</sup> ministers who petitioned y<sup>e</sup> King; but with noe satisfactiō to thē. I have heard, Mr. Humphrey Fen wrote to him, not to betray their cause, as Mr. Fen told a friend of mine, and he told mee: who also (Mr. Fen I mean) lamented that they should have 4 men to act for thē, whereof 3 never tooke the cause to Heart. Dr. Chadertō died Nov. 1640.

4. Mr. Francis Dillingham Soc. Coll. Chr. There was one of this name B.D. 1599. I make account that this mā you seeke for was he who was psō of Dean in Bedfordshire. He died 1648. In my Catalogue of silenced ministers I find one Mr. Dillingham in Lincolne Diocese, whyther this or some other man I cannot tell, but I am informed his name was Thomas, younger brother To Francis. Francis was psō of Wildon in Bedfordsh., a single man all his time: gave his estate to his brother Mr. Thomas He died 30 years ago. Wrote divers bookes. The father of Mr. Dillingham of Barnwell, and Bartō Segrave was a 3rd brother to Francis and Thomas.

5. Mr. Thomas Harrisō, fellow and vice-M<sup>r</sup> of Trinity. B.D. but what yeare I dare not say, there were 2 or 3 of that name about his standing. He lived all his time in y<sup>e</sup> Colledge. I have heard that when Robt Earle of Essex came to Trinity Colledge, as a student, That this Mr. Harrisō was father of the Freshmē that yeare, and cōmended that son of his. quare.

6. Mr. Robt. Spalding. Fellow Coll. Johan. B.D. 1600. Hebrew Professor.

7. Mr. Roger Andrews, Brother to Launcelot Andrews, borne in Londō. Fellow Pembroke.

Vicar of { Chigwell in Essex. } Prebend. { Chichester } B.D. 1604.
                  { Cowfeild in Sussex. }                   { Southwell. }

D.D. 1609. Master of Jesus Colledg. Put out there as I take it vpō complaint of y<sup>e</sup> fellows to y<sup>e</sup> King.

8. Mr. Bridges, as your copy hath it. Mine reads him Bing, and well as I conceive, This was Mr., or rather Dr. Andrew Bing, 1603 D.D. Whē I came to Cambridge He was profess<sup>r</sup> Heb. of Trinity Colledg. He used to sit next to Dr. Richardson, a tall mā of a smiling countenance. Archdn. Norwich. He was living in the beginning of the Parlem<sup>t</sup>. Left Cambridge 1621.

Whē we sate in the Scholes for Bachelers { Mr. Medcalfe
Mr. Cheney } stōod
Mr. Creiton }

to be Hebrew Lecturers, This man was 1617 parsō of Broughton in Buckinghamshire, but he left it before his death.

1. Dr. John Harding was parsō of Halsey in Oxfordsh. 4 miles frō Oxon. toward y<sup>e</sup> east. Hebrew professor, and 6 or 7 yeares before his death president of Magdalene. He was married. His wife died July last in Dr. Reignolds' lodgings in Corpus Christi, Mrs. Reignolds was their only daughter. The Dr. died 1617.

2. Dr. John Reignolds, Devonsh. of Corpus X<sup>ti</sup> Coll. Fellow. Thē upon exchange with Dr. Will. Cole, who was president, he succeeded him in y<sup>e</sup> Colledg and Dr. Cole was Dn. of Lincolne. He wrote divers things. A sermon of his I haue, wherein I perceive he had knowledge of the Italiā and French tongues besides his vniversity languadges. He died May 21. 1607, buried May 25 with much honour and lamentation. See Abel rediuius. A letter of his to S<sup>r</sup> Francis Knowles that noe Scripture makes difference betw. a Bp. and presbiter ag. Dr. Bancroft's sermō is famous.

3. Dr. Thomas Holland, Shropshire, of Exeter Colledg. fellow, then Rectour. Regius professour of Divinity above 20 years, that is frō Dr. Humphreys death, 1589, till he died himselfe, 1612. He was noe man for episcopacy. In the Act 1608 he concluded, quōd episcopatus nō sit ordo distinctus a presbiteratu, eoq<sup>ue</sup> superio<sup>r</sup> jure divino. He was succeeded in his 2 Universitye preferments by 2 most learned mē, Dr. Robt. Abbot in the chaire, and Dr. John Prideaux in his rectorship and after in the chaire. See more of him Abel rediuius: Mr. Sam. Clerk's lives: and Mr. Hugh Holland's lives.

4. Dr. Rich. Killby, Leicestersh., is omitted in your copy. He was D<sup>n</sup>. D. fell. of Lincolne Coll. Hebrew profess<sup>r</sup> after Dr. Harding; was Rector of Lincol. Colledg. Died about such time that King James did. Dr. Bret preached his funerall.

5. Mr. Miles Smith, against whose name you write Hereford, I thus make it out; Mr. Miles Smith, Canon Residentiary in Hereford. I have heard that he was of Corp. Xth Coll<sup>e</sup>. quære comē. He was 1612 made Bp. Gloster. See Goodwin de presulibus tittle Gloster.

6. Mr. Bret was borne in London, son of Robt. Bret. Sir John Bret was Mr. Bret's elder brother. fellow of Lincoln Colledg; tutour to our Mr. Robt. Boltō. He proceeded D.D. whē he left Oxford he was made psō of Quaintō in Buckinghamshire. He was a married mā, daughters of his 2 or 3 I have seen. His wife was a citizē's daughter of Oxford. After her Husband's death (which was about Easter 1636,) she came and lived in Northampton. If you remember: you, Mr. Encen (?) and she were susceptores to Sam. Ball, 1642. She died 1643 in Northampton, caried to be buried by her husband. Dr. Bret reported that the Bps. altered very many places that the translators had agreed upō: He had a note of y<sup>e</sup> places.

7. Mr. Faireclough. Enquiring after him, I find by two Oxford mē that Dr. Hen. Fearley was called Fearley alias Farclough. The Dr. cannot be the man you seeke. He was too young. He proceeded Dr. 1617, and therefore was little above 20 years old, when the Bibles Translation was put forward. Therefore Ile tell you what I met with all els where, viz. in my wiuēs Brother's House, in a little Booke which relates y<sup>e</sup> County of Suffolke divided into 12 or 14 Classes. In Clare or Sudbury Classis there is mentiō of Mr. Fairclough. He is Minister of Kattō, or as in the mapp it is writtē Kediton, 2 miles frō Haverill to y<sup>e</sup> north, the same Town where Sir Nathan<sup>l</sup>. Barnardiston lives. He had (it may be hath) sons, scholars in Cambridge as I heard.

1. Dr. John Duport, Lecestershire borne. He died a little before I came to Cambridge. Dr. Bollē died Jan. 28, 1617. This Dr. made verses for Bollen, but fell sicke, died, and was buried himselfe before the other, as I heard in Emā Collē. One sermon of this Dr. I have heard of, but never saw it.

2. Dr. Will. Braithwait. Norwich mā borne. fellow of Emā B.D. 1593. M<sup>r</sup> of Caius Colledg. He was the 2nd Dr. for seniority whē I came to Cambridg. Died Vice-Chancellor Feb. 15. 1618.

3. D<sup>r</sup> Jeremy Ratchiffe, Col. Tr. C. Soc. I find nothing of him but that a D.D. cōmencē 1588.

4. Mr. Wood, Immanuel. It should be as mine hath it Mr. Sam. Ward, Immanuel. Who was borne in the Bp<sup>rick</sup> Durham. Fellow Emā. B.D. 1603. M<sup>r</sup> of Sidney. To speake of him to you, is nedlesse for me. Yet one small thing I wil add, that is this, He made y<sup>e</sup> Diall over the great gate in Eman. Colledg. He died 1644.

5. Mr. Andrew Downes. fellow Johns Coll. greek profess<sup>r</sup> all my time, and long before, for there is but one between him and Mr. Barthol. Doddingtō, who was professour in y<sup>e</sup> very beginning of queen Elisab.

6. Mr. John Boyse, C. Joh. This mā was neither Will. Boys, Proctor of Clarhall, 1599; nor yet elegant Dr. Boyse, D<sup>n</sup> of Canterbury; but a 3<sup>d</sup> B.D. 1590. Mr. Palmer tells me that this Mr. Boys was prebend in Ely, and that he lived in y<sup>e</sup> isle. Was living till within these 5 or sixe yeares.

7. Mr. Robt. Ward. Coll. Regall. I have nothing of him. and Kgs. Col. Catal. A. 1588.

1. D<sup>n</sup> of X<sup>t</sup> X<sup>h</sup> was Thomas Ravis D.D., borne he was at Maldon in Surrey. a Westminster scholler, frō thence sent to Oxford. He took all Academicall degres, and enjoyed all Collegiat dignities, ōnibus perfunctus est dignitatibus, i.e. was student, canon, and D<sup>n</sup> of X<sup>t</sup> X<sup>h</sup>. Chaplein to ArchBp. Whitgift. ViceChancellor of Oxford twice. Bp. of Gloster 1604, and of London 1607. He died Decemb. 14, 1609, as appears by his monument in Pauls, where he lies buried. He was a great mā ag. y<sup>e</sup> ministers who petitioned King James.

2. Dn. Winchester was Dr. George Abbot borne in Surrey at Guilford; younger Brother to Robt. Abbot. Chaplein to Thom. Earl Dorset 1<sup>de</sup> Tresurer. Master of University Coll. Vice-Chancellor 1603. Bp. of Coventry, of London, and ArchBp. all in a yeare and quarters space. He made a chorographically descriptiō of y<sup>e</sup> world. He wrote ag: Dr. Hill a papist. He died August 4, 1633. A sermon of his at y<sup>e</sup> Earle of Dorsets funerall I have: not anything els.

4. Dn. of Winsor was Giles Tomsō D.D., all these three at Hamptō Court Conference. He was made Bp. of Gloster 1611, but sate not above a yeare. of C. C. C. in Oxford but quære.

3. Dn. of Worcester. Is not in my Copy at all, but in yours it is as it seemes. Ag. the title you write Dr. Lake. Here I have a doubt (though I grant that y<sup>e</sup> Dn. of Worster was employed) that Dr. Lake was not y<sup>e</sup> man. I deny not but Dr. Lake might be Dn. Vigorn. but at this time, 1603 or 1604, I cānot see how possible. Reason is, 1597, Dr. Rich. Eedes was Dn.; whē he died Dr. Henry Parry succeeded; when he preferred Dr. James Montague came; when he made Bp. Aprill 19, 1618, Then came Dr. Lake. I take it Dr. Henry Parry was Dn. at this time. He was Corp. Xth Coll. Chaplein to Henry Earl Pembroke, to whō he dedicated his translation of Vrsins Catechisme. He was after Chaplein to the Queene, wayted that very March whē she died. See Com. Prefer. to Q. Elis. Made Bp. Gloster 1607, and then of Worster 1610.

Dr. Arthur Lake was Warden of New Colledg. Master of the Hospitall of Crosse near Winchester. Vice-Chancell. Oxford that yeare when Wadham Colledg was built. He layd the first stone and 2 Halfe-penies under it, made a taking speech, sayth my Authour who heard it, in cōmendatiō of good workes. 1616 He was Bp. of Bath and Wells. My Tutour Dr. Stoughtō had institution into Artus (?) frō him and mūch respect as he reported, whē he came back to y<sup>e</sup> Colledge. 1624 in August.

5. Mr. Savill, was suerly S<sup>r</sup> Henry Savill, who might be fellow of New Colledg, but not Warden. He was anno 1598 Warden of Mertō Colledg I am sure. A great greciā witnes his editiō of Chrysostome, and a mathematiciā. He erected 2 Mathematical lectures in Oxford; read thē both himselfe awhile. His first lectufers were Dr. Bambridge and Mr. Briggs. Mr. John Wallis of Emā Coll. is now Savile geometry reader. Sir Henry Savill was also Provost of Eaton Colledge, wherein he was succeeded by Sir Henry Wotton.

6. Mr. Harman. My copy calls him Mr. Harmer. There was one Harmā vnder scholm<sup>r</sup> in Magdalene, but he will be too young to be the man you seeke for.

7. Dr. Perin was canō X<sup>t</sup> X<sup>b</sup>, D.D. greek Professor. Died an old mā in Oxford.

8. Mr. Ravins, or as mine hath him Mr. Ravens. I haue nothing of him.

---

1. Dn. Chester was Dr. Will. Barlow B.D. 1594, D.D. 1599 of Trinity Colledg, Camb. I think. He was Chaplen to ArchBp. Whitgift: wrote the Hampton Court Conference. Translated several feuelyes (? feuilles) of Lavater which I have. Wrote some thing to y<sup>e</sup> disparadgment of y<sup>e</sup> silenced Ministers, whereof they complaine to K. James in a supplicatiō of theirs to y<sup>e</sup> King which I have. He was Bp. Rochester, thē of Lincolne, died 1613. His father was Bp. of Chichester, of whō that place in Ascham's preceptor I thinke ment, p. 51, "A Bp. that now liveth, a good mā, whose Judgment in religiō I better like thā opinion in pfectness in other learning." However this Dr. was well seene in greek as his father little. He was a mā of strong memory.

2. Dr. Hutchinson.

3. Dr. J. Spencer. Author geneal. There was a Dr. Spencer who succeeded Dr. Reignolds in Corp. X<sup>ti</sup> Coll. presidentship, who had some publick place in y<sup>e</sup> Vniversity, Lady Margaret professor, I suppose. Author geneal. I understand not what that means. The genealogicall....

ACTA SYNODI NATIONALIS...DORDRECHTIANAE

HABITAE 1618.

DORDRECHTI. 4to, 1620.

Sessione Septima

xx Novembris die Martis ante meridiem.

[ACCOUNT BY SAMUEL WARD.]

Modus quem Theologi Angli in versione Bibliorum sunt secuti :

Theologi Magnae Britanniae, quibus non est visum tantae questioni subitam & inopinatam responsionem adhibere, officii sui esse judicârunt, praematura deliberatione habita, quandoquidem facta esset honorifica accuratissima translationis Anglicanae mentio, à Serenissimo Rege Jacobo, magna cum cura, magnisque sumptibus nuper editae, notum facere huic celeberrimae Synodo, quo consilio, quaque ratione sacrum hoc negotium a Serenissima ejus Majestate praestitum fuerit.

Primo, in opere distribuendo hanc rationem observari voluit. Totum corpus Bibliorum in sex partes fuit distributum : cuilibet parti transferendae destinati sunt septem vel octo viri primarii Linguarum peritissimi.

Duae partes assignatae fuerunt Theologis quibusdam Londinensibus ; quatuor vero partes reliquae divisae fuerunt aequaliter inter utriusque Academiae Theologos.

Post peractum a singulis pensum, ex hisce omnibus duodecim selecti viri in unum locum convocati integrum opus recognoverunt et recensuerunt. Postremo Reverendissimus Episcopus Wintonensis, Bilsonus, una cum doctore Smitho, nunc Episcopo Glocestrensi viro eximio et ab initio in toto hoc opere versatissimo, omnibus mature pensitatis et examinatis, extremam manum huic versioni posuerunt.

Leges Interpretibus praescriptae fuerunt hujus modi :

Primo, cautum est vt simpliciter nova versio non adornaretur, sed vetus, & ab Ecclesia diu recepta ab omnibus naevis & vitiis purgaretur ; idque hunc in finem, ne recederetur ab antiqua translatione, nisi originalis textus veritas, vel emphâsis postulare.

Secundo, ut nullae annotationes margini apponerentur : sed tantum loca parallela notarentur.

Tertio, vt ubi vox Hebraea vel Graeca geminum idoneum sensum admittit ; alter in ipso contextu, alter in margine exprimeretur. Quod itidem factum, ubi varia lectio in exemplaribus probatis reperta est.

Quarto, Hebraismi et Graecismi difficiliores in margine repositi sunt.

Quinto, in translatione Tobit et Judithae, quandoquidem magna discrepantia inter Graecum contextum et veterem vulgatam Latinam editionem reperietur, Graecum potius contextum secuti sunt.

Sexto, ut quae ad sensum supplendum ubivis necessario fuerunt contextui interserenda, alio, scilicet minuscuro, caractere, distinguerentur.

Septimo, ut nova argumenta singulis libris, & novae periochae singulis capitibus praefigerentur.

Denique, absolutissima Genealogia et descriptio Terrae sanctae, huic operi conjungeretur.

Then followed a discussion.

Sententiam suam...prolixè exposuerunt.

Three Religious Leaders of Oxford and Their Movements:

John Wycliffe    John Wesley    John Henry Newman

By S. PARKES CADMAN

Cloth, 8vo, $2.50

This book deals with three great Englishmen, great Christians, great Churchmen, and loyal sons of Oxford, who, in Dr. Cadman's opinion, are the foremost leaders in religious life and activity that university has yet given to the world. "Many prophets, priests and kings," writes Dr. Cadman, "have been nourished within her borders, but none who in significance and contribution to the general welfare compare with Wycliffe, the real originator of European Protestantism; Wesley, the Anglican priest who became the founder of Methodism and one of the makers of modern England and of English-speaking nations; Newman, the spiritual genius of his century, who reinterpreted Catholicism, both Anglican and Roman."

"A great book . . . the theme is masterly . . . a piece of great and scholarly workmanship on a high and serious theme . . . it is the serious book of the year."—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

The Centennial History of the American Bible Society

By HENRY OTIS DWIGHT, LL.D.

Recording Secretary of the Society

In two volumes. Cloth, 12mo, $2.00

The American Bible Society was organized in May, 1816. Its work has been so interwoven with the development of the American republic that there will be felt a very general interest in this account of its one hundred years of existence. This has been prepared by the Recording Secretary, who, for many months, has been engaged in gathering the necessary data and in writing the narrative. The volume will be found full of information not only as to the history of the society but also as to the results achieved in its distribution of the Scriptures throughout this country and in the far ends of the earth.

The Gospel of Good Will as Revealed in Contemporary Christian Scriptures

THE LYMAN BEECHER LECTURES AT YALE UNIVERSITY FOR 1916

BY WILLIAM DEWITT HYDE

President of Bowdoin College and Author of "The Five Great Philosophies of Life," etc.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.50

This book goes straight to the heart of the Gospel to be preached and practiced—the Gospel that Christ expects men to be great enough to make the good of all affected by their action, the object of their wills, as it is the object of the will of God. "The Christian," President Hyde writes, "is not a 'plaster saint' who holds 'safety first' to be the supreme spiritual grace, but the man who earns and spends his money, controls his appetites, chooses peace or war and does whatever his hand finds to do with an eye single to the greatest good of all concerned. Sin is falling short of this high heroic aim. . . . To the Christian every secular vocation is a chance to express Good Will and sacrifice is the price he gladly pays for the privilege. . . . Christian character and Christian virtues will come not by direct cultivation but as by-products of Good Will expressed in daily life. The church is a precious and sacred instrument for transforming men and institutions into sons and servants of Good Will." These extracts indicate in a measure the trend of President Hyde's theme which he has treated fully and in a practical way that will appeal to all thinkers.

CHURCH PRINCIPLES FOR LAY PEOPLE

The Episcopal Church, Its Faith and Order

By GEORGE HODGES

Dean of the Episcopal Theological School

Cloth, 12mo, $1.25

This book is intended for three groups—the younger clergymen who will find in the analyses prefaced to the chapters material that will be valuable in their own teaching, members of confirmation classes who will be helped by the summaries which it contains, and persons who are desirous of knowing the doctrine and discipline of the Episcopal Church. The volume embodies the results of twenty years' experience in the instruction of students in the Episcopal Theological School. In the midst of many natural differences of emphasis and opinion those positions are indicated in this work in which most members of the Episcopal Church are substantially agreed.

Why Men Pray

By CHARLES LEWIS SLATTERY

Rector of Grace Church, New York City

Cloth, 12mo, $.75

Dr. Slattery defines prayer roughly as "talking with the unseen." In his book he does not argue about prayer but rather sets down in as many chapters six convictions which he has concerning it. These convictions are, first, that all men pray; second, that prayer discovers God, that, in other words, when men become conscious of their prayer they find themselves standing face to face with one whom in a flash they recognize as God; third, prayer unites men; fourth, God depends on men's prayer; fifth, prayer submits to the best; and sixth, prayer receives God.
